Christmas Stock.

Every florist is now thinking more or less about Christmas. It is good to think, but go slow on buying unless it be to secure some extra fine and scarce stock. In the matter of holly, etc., you have lots of time; 'tis better to wait and get the best than to rush and regret.

The question of a cheap pot cover is a very serious one to the plant trade; ordinary baskets come high, crepe paper gets mussed or wet and is often worse than nothing. In the interest of our readers we are always on the search, and down in the wholesale fruit market the other day we discovered what could be made the cheapest and a pretty cover. These were pot-shaped spill-baskets made for tomatoes or fruit; they are of all sizes and can be bought for from $3 per 100 up; of course they need to be painted, but that is a small item; for about 5 or 7 cents it is possible to get up a very pretty 6 or 8-inch cover. Of course there is, and will continue to be, a limited demand for fancy basket pot covers, but a stock of them comes high and the majority of people won't stand for it. Make all you can on your flowers and plants, the customer is willing to pay for them but not often for baskets.

Good, showy flowering plants will be popular this Christmas. Pans of dwarf poinsettias dressed with well berried holly and tied with a band of silk ribbon to match will be a quick seller. Speaking of poinsettias, there will be lots of them used at Christmas. Get the best; they ought to bring a good price. Cut flowers promise to be scarce next month; the weather has been against greenhouse crops for the great event. Berries were never so plentiful, and holly should be better than ever. We expect some shippers of wild smilax to ship their material in match boxes soon; there's less and less in their cases every year. It is early yet to see what we are going to get from Europe, but we will keep you posted on all that's good and novel in due time.

The palm and general decorative plant trade in and around New York is very good and promises to be a record breaker. Much of the trade at present is due to refilling house conservatories and general home decorations, but everything points to our having a fine season's trade. We are pleased to note that exterior winter decorations of shrubs are more in style than ever, though many of those seen are badly arranged and some of the conifers are too tender for northern winters.

Such a grand season for outdoor planting of trees, shrubs and herbaceous plants has never been known. If you have any of this work to do push it on at once. Don't forget the good, showy flowers; plant some around your place for show, and remember a shapely tree or shrub is a standing adv. for you. Sell off or throw away whatever is rubbishy in greenhouse stock. Nothing but the very best is the magnet for trade.

We notice that many small growers around the large cities have been doing quite a lot of wedding decorations this season. That is good, but to this section of our readers we would say don't undersell your city friend. It is not always the quantity of material you put in a house that counts, it's rather the way you arrange it.

Here's a subject every florist should know, some of them do; it's the value of a servant's friendship. There are but a few in this world who wear crowns but there's a vast army who'd like to, and whew, what a place this earth would be if the thin garb of insolent arrogance could hide the chunks of low stupidity. There are many in our business who deserve all the credit due to those who succeed, but few wish to remember the narrow, slippery planks they once walked; this all bears on our subject. There is no one with whom the florists deal that has more power or influence than the servant in the mansions of the wealthy, and what do they get in return? Let us look at the matter more clearly; you have a decoration in the house and want ladders, sheets, and lots of things, and you imagine these people are there to wait on you. You are late, or make a mess and allow them no time to clean. Perhaps you have a dinner decoration; you've been busy and are late, you know the result; or maybe you want to collect a bill. Perhaps the butler or housekeeper can order where he or she pleases. Yes, it's a serious matter any way you look at it. These people can make it warm or pleasant for you, and they deserve respect and consideration. A small plant, a few flowers, yes, a fair commission should be given them; you have to throw much more away on desperate and futile attempts to win trade.

Live and let live.

IVERA.

FLOWERS AT THE VICE-PRESIDENT'S FUNERAL.

J. H. Small & Sons, of Washington and New York, had charge of the flowers and decorations for the funeral of the late Garret A. Hobart, vice-president of the United States, who was laid to rest at Paterson, N. J., Nov. 25. Your readers will have seen details of the funeral in the great dailies, it is only our province to inform them of the flowers, which were many and very beautiful. Over one hundred designs were sent from all over the country, and they were of such a size and quality that makes it safe to say there were never so many flowers seen at a funeral in this part of the country before.

In our capacity as representative of The Florists' Review we were given special privilege to examine the floral tokens of respect, and though many of them had been sent from long distances and had been "made up" for days, still they were all beautiful. Of course there were many grades of work there, and an occasion like this gives great opportunities for study (we would be almost tempted to say that a walk through some large cemetery would be a good chance for some florists to learn the difference between good and bad work). But to return to our subject.

Though there were a few designs such as floral chairs, Faith, Hope and Charity, etc., which reminds you of the past, we noted with pleasure that the vast majority of the designs were wreaths and bunches. A well made standing cross of violets looked fine. Strange to say, there were few violets and chrysanthemums used in the work President McKinley sent a wreath of white carnations and orchids. There were two wreaths in which Golden Gate roses were the principal flowers—the rose is fine for this work.

An immense wreath of Asparagus Sprengeri and Dendrobium formosum giganteum we took to be the finest of all the work, though it was closely followed by a great double wreath of Cycas revoluta with a large cluster of mixed orchids. These wreaths were four and five feet in diameter and made a grand appearance. Three of the standing wreaths were over six feet in height and the same in diameter; they were of white and pink roses, the bases American Beauties. One of these huge wreaths was made to represent or signify "from childhood to old age." Pansies and spring flowers were followed by roses and violets and so on until a sheaf of wheat and oak leaves finished the circle; it was a good piece of work, full of beautiful sentiment in which art and love were blended together.

Another flat wreath was composed of white camellias and Dendrobium formosum. There were not very many cattleyas used, but there was a vast quantity of cypripediums and Dendrobium phalaenopsis. A large bunch of Papa Gontiers was an unusual sight, and then there were Beauties by the hundreds. You've seen the pancake wreaths of twenty years ago? Well, they were to be seen here, and what a contrast they were to the well made wreaths of today.

The designs completely filled the large receiving vault in which the body rests for the present. The exterior of the vault was prettily covered with evergreens. Thousands lined the roads, but never a word was heard, the rustle of falling leaves and the sighing of an avenue of tall weeping willows, the wreath-covered casket, and behind the president his cabinet and the leaders of the country. It was a picture not soon to be forgotten. A poor boy, a great man, the end of all.

The decorations of the church where the services were held were very beautiful. Wm. Trumpore, of Small's, had charge of all the work at Paterson. The walls of the church were delicately draped with southern smilax, the window sills were filled with white chrysanthemums and ferns, tall kentias were banked along in front of the altar, the pots of which were hidden with great clusters of white mums. The tone colors of the entire decoration were white and green, except in one feature, the baptismal font, which stood at the head of the casket; this font was filled with 150 large American Beauties. The whole of the decorations showed excellent taste and were greatly admired. IVERA.

then as they do a lily at Easter, but not quite in the same quantity. We have them now in a temperature of 65 at night and their bracts are spreading out to a foot across. Keep their heads syringed or they will get infested with mealy bug; and greenfly is very troublesome to them in the dark, close days, but that is easily prevented either by fumigating or vaporizing tobacco. The latter plan I like much better than the fumigating because it does not hurt nor even slightly check the tenderest growth. We often plainly see the injurious effects of tobacco smoke, then how much oftener occurs that which is not so plainly visible. The poinsettia is no longer handsome when its fine leaves are drooping and yellow. This arises from two causes, low temperature and impoverishment of the soil. Sixty to 65 degrees will do for the lowest temperature and liquid manure will do the rest. You cannot shift them after the middle of October and an unwieldy sized pot is out of the question for a commercial man. And as they are strong rooters they get exhausted and must have some liquid.

Azaleas have become one of our leading flowering plants. The plants that you have grown over summer force the best, but the newly imported plants can be had in for Christmas if proper treatment and proper selection of varieties is made. Deutsche Perle is of course the white; Vervaeneana is the beautiful variegated pink; and Simon Mardner the fine double red. They want abundance of water at the roots, syringing twice a day till the flower is expanded, and a good strong heat. If they must have it to open their flowers they will endure 70 degrees at night.

While speaking of azaleas, how very different is the treatment of those you want in flower at Easter. If we get a mild winter and Easter is late (this year it is the middle of April) it is difficult to keep some of the best varieties from being too early. So anything above freezing will do. But with all this low temperature you must keep them moist at the root and give an occasional syringing.

It is not so easy to get the imported lilacs in flower by the holidays, but if you can give them a steady heat of 90 and plenty of syringing you can do it in about three weeks. After New Year's they force easily and a few should be brought in every week.

NEW CRIMSON MUM.

We present herewith a life size engraving of the new crimson chrysanthemum, Malcolm Lamond, which we mentioned in our issue of Nov. 9, and which Mr. John Thorpe pronounced the best crimson since G. W. Childs.

The variety originated with Mr. James Niven, of the Thermal Vale Nursery, Oakland, Cal., and is the result of a cross between G. W. Childs and an unnamed seedling. The fact that blooms traveled across the continent and arrived in good condition

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Stock for Christmas.

There is always an inclination comes over you to bring in a lot of tulips and perhaps Dutch hyacinths with the view of having them for the holidays. Don't do it. They want a great heat, are consequently terribly forced and unsatisfactory. And if you do succeed in getting a 6-inch stem to them they will only sell after carnations, roses and other better flowers cannot be had. Don't bring in any tulips till New Year's. By that time they will be well rooted and in three weeks you will have good flowers.

The paper white narcissus is a most useful flower for Christmas. If you brought them in in good time to bring them along cool they will be all the better. In a cool house and fully developed is the way to have the paper white.

Romans force so easily that good spikes have been picked several weeks ago, but I never knew them to be with us too plentiful; and what the small grower is apt to forget is that you want a good supply for days after Christmas. If this bulbous stuff pays any time at all it is when there is a great demand for all flowers.

There is no need up to date of any covering of the soil under which are the flats of tulips and Von Sion bulbs. Supposing the surface of the flats have three inches of soil or ashes on them, which is plenty, then leave it uncovered to get the full benefits of the rains till severe frost comes. It is all the better to have a little frost enter the soil, and then it is a clean job to put on three or four inches of stable litter or leaves if you can keep the leaves from blowing away.

I like to have the Dutch hyacinths in pots in a frame and in addition to the covering of soil, ashes or tan bark and the manure, covered with sash. Hard freezing may not injure the bulbs, but they are just as well not frozen, and much more convenient to get at. And you won't have a lot of broken pots and pans, which, however much they may gladden the eye of the thrifty pot maker, make serious inroads into your exchequer. Somebody, perhaps everybody, wonders where the pins all go. Florists can wonder where all the pots go.

We expect the same good plant trade at Christmas that has marked this joyous season for several years past, and perhaps a still greater one. You should supply yourself with salable sizes of palms, dracaenas, araucarias, Boston fern, pandanus and rubbers. You are sure to want them and telegraphing for them at Christmas time is not satisfactory; you get what is left.

certainly speaks well for their staying qualities.

The variety is now in its second year, and habit and stem have proved very satisfactory. It promises to be an excellent commercial crimson sort.

WHERE ARE WE AT?

Noticing the articles in several recent issues regarding growers, commission men, buyers, etc., tempts me to write a few lines in response. It appears the most important part of the argument lies in the fact that nearly all other lines are enjoying the wave of prosperity and the florist is not getting his share of the general advance in prices.

Much is to be considered in connection with this subject. We are not recognized in the commercial world as an important factor. We stand alone as an entirely separate institution in our own class. While there is a continual clamor for stock and material in other lines now we must humbly wait until some social function or death call upon us for our products. The good times of old when anything and everything in the shape of a flower sold at a good living price are not with us now and there may be some truth in the assertion that our production is now somewhat in excess of demand. The growers claim their expenses are higher and their returns less. Much of the discontent of the grower, however, lies in himself. The most prosperous grower is one who takes a few moments' time to study the market at frequent intervals.

Most growers ship in their stock promiscuously regardless of grade and then make an estimate on the quantity they shipped and what it ought to bring. Figuring this way they will find returns usually below their estimates. If stock was properly graded in 1sts, 2nds and 3rds it would save considerable rehandling and also the depreciation in the count of the grower and commission man, and returns would be the prevailing market prices according to grade. While it is difficult to maintain prices at times when stock is plentiful, still much may be due to low prices at such times by the commission man endeavoring

While it is difficult to maintain prices at times when stock is plentiful, still much may be due to low prices at such times by the commission man endeavoring to get the other fellow's customer at the grower's expense.

The fakir also comes in for his share in recent discussions. He now stands side by side with the aristocratic buyer at the commission man's counter. As he is apparently here to stay he must be recognized. As the grower's stock varies from good to bad throughout the season he at all times expects the commission man to look out for his interests and the only recourse is the fakir when the stock is off. While the fakir consumes an enormous lot of stock which probably would otherwise be lost, still he ought to be kept in his place. The wholesaler should keep him where he belongs by only selling him such stock as no respectable dealer would sell. In this way it would leave an argument for the florist to his customers in the difference of his stock and the fakirs' should it be necessary. If we give the fakir an equal chance with the aristocratic buyer, then soon everything will be Greek to us. The assumption that the world owes us a living may contain some truth, but with the present state of affairs we'll be owing the world to live.

CHARLIE'S UNCLE.

ROSE NOTES.

There is one thing connected with cutting that I neglected to mention in my last; it is the implement with which the operation is performed. Some growers prefer a knife, others shears. I am partial to a pair of small shears, as I think the bloom can be severed from the plant without the amount of pulling that will occur with a knife unless great care be taken. There are a number of kinds of shears in the market that hold the bloom after cutting. I have tried some of them, but have not found any thoroughly successful. Whatever is used, knife or shears, see that it is very keen and keep it so at all times.

The next thing to be considered is a suitable place to keep the cut blooms until they are marketed. The best place to keep the cut blooms is a cool, clean, well ventilated cellar where nothing else save flowers is kept. Of course on the large places there should be an ice house with regular cooling rooms, and these, with the ordinary cellar of the small place, should be fitted up so the work of caring for the blooms can be properly done. There should be a room attached where the sorting and packing is done. In it should be a commodious table on which to grade up the blooms, with waste boxes for the reception of all bad petals and leaves that may be picked off, drawers for keeping various articles required in packing, plenty of boxes of the proper shape and sizes for the different stock to be shipped, rolls of paper of convenient size as experience shows is best suited to your needs.

The cellar should be kept scrupulously clean and be supplied with water and perfect drainage. An abundance of vases of various sizes should always be at hand, and these should be given a thorough washing frequently as they soon become slimy. The water should be changed every day. In setting the vases of flowers in the cellar arrange them so those that have to be taken out first are in the front so there will be no brushing against those that are to remain longer. A. O. T.

THRIPS ON ROSES.

How can I rid my roses of thrips? They disfigure the buds so they are unfit to sell. When the buds open I find from one to a dozen of these insects in each. W. H. W.

If W. H. W. will fumigate every night for a couple of weeks I think he will rid his houses of thrips. Fumigate one night with tobacco stems and the next night with ground red pepper. A handful of the red pepper sprinkled over a shovelful of red hot coals will be enough for a house 100 to 150 feet long and 25 feet wide.

The shovel should be carried behind you through the house to avoid inhaling the fumes. A. O. T.

ART AT FLOWER SHOWS.

Editor Florists' Review: In your current issue we note with interest and amusement some of the observations by Ivera upon "art at flower shows." Your correspondent has dilated with his usual eloquence upon several well timed topics, subjects that deserve our earnest consideration. Regarding the grouping of plants at flower shows your correspondent speaks very ably, but right here I would like to say somewhat in defense of the exhibitor.

The cone-shaped mound has become a stereotyped figure, but is this entirely the fault of the exhibitor? We have attended a good many flower shows and have also erected mounds at several, but that was not always our fault. On entering the show room with our plants we have, without exception, been shown the circle, or semi-circle, in which we had to artistically arrange our exhibit. Now, sir, it may be possible to artistically dress a pig, but really when one has to arrange plants—which in themselves are five or six feet high—in a circle, how is it possible to do this so that each flower can be seen if they be not somewhat elevated in the center?

By the by, artistic arrangement is very seldom called for where a group of chrysanthemums are concerned, the reading of the schedule usually being: "For best group of chrysanthemums to cover so many feet." We therefore arrange our groups so that the best side of the flower will catch the judge's eye; this is the growers' lookout; quality in flower, stem and foliage being all that is usually called for, and with all due deference to Ivera I think it is the grower and not the artist that is the best judge in this case. But I would like to see reform and I think societies are wrong in confining exhibitors to circles and semi-circles; exhibitors ought to be allowed to choose the form that suits their tastes.

Regarding "the carriage house rehearsal," we can with wonderful accuracy read between the lines, and in our several attempts at mound building, though we may have gained little of artistic knowledge, we have learned at least one thing: to try the thing at home first. We very vividly recall a ride of thirty miles on a very cold morning some time ago, on a wagon containing the material for a mound which had not previously been rehearsed, and to our dismay we found before we were finished that all our artistic skill could not stretch our quantity to cover the desired space. It is a very simple arithmetical problem to tell the quantity of square bricks that are required for a certain number of feet, but when we are dealing with a miscellaneous collection of 6, 7, 8 and 9-inch pots, with one, two or three flowers each, the case is somewhat different, and I say again, with some experience and former vexation: "Let us rehearse by all means. In the carriage house, if need be."

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

As has been announced, Saturday was the last date for regular meetings of the C. S. A. committees. To provide for late seedlings it has been the custom to meet on Saturdays when requested. Those having late blooms to show can arrange for a special meeting by addressing the chairman of the committees, as follows:

A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.

Eugene Dailedouze, Flatbush, L. I., N. Y.

A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O.

Jas. Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill.

Notice should be given the chairman at least two days before they are shown.

Work of the Committees, Nov. 28, 1899.

NEW YORK.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited the following three varieties: Stellata, a rich yellow Japanese variety, scored both scales 95 points. White Bonnaillon, a white Incurved, scored commercial scale 89 points. Pluma, a light pink hairy Inc. Jap., scored commercial scale 80 points.

BOSTON.—The following three varieties were exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son: Pluma, scored exhibition scale 86 points. Lavender Queen, a deep lavender pink variety of the Jap. Ref. type, scored commercial scale 92, exhibition scale 95 points. Intensity, a crimson Japanese variety, scored commercial scale 94, exhibition scale 90 points.

PHILADELPHIA.—Edward Salyer, Wilkes Barre, Pa., exhibited Mrs. Edward Salyer, a white Jap. Incurved, which scored commercial scale 89, exhibition scale 87 points. The following were shown by Nathan Smith & Son: White Bonnaillon, scored commercial scale 89 points; Stellata, scored both scales 88 points; Lavender Queen scored commercial scale 83, exhibition scale 82 points; Intensity, scored commercial scale 87, exhibition scale 82 points; Pluma, scored commercial scale 86, exhibition scale 85 points.

CINCINNATI.—Mrs. J. G. Robinson, Santa Clara, Cal., exhibited Margaret Enright, Japanese, white shaded lemon, scored commercial scale 89 points.

CHICAGO.—Nathan Smith & Son exhibited the following: Intensity, scored exhibition scale 82 points; Pluma, scored exhibition scale 83 points; White Bonnaillon, scored commercial scale 85 points; Stellata, scored commercial scale 92 points.

NEW YORK.

It is a pleasure to once in a while report good trade and much brighter prospects. Wall street is the financial pulse of the country, and New York, floriculturally speaking, is the main spring of trade on this continent. Some there are to be sure who still complain, aye, will die complaining, but nevertheless business is good and will be better. Cut flower crops have shortened up somewhat, but 'tis better now than later on. Chrysanthemums are on the wane, but other and more valuable flowers are coming in.

We have met several large plant growers who say this, so far, is the best season they ever had. Extra fine decorative stock is not very plentiful and the season has not properly commenced yet. No, there are no dukes or princesses going to be married here this year, but it is a fact that such folks do not always spend the most money for decorations; their glory originates in the newspapers. There is enough of prosperity to guarantee a vast amount of money being spent for flowers, so stir yourself and catch your share.

As for new stores and stands in New York, don't mention it. Every time you ride up an avenue you may notice a new florist. This is particularly the case with Columbus avenue. At Seventy-second street we see Giatras has taken in another store; this will make his perhaps the largest florist's store in the city. We wonder whose money this is. You remember the terrible failure there a year ago? All the leading tradespeople lost money and yet, and yet, they are able to continue and enlarge.

We are informed that a new concern will shortly open at Seventy-fourth street and Columbus avenue; there must be good trade on the West Side.

Though very little greenhouse stock is seen in the auction rooms these days, still business is very good there and vast quantities of nursery stock are disposed of at fair prices.

We very much regret to have to report that Mrs. Burns, wife of Alex. S. Burns, of Woodside, is dangerously ill with pneumonia.

The daily papers have been giving us startling accounts of fatal accidents and other misfortunes to Mr. R. L. Cottonet, proprietor of the Rosary Flower Co. It is true that Mr. Cottonet received a shake up on the hunting grounds at Westbury, but he is all right again and we are glad of it, for whatever else may be connected with that concern he at least is a perfect gentleman.

A call from the city prevented our reporting the last meeting of the New York Gardeners' Society, which was held at the Grand Central Palace, Nov. 18. The Florists' Review prize, Scott's Florists' Manual, was awarded to Wm. Scott, president of the society, for a display of thirty varieties of chrysanthemums. Charles Webber and A. Welsing also made interesting exhibits, which were certificated. The nomination of officers took place at this meeting, but we'll tell you who's elected.

We're all peaceful here; nobody's been kilt lately, and for scandal we're no school.

They who try to be authorities on prices are only joking; such a thing is impossible in New York, and to prevent indignation meetings in our rural districts we avoid the subject unless once in a while. But what we would like to say is this, that much of the finest stock coming into New York at present can be seen at Thomas Young's, and it will be there till long after the holidays.

There were some strange faces up at the bowling alleys Monday night. It's funny how long it takes some folks to get around. Here are the scores:

PHILADELPHIA.

Business has been exceptionally good the past week, both in cut flower and foliage plants and particularly so in the latter, which we believe is a little ahead of last year. Roses have been somewhat scarce the past week; also good double violets.

Prices.

Beauties, $1.50 to $6 per doz., fancy $8; Liberty, $25 for best; Kaiserins, $4 to $6, fancy $8 to $10; Brides, Maids and Meteors, $4 to $6, fancy $8; La France, $4 to $5; Perles, $3 to $6. Carnations, common, $1 to $1.50, fancy $2; E. Crocker, $5 per 100; valley, $3 to $4, fancy $5; narcissus, $3 to $4; violets, single 50 cents, double $1 to $1.50; mums, ordinary $1, fancy $2.50 per doz.; mignonette, $2 to $4; asparagus, 50 cents; adiantums, $1; smilax, 15 cents per string.

Notes.

It is rumored that the Greeks are going to open a wholesale cut flower house in this city. They intend to buy direct from the growers, making yearly contracts with them. We believe this will have a decided effect on some of our wholesalers from the fact that the Greek will be satisfied to do business on a smaller margin. No doubt they will do a big business with the street fakir.

Visitors.

Our visitors this week were: Marshall Clark, New York; Julius Roehrs, Carlton Hill, N. J.; Samuel Feast, Baltimore; C. L. Dole, Lockport, N. Y.; F. A. Fairbrother, Providence, R. I., and W. C. Krick, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Market.

There has been no marked change in the condition of the market since last reports. Chrysanthemums have shortened up and better prices are obtained for roses and carnations.

There is no overstock of anything just now and the chances are that prices for Thanksgiving week will go up to $6 and $8 per 100 for Brides, Meteors, Carnots and Bridesmaids; that is, for first class stock, with seconds from $3 to $5. Perles and Woottons, $5 to $6, and scarce at that. First class stock in American Beauties is also very scarce and price will go up as high as $6 per dozen. Short stemmed stock is now selling from $8 to $12.50.

Carnations have taken a jump and fancy stock is selling from $3 to $4; common from $2 to $2.50. They were quite plentiful last week, but are now sold out clean. Good red very scarce. Scotts, Daybreak and any kind of white are fine and sell well.

Violets are not over-plentiful now and Californias bring $1 per 100 this (Monday) morning; small singles, 50 cents.

Bulb stock has also taken a slight jump. Romans sell at $4; paper whites, $4, and fine valley brings $5. Very few are sold at $4. Smilax has had a good call and sells at $12.50. It is fine and not over-plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The next meeting of the club will be a very important one and it is the duty of every member to be present and hear the report, made by the exhibition committee, on the late show, which was a failure financially. The trustees report that two essays will be read by two of our largest exhibitors at the show. One by Carl Beyer, on "How to Grow Plants for Exhibitions," and the other by Emil Schray, on "How to Grow Exhibition Cut Blooms." As both were very successful in taking firsts at our late show President Ammann says that he wants every member present without fail. The meeting will be called promptly at 3 o'clock on Thursday, Dec. 14.

The chances are that the next exhibition by the club will be a prize fight. This will probably draw better than flowers. Stranger things than that have happened.

Notes.

The Junior Florists' Bowling Club have moved to the new regulation alleys opposite the court house and will roll regularly every Tuesday night. The match game between them and the older club comes off within two weeks. A prize will be given the winning team. The Juniors claim that they are rolling good enough now and that they need no handicap. Great interest is taken in this match by friends of both clubs.

Bowling.

The Bowling Club received a challenge from the Junior Bowling Club to roll a match game on Monday night, Dec. 4, at the Court House alleys, which was accepted. Three best games out of five, the losing club to pay all expenses of the evening. The Juniors are putting up some very stiff games and some good ones may be looked for. The scores on Monday night were as follows:

INDIANAPOLIS.

All the prominent cities except Indianapolis have had shows this year, but we didn't have the nerve to give one this year. Some of our members are superstitious—this would have been our 13th.

But we did have a little show among ourselves, so to speak, and the flowers that were shown at the exhibit at the State House were hard to beat. Following are the awards:

Six market plants: First, John Hukriede.

Six single stems: First, H. W. Rieman.

Cut blooms, six white: First, J. Hartje with Robinson; second, Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind.

Cut blooms, six pink: First, H. W. Rieman with Helen Bloodgood; second, E. Hukriede & Sons.

Cut blooms, six yellow: First, F. Conway with Bonnaffon; second, H. W. Rieman.

Cut blooms, six red: First, H. W. Rieman with Nyanza.

Six varieties, six blooms each: First, Bertermann Floral Company; second, H. W. Rieman.

E. G. Hill & Co. received a certificate for the new carnation Ethel Crocker and honorable mention for carnations America and Indiana.

Bertermann Floral Company and H. W. Rieman received honorable mention for display of mums, and Stuart & Haugh for general display.

After the premiums were awarded the premium blooms were sold at auction, the mums going rather cheap, while the carnations brought a good price.

At the meeting held in connection with the show the question in regard to holding a show next year came up, and from the favorable comments heard we shall undoubtedly have an exhibit next year. Although our small show was a success, it was not as in former years, for the happy faces of Mr. Giesy, Harry Balsley, Mr. Bock and the Cincinnati delegation were missing.

Various Notes.

The Bertermann Floral Company held an opening at their store on Tuesday, November 14, and the society was invited, after the meeting, to inspect the display. The opinion of everyone present is that the window display and the decorations in the store and show house were grand.

Junge & Sonnenschmidt have somewhat Americanized their name and will hereafter be known as the Smith, Young Company, and it becomes them, as in their ideas they are always Americans.

Bert Stanley, formerly with the Fairbank summer resort, has opened a cut flower store at 941 Fort Wayne avenue. His many friends wish him success in his new venture.

E. Hukriede & Son have a sport from Modesto that gives promise of being a fine one. It is a very full flower, deep golden yellow, reflexed and is admired by all who have seen it.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Short supply, enormous demand, prices at top notch. That's the condition of affairs. The only items in fairly sufficient supply are chrysanthemums and paper white narcissus. It is the greatest shortage ever known for Thanksgiving. The rose orders were probably not more than 50 per cent. filled, carnations about 60 per cent. This is the condition that prevailed in the midst of the shipping demand.

Practically all the plants are off crop, but the outlook for the holidays is cheering, as the majority should be in crop again by that time.

Various Items.

Mr. A. G. Prince is rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy at his home in Downer's Grove last Sunday.

Recent visitors: John N. May, Summit, N. J.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.

At the regular meeting of the Florists' Club to be held tomorrow (Friday) evening there will be a discussion on the benefits of exhibitions to the trade.

The boys have been too busy lately to indulge in bowling to any extent.

McKellar & Winterson are showing a very attractive line of glass vases.

BUFFALO.

Nothing daunted by the failure of last year's undertaking, for which the elements were largely responsible, Wm. Scott this season gave a private exhibition of the Queen of Autumn, which was little behind in quantity and fully equal in quality to the fine show of last year.

I was struck with the large number of made up pans, in which Ivory, Bonnaffon and Maude Dean were the leading kinds for this purpose. Another success is a house of mignonette and part of a house of Asparagus Sprengeri planted in boxes ranging crosswise of sufficient height to allow the strings to hang down and far enough apart to prevent crowding. Many other good things can be seen here.

Mrs. D. S. Newlands has cut a heavy crop of chrysanthemums, blooms of Lincoln measuring 8 inches across, not a rare thing here. L. Canning is one of the best reflexed kinds. Glory of the Pacific was the best pink. Black Hawk would be hard to beat.

W. J. Palmer & Son have kept up a bright and continuous exhibition. At time of my visit they had just completed a superb wreath of violets and informed me that funeral work has kept them very busy.

Adams, Anderson and Rebstock have all they can attend to at times, but business is spasmodic.

At the wedding of the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield, which interesting event took place at the home of the bride at Lockport on the 17th inst., the decorations were very elaborate, the handiwork of the lady members of the family. A bank and canopy of palms and chrysanthemums, center pieces of asparagus with Helen Bloodgood and The Queen. A mantel of ferns with a grand specimen of Cypripedium insigne Maulei as the centerpiece was most effective.

WASHINGTON.

Now that shows and mums are nearly gone the florists have got right down to business. What few mums that are left have gone up in price from $1 and $1.50 per doz. to $3, and are going fast at that.

Roses and carnations are scarce and good roses bring 8 and 10 cents; carnations, 2 and 3; Romans and paper whites go slowly at 2 and 3; violets are coming in fine and bring 50 and 75 cents per 100.

From all indications trade for Thanksgiving will be fine.

There was quite a lot of fine funeral work made here and shipped to Paterson, N. J., for the funeral of Vice-President Hobart. J. H. Small & Son turned their order for the occasion to their New York store.

J. H. Granor was presented with a fine young florist in the way of a bouncing boy. F. H. KRAMER.

WHY?

Editor Florists' Review: Allow me to say a few words in connection with the remarks of "Western Florist."

That the florist trade does not more quickly get the benefits of improved business conditions is more the fault of the retailer than anything else. We cannot help noticing that some retailers having large, showy stores and all the advantages possible which should enable them to ask even fancy prices, adopt business methods which are not only discreditable to themselves but to the whole trade.

It seems to me a very poor practice to ask a prospective customer top price for certain goods and then sell it to the party at a much reduced rate before he leaves the store. Knowing as we do, that most buyers have no knowledge at all of the real value of flowers it naturally gives the impression that the florist had been attempting to take advantage of the customer. This same impression is created by giving flowers to everyone who calls in to ask prices. All such practices are detrimental to the best interests of that particular florist as well as those of the whole trade. There are many much better ways to gain popularity.

It is a serious mistake to hastily sell a funeral piece at too low a price "because my competitor would have gotten the order," and then be in a position where you cannot afford to give the customer satisfactory work.

We are all entitled to higher prices, but only legitimate business methods will bring them to us. As long as there are those who try to get the whole earth by cutting prices there is not much chance. This is a subject that every Florists' Club should thoroughly discuss, that some proper remedy may be devised.

Detroit, Mich. FRANK DANZER.

OBITUARY.John Wood.

On September 24th, Mr. John Wood, of Kirkstall, Leeds, England, died after an illness of a few hours, aged fifty-seven years.

To all readers of The Garden, London, his "Notes on Hardy Plants" were well known, and his influence was perhaps even more felt through his "Hardy Plant Club," formed for the distribution and exchange of hardy herbaceous and alpine plants.

These means not only introduced to amateurs new species suited to their collections of alpine plants, but gave valuable cultural information. Mr.

Wood had nearly reached middle life before he took up the culture of hardy plants, having, at the time of his death, been in this business about twenty-two years. He drifted into it late in life simply through the keen love he had for it and which has brought him more than average success.

During his life he acquired a great knowledge of alpine plants and their treatment. He has done a great work in creating and fostering a love for "wild plants," and had a notably fine collection of hardy American perennials.

MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best on the market, and if your other specialties are equally as good, they should make another addition to the money-makers of 1900.

Respectfully,

WHY?

Editor Florists' Review: Allow me to say a few words in connection with the remarks of "Western Florist."

That the florist trade does not more quickly get the benefits of improved business conditions is more the fault of the retailer than anything else. We cannot help noticing that some retailers having large, showy stores and all the advantages possible which should enable them to ask even fancy prices, adopt business methods which are not only discreditable to themselves but to the whole trade.

It seems to me a very poor practice to ask a prospective customer top price for certain goods and then sell it to the party at a much reduced rate before he leaves the store. Knowing as we do, that most buyers have no knowledge at all of the real value of flowers it naturally gives the impression that the florist had been attempting to take advantage of the customer. This same impression is created by giving flowers to everyone who calls in to ask prices. All such practices are detrimental to the best interests of that particular florist as well as those of the whole trade. There are many much better ways to gain popularity.

It is a serious mistake to hastily sell a funeral piece at too low a price "because my competitor would have gotten the order," and then be in a position where you cannot afford to give the customer satisfactory work.

We are all entitled to higher prices, but only legitimate business methods will bring them to us. As long as there are those who try to get the whole earth by cutting prices there is not much chance. This is a subject that every Florists' Club should thoroughly discuss, that some proper remedy may be devised.
Detroit, Mich. FRANK DANZER.

OBITUARY.

John Wood.

On September 24th, Mr. John Wood, of Kirkstall, Leeds, England, died after an illness of a few hours, aged fifty-seven years.

To all readers of The Garden, London, his "Notes on Hardy Plants" were well known, and his influence was perhaps even more felt through his "Hardy Plant Club," formed for the distribution and exchange of hardy herbaceous and alpine plants.

These means not only introduced to amateurs new species suited to their collections of alpine plants, but gave valuable cultural information. Mr.

Wood had nearly reached middle life before he took up the culture of hardy plants, having, at the time of his death, been in this business about twenty-two years. He drifted into it late in life simply through the keen love he had for it and which has brought him more than average success.

During his life he acquired a great knowledge of alpine plants and their treatment. He has done a great work in creating and fostering a love for "wild plants," and had a notably fine collection of hardy American perennials.

DELIVERING BY STREET CAR.

Last week I had a large church wedding to decorate for and had to use large palms extensively. I chartered two special cars to be at my place as near after midnight as the ordinary traffic was off the line. We had the cars loaded at 1 a. m. and were at the church, six miles distant, at 1:30; had everything unloaded and every one home before 2:30. We arranged the decorations during the day and at night the cars were at the church at the same time and we had everything unloaded at the greenhouses before 2 o'clock. There was not a single leaf broken nor any damage done to plants, although packed in very closely. Cars are fine things to pack large palms in, as so many can be packed in regardless of size or weight.

A NEW BEGONIA.

The plant judges of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Geo. A. Strohle, Chester Davis and J. Wm. Colfesh, visited Chestnut Hill on Saturday, Nov. 18th, to see the pale pink sport from Gloire de Lorraine begonia at the greenhouses of Edwin Lonsdale.

They carefully examined the sport growing beside the older variety and awarded the society's silver medal to the new comer. The judges believe this begonia to be a sport from Gloire de Lorraine, and consider it healthier and more vigorous than its supposed parent. The blooms are larger and of a very pleasing shade of pink.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society will be held in Lindsley's hall, 240 Main street, Wednesday, Dec. 6, at 8 p. m.
The subject for discussion is "Ancient and Modern Floral Art," and it will be introduced by Mr. James I. Donlan, of New York City. The annual election of officers also takes place at this meeting.

WE SEE by a report in the Buffalo Review that Mr. William Scott finds time for the duties of a good citizen in addition to all his other cares. He is president of the Central Council of the Business Men's Association and on the 20th inst. acted as toastmaster at a banquet at which a hundred and fifty leading citizens were present, including the mayor, postmaster and many prominent business men. An entirely new system of municipal government was advocated for Buffalo.

ROSES.

The grand new rose Liberty, most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size; never showing any deformed, black or bull heads either in winter or summer and far surpassing Meteor in freedom of bloom. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance. Prices are as follows for A1 stock: Own rooted plants in 2½-inch pots, 12 plants, 60c; 25 plants, 50c; 50 plants, 30c; 100 plants, 25c; 1000 plants, 20c each.

Grafted plants in 2½-inch pots: 12 plants, 75c; 25 plants, 60c; 50 plants, 50c; 100 plants, 40c; 1000 plants, 35c each. Satisfactory reference or deposit from all unknown correspondents. Orders coming in after this date can be filled only in April or later, as my stock for March delivery is all sold.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, MISS.—The fifth annual chrysanthemum show of the Crystal Springs Floral Club was held Nov. 14 to 16.

DENVER, COLO.—The contract for addition to the City park greenhouses has been awarded to Geo. J. Chalmers, whose bid was $315.

ERIE, PA.—S. Alfred Baur gave a very successful chrysanthemum show at his store, 1108 State street, last week. The display attracted crowds of visitors.

DEFIANCE, O.—Mr. C. Winterich is branching out in his business. He has arranged to erect greenhouses at Garrett and will conduct a branch establishment there.

LENOX, MASS.—The annual chrysanthemum show of the Lenox Hort. Society was held Nov. 4 and was very successful. Among the leading exhibitors were Geo. H. Morgan, Chas. Lanier, Wm. D. Sloane, Morris K. Jessup, Jas. Choate and John Sloane.

WE have received a copy of the new catalogue issued by the C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., and it is certainly very handsomely gotten up. The use of fine half tone engravings is to be commended, as they are not only rich in effect, but are accurate. This firm handles a great variety of goods and the catalogue is a very useful little reference book for trade buyers.

GALESBURG, ILL.—I. L. Pillsbury has purchased the stock of the Whitting Nursery and it will be moved to his greenhouses, 65 Locust street, and the trade will be carried on there. E. R. Gesler held a free chrysanthemum show at his greenhouses November 8 to 11 and many people visited his houses. November 13 to 18 I. L. Pillsbury held his annual chrysanthemum show, and about 1,000 took advantage of the opportunity and inspected the plants and flowers, which were fine. The new varieties which attracted most attention were Pennsylvania, Latest Fad, James Comley, Golden Wonder, Western King and many older varieties. The sales were satisfactory and the show a decided success.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual. GEO. S. OSBORN.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Northampton Hort. Society was held Nov. 9 and 10. It was one of the largest and most varied displays yet made by the society.

The principal exhibitors were A. Parks, H. W. Field, Donald McGregor, E. J. Canning, G. W. Thorniley, E. D. Shaw and R. B. Graves.

ANDOVER, MASS.

The annual exhibition of the Andover Florists' and Gardeners' Club was very successful, much more interest than usual being taken by the public.

The principal prize-winners in the various classes were, J. H. Playdon, G. D. Millett, Geo. Piddington, W. M. Wood (Carl Linguist, gardener), Col. Ripley, John Nice, H. H. Tyer and E. P. Chapin.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Odds and Ends.

New York floral artists have already commenced their Christmas displays. This week the Broadway windows are made gloriously brilliant with great masses of poinsettias. As we stated last week great quantities of these flowers have been grown this season and they promise to be the leading feature in all forms of decorative work this Christmas. The color is grand, but be careful what is near. If you use them in your window no other flowers should be there. A fringe of Farleyense or cuneatum or a frame of holly, mistletoe or light colored asparagus will set them off to best advantage.

Poinsettias last Christmas retailed cut at 50 to 75 cents, on the plant at $1 each flower. They may be cheaper this year, but we see no good reason why they should. People are willing to pay a good price for well grown stock, but of course some folks seem to live only to cut prices, and we have to stoop to recognize their acts once in a while.

Holly festoons have appeared in the windows. The quality is nothing extra, and perhaps it's just a little premature to use it so soon; people get tired of looking at the same thing for almost a month; wait till you get an extra fine case and then put it where and how it will show up best. Although we believe every window dresser should show his best all the time, the window from two weeks before Christmas should exhibit his greatest skill. Mind you, it isn't always quantity that tells, it's beauty and adaptability which usually commands the most attention. You will notice how the dry goods houses make special displays and draw the greatest crowds where dolls and knick-knacks are shown, but there is a large class who will not notice such a window but will stand where the mantles and bonnets are.

Some of you will probably have waterfalls and rocky scenery in your windows and the crowd will stand to admire, but the class whose money you want like to see something they can purchase. We notice with pleasure the appearance of some very fine baskets of flowers in the Broadway windows lately. Yesterday Thorley showed an immense basket of Lillium Harrisii. The high handle was trimmed with light blue ribbon. The effect was very good; keep it in mind for Easter. Small's arranged a pretty basket with light Adiantum gracillimum and Cypripedium insigne, large bows of green gauze ribbon on side and top of basket handle; it looked light and dainty. Stumpp has a very artistically arranged window of Japanese trained trees.

Some of the florists are making displays of white porcelain swans. They may come into favor again this season, having been out of the market for many years; they were all the rage eight or ten years ago, and don't look bad if made up properly and arranged on fringed mirrors, but dry goods fakeum company are selling them filled with ferns for a few cents.

By the way, the New York Herald is hammering the municipal authorities for permitting street fakirs to build florists' shops under elevated railroad steps and paying no rent for same. We second the motion. Any element injurious to the retailer who pays high and is an American citizen can get no sympathy from us; drive the pests into some other and more suitable line.

Whilst we are discussing street vendors, we have seen many changes among them in New York the past fifteen years. Then they were Jews, eight or ten years ago a company of girls was started and an occasional Frenchman crept in, then suddenly the Greeks came and captured Manhattan Isle; their dirty paws maul its roses still.

An interesting letter from Mexico tells us that flowers such as roses, lilies, violets, etc., can be had in abundance all the year around. The principal market is around the Cathedral in the City of Mexico. The flowers are very artistically arranged in loose bunches and are sold for 25 cents per bunch; $1 will fill many vases with fine flowers. A great many flowers are used at funerals, the caskets usually being covered with them. Wreaths are the most popular design; a 24-inch pansy wreath can often be had for $1. The floral artists and retailers in the City of Mexico are boys and men; in several other cities, however, notably Guadalajara, little girls sell the flowers on the streets; they have no set price, anyone buying a buttonhole or cluster pays what he or she wishes. Though certain native fancies are largely used in most of the work, still much of it is very beautiful. We hope soon to be able to give you illustrations of floral art from every country, and you will not be ashamed of our own.

Velvet ribbons are costly, but they are being used by a few of the florists. Violets are tied with velvet ribbon; with fringes some of them look dressy. Velvet ribbon is excellent for extra fine flowers only. If you can get the right shade of color it makes cattleyas, etc., look very fine. We don't care for the fringe; there's too much of the dressed dollism about it, but there is a luster and richness about these new ribbons which, if properly used, will add much to your work. All grades of self-colored ribbons are advancing in price; at one time this season there were over $20,000,000 worth of ribbons in stock among the New York dealers; they have stopped the manufacture of many brands.

What a revolution there has been in the basket trade the past decade or two. First they were made of wheat and spills, then rushes, afterwards willow, and again celluloid, then raffia. Now our finest baskets are gems of art and are made of green luffa with varnished palm stalks for embellishment. They look fine in the window and one or two will make your store look better, but beware of the customer who wants your best one filled for a few dollars.

Remember cards and envelopes are small items, but they are mighty important. Get the best quality you can and have them neatly placed on the desk intended for customers to write on.

Most florists are busy now fixing up the red immortelle stars they made in summer months, or are working nights making new ones. There's going to be lots of them used in wreaths this year; have them well made and use the berry red immortelle; it is a better color than the ordinary red. Luffa stars are no good; they spoil the cheapest wreath. If you want extra fine wreaths you must make them up yourself. Some fairly good ones can be had on the market; they're all right for cheap trade, but you will sell lots of the better ones if you show them to advantage.

Ardisias are fine around New York this time; with red or green pot covers and a bit of berry red ribbon, they promise to be good sellers.

If you are foolish enough to harbor any trash around your place, throw it out of sight for the present and let nothing be seen but good, salable stock.

Pyramid shaped box trees have become quite popular for exterior decoration in New York.

IVERA.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

CHRYSANTHEMUM RUST.

Through the courtesy of Prof. Byron D. Halsted, of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, we have received his circulars with description of and possible remedy for the chrysanthemum rust. How widely this circular has been distributed we are not aware, but it is timely and valuable, and the kind of fruit that it is pleasing to see our experiment stations produce.

The exact species of fungus that produces the rust is not determined, nor is it of great consequence to us how long and crooked its name if we can only fight it successfully. Prof. Halsted says that it first came to his notice in October, 1897. We are sorry to say that we have been troubled with it at least six years. We first thought it was encouraged by a close and rather dark house, and are not sure yet but what that aggravated the trouble. Still when Golden Wedding was tried the following year in a particularly light house with abundance of ventilation, the rust again appeared and ruined the crop.

We have noticed it on several varieties, while on some, notably Ivory, in the same house we have never seen a sign of it. We have seen it destroy a batch of Philadelphia, while by a clearly defined line the variety next to it was left unharmed.

The bronzed appearance of the under part of the leaf and its tendency to crack instead of bend is a very sure evidence of the rust. Like the carnation rust, which has largely disappeared even on Daybreak, a variety that was during the epidemic the worst infested, it appears to be already passing away, for this year on the same place among twenty-five varieties, we only noticed it on a few Golden Wedding and the attack came so late it did little harm. Prof. Cowell, of our Botanic Garden, told me three years ago that he was sure that with the application of Bordeaux mixture syringed on the foliage he had arrested the rust and that subsequent growth was healthy and clean, and seeing the plants in flowering time I can vouch for the above, as I saw the finely developed flowers.

Last year I propagated Golden Wedding from stock that had a bad attack of rust. When about a foot high in three-inch pots the plants began to show the rust. After being planted out and thoroughly syringed with the ammoniacal mixture the remainder of the growth was perfectly healthy, so I am inclined to think that these remedies are a sure preventive of this troublesome fungus. And when propagating the chrysanthemums it would be well to dip the cuttings for a few moments in the ammoniacal or Bordeaux liquid before and after putting them in the sand. You never can get at them so thoroughly with the syringe and the labor and cost of giving them a dip is nothing. The varieties I have seen most troubled with the rust are the glorious Golden Wedding, Emily Henderson, Philadelphia, G. W. Childs and several varieties that we had to discard because they were no good and rusty into the bargain.

WM. SCOTT.

(We print below the circular referred to by Mr. Scott.—Ed.)

Outbreak of Chrysanthemum Rust.

During the past month there have been many complaints concerning a destructive disease among chrysanthemums. It is none of the various blights, more or less common to the chrysanthemum, but one of the genuine rusts, and closely related to those of the hollyhock, carnation and asparagus, which have come to us within the past few years with disastrous results.

General Appearance of the Chrysanthemum Rust—When badly infested with the rust, the chrysanthemum plant becomes dwarfed, the leaves small, and brown on the under side. Later on, instead of the green color of healthy plants, there are the small, stiff, nearly leafless stems, ending in stunted heads, that fail to open into marketable flowers. Over all the lower portions of the plant is a brown powder, as if they had been sprinkled with tobacco dust.

Close View of the Rust—Rusted chrysanthemum plants, when closely examined, are found to have on the under surface of the leaves brown spots or blister-patches, slightly raised, and covered with a dust that readily rubs off. Such leaves are more or less irregularly discolored, so that the presence of the rust may be detected by the coloration of the leaf, as seen from above.

Nature of the Chrysanthemum Rust—The rust in question is due to a fungus, as before stated, which is probably Puccinia Hieracii, Mart. As yet, however, the form of spore for a full determination has not been observed upon the American plants. The fungus consists of microscopic threads which grow through the substance of the chrysanthemum plant, feeding upon its juices, and finally breaking out through leaf or stem, bear the innumerable brown spores that give the dark color to the affected parts. These spores are borne by the winds, or driven by the water from the hose, to other plants, where they germinate quickly and spread the disease.

Treatment—The chrysanthemum rust has been known in this country for only a few years, it having come first to the writer's attention in October, 1897, and therefore experience with remedial measures is here quite limited. We may, however, profit from the treatment it has received in Europe. One English grower, who doubtless is writing out of his sad experience, says: "Every gardener should be careful where he obtains cuttings and plants, otherwise he may quite unwittingly introduce the rust into his collection." It is of prime importance that the stock used for propagation be free from the disease and all purchased plants likewise. In addition, the plants in all stages of growth, from the beginning, should be sprayed weekly with Bordeaux mixture, or other equally effective fungicide. The rust should be watched for upon the older leaves, and when first met with all foliage showing the least signs of rust should be destroyed. If the disease increases, it may be best to burn the whole lot, fumigate the premises, and start anew with fresh, clean stock.

This is an enemy that has proved its ability to strike a death blow, and it should be watched for, and, when found, destroyed. It may be that some varieties of chrysanthemums are not easily attacked, and these are to be looked for and made use of accordingly.

There is no danger, as some have feared, of this rust spreading to carnations or other plants outside of the chrysanthemum group. It does attack some of our wild plants, and it is barely possible it came from them to the chrysanthemum.

HEIGHT OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

What is the actual height of the following mums planted out June 5, single stem, one flower to a stem, grown for cut flower trade, 8 inches between rows and 10 inches apart in the row: Ivory, Mayflower, Philadelphia, Bonnaffon, W. H. Chadwick, Robinson, Maud Dean, Florence Pullman?

H. C. H.

In reply to above would say that several things have to be considered. Season is one. If the terminal bud is taken it means a foot to eighteen inches more than if the crown bud is taken. As generally grown, unless planted in very rich soil, they would run about as follows:

Ivory and Bonnaffon, 2 feet to 30 inches; Maud Dean and Philadelphia, 2½ to 3 feet; Pullman and Robinson, 3½ to 4 feet; Mayflower, 4 feet; Chadwick, 4 feet on late bud.

This would be in a modern house with good light and ventilation.

WOOD ASHES AND NITRATE OF SODA.

Kindly inform me the amount of nitrate of soda you would consider sufficient to cover a bed of carnations 6x100. If put on with wood ashes, how much of the ashes should be used with soda to cover above bench and how often should soda be used as a fertilizer? I have used soda with different results and I would like to get reliable instructions. Our soil is a good light sod soil, and carnations do very well in it.

F. D. R.

My experience with nitrate of soda in the mineral form on carnation benches has been most disastrous. Putting perhaps 2 lbs. (not more) on a piece of bench about 8x7 and thoroughly mixing it with the soil, which was 5 inches deep, and then planting the carnations, it killed most every plant. This was an experiment, and as the remainder of a long bed had no soda and the plants lived and flourished, we know it was nothing but the soda. Have heard others say it should be always used in solution; 1 lb. to 50 gallons of water is safe and beneficial, and at this strength you could apply it at every alternate watering.

For a top dressing to a carnation bed a sprinkling of wood ashes is beneficial, but I would prefer bone meal. Wood ashes, one of the very best of all fertilizers, should be mixed with the soil before planting; 1 peck to a yard of soil is about right.

WM. SCOTT.

CATTLEYA LABIATA.

We present herewith an engraving of a plant of Cattleya labiata as grown by Messrs. Frank Bros., Beardstown, Ill. The plant bears nine flowers on two leads.

It is interesting as showing what can be done by a commercial florist having a general stock and with no special facilities for orchid growing.

In response to an inquiry Messrs. Frank Bros. write: "We grow the cattleyas in a fern house, a lean-to with eastern aspect. Day temperature 80 to 85 degrees, and 60 to 65 degrees at night. No artificial shading is required as the house is glazed with heavy ribbed glass. Bottom and top ventilators are kept open day and night as long as weather permits.

"The floor and benches are damped down three times a day, and once a week with liquid manure to produce sufficient ammonia. The orchids are watered with settled rain water.

"As soon as growth is finished we remove them to the rose house, exposed to the full sunlight to ripen off the pseudo-bulbs, which is the main essential to induce the plants to bloom.

"We have about 25 cattleyas, mainly Trianae, Percivalliana, Gigas and labiata; also Laelia anceps, Coelogyne cristata, Sophranites grandiflora and a few cypripediums. All are doing finely with us. We grow these orchids more for pleasure than for profit."

COLD vs. WARM WATER.

The results secured at this station last winter in using water of different temperatures in watering plants do not agree in all particulars with those reported by the Wisconsin Experiment Station. Plants under glass were used only. The results of our experiments may be summarized as follows:

1. There was practically no difference in the results secured by the use of water between 45 and 75 degrees.

2. Water at temperatures between 32 and 34 degrees had a distinct dwarfing effect upon all plants treated.

3. Water at temperatures between 75 and 100 degrees caused a weak and somewhat spindling growth.

4. Hardy plants like geraniums were less influenced by cold water than tender plants like coleus.

AMONG BROOKLYN GROWERS.

What They Will Have for Christmas.

Brooklyn and Bay Ridge are now part of Greater New York, but it will be many years yet before their peculiar localisms, especially floriculturally speaking, shall be obliterated. Getting off the cars at Sixty-fifth street, the "old timer" may stand in a wreath of memories as he watches horses browse over the dilapidated spot where "once upon a time" the finest of plants were grown and yonder stood James Dean's house of generosity and countless friendships.

Across the lots is J. M. Keller's extensive range of greenhouses, and here as usual there is an abundance of stock in the best of condition. It is our motive to see what is being grown for Christmas. CHRYSANTHEMUM RUST.

Through the courtesy of Prof. Byron D. Halsted, of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, we have received his circular with description of and possible remedy for the chrysanthemum rust. How widely this circular has been distributed we are not aware, but it is timely and valuable, and the kind of fruit that it is pleasing to see our experiment stations produce.

The exact species of fungus that produces the rust is not determined, nor is it of great consequence to us how long and crooked its name if we can only fight it successfully. Prof. Halsted says that it first came to his notice in October, 1897. We are sorry to say that we have been troubled with it at least six years. We first thought it was encouraged by a close and rather dark house, and are not sure yet but what that aggravated the trouble. Still when Golden Wedding was tried the following year in a particularly light house with abundance of ventilation, the rust again appeared and ruined the crop.

We have noticed it on several varieties, while on some, notably Ivory, in the same house we have never seen a sign of it. We have seen it destroy a batch of Philadelphia, while by a clearly defined line the variety next to it was left unharmed.

The bronzed appearance of the under part of the leaf and its tendency to crack instead of bend is a very sure evidence of the rust. Like the carnation rust, which has largely disappeared even on Daybreak, a variety that was during the epidemic the worst infested, it appears to be already passing away, for this year on the same place among twenty-five varieties, we only noticed it on a few Golden Wedding and the attack came so late it did little harm. Prof. Cowell, of our Botanic Garden, told me three years ago that he was sure that with the application of Bordeaux mixture syringed on the foliage he had arrested the rust and that subsequent growth was healthy and clean, and seeing the plants in flowering time I can vouch for the above, as I saw the finely developed flowers.

Last year I propagated Golden Wedding from stock that had a bad attack of rust. When about a foot high in three-inch pots the plants began to show the rust. After being planted out and thoroughly syringed with the ammoniacal mixture the remainder of the growth was perfectly healthy, so I am inclined to think that these remedies are a sure preventive of this troublesome fungus. And when propagating the chrysanthemums it would be well to dip the cuttings for a few moments in the ammoniacal or Bordeaux liquid before and after putting them in the sand. You never can get at them so thoroughly with the syringe and the labor and cost of giving them a dip is nothing. The varieties I have seen most troubled with the rust are the glorious Golden Wedding, Emily Henderson, Philadelphia, G. W. Childs and several varieties that we had to discard because they were no good and rusty into the bargain.

Outbreak of Chrysanthemum Rust.

During the past month there have been many complaints concerning a destructive disease among chrysanthemums. It is none of the various blights, more or less common to the chrysanthemum, but one of the genuine rusts, and closely related to those of the hollyhock, carnation and asparagus, which have come to us within the past few years with disastrous results.

General Appearance of the Chrysanthemum Rust.—When badly infested with the rust, the chrysanthemum plant becomes dwarfed, the leaves small, and brown on the under side. Later on, instead of the green color of healthy plants, there are the small, stiff, nearly leafless stems, ending in stunted heads, that fail to open into marketable flowers. Over all the lower portions of the plant is a brown powder, as if they had been sprinkled with tobacco dust.

Close View of the Rust.—Rusted chrysanthemum plants, when closely examined, are found to have on the under surface of the leaves brown spots or blister-patches, slightly raised, and covered with a dust that readily rubs off. Such leaves are more or less irregularly discolored, so that the presence of the rust may be detected by the coloration of the leaf, as seen from above.

Nature of the Chrysanthemum Rust.—The rust in question is due to a fungus, as before stated, which is probably Puccinia Hieracii, Mart. As yet, however, the form of spore for a full determination has not been observed upon the American plants. The fungus consists of microscopic threads which grow through the substance of the chrysanthemum plant, feeding upon its juices, and finally breaking out through leaf or stem, bear the innumerable brown spores that give the dark color to the affected parts. These spores are borne by the winds, or driven by the water from the hose, to other plants, where they germinate quickly and spread the disease.

Treatment.—The chrysanthemum rust has been known in this country for only a few years. It having come first to the writer's attention in October, 1897, and therefore experience with remedial measures is here quite limited. We may, however, profit from the treatment it has received in Europe. One English grower, who doubtless is writing out of his sad experience, says: "Every gardener should be careful where he obtains cuttings and plants, otherwise he may quite unwittingly introduce the rust into his collection." It is of prime importance that the stock used for propagation be free from the disease and all purchased plants likewise. In addition, the plants in all stages of growth, from the beginning, should be sprayed weekly with Bordeaux mixture, or other equally effective fungicide. The rust should be watched for upon the older leaves, and when first met with all foliage showing the least signs of rust should be destroyed. If the disease increases, it may be best to burn the whole lot, fumigate the premises, and start anew with fresh, clean stock.

This is an enemy that has proved its ability to strike a death blow, and it should be watched for, and, when found, destroyed. It may be that some varieties of chrysanthemums are not easily attacked, and these are to be looked for and made use of accordingly. There is no danger, as some have feared, of this rust spreading to carnations or other plants outside of the chrysanthemum group. It does attack some of our wild plants, and it is barely possible it came from them to the chrysanthemum.

HEIGHT OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

What is the actual height of the following mums planted out June 5, single stem, one flower to a stem, grown for cut flower trade, 8 inches between rows and 10 inches apart in the row: Ivory, Mayflower, Philadelphia, Bonnaffon, W. H. Chadwick, Robinson, Maud Dean, Florence Pullman?

H. C. H.

In reply to above would say that several things have to be considered. Season is one. If the terminal bud is taken it means a foot to eighteen inches more than if the crown bud is taken. As generally grown, unless planted in very rich soil, they would run about as follows:

Ivory and Bonnaffon, 2 feet to 30 inches; Maud Dean and Philadelphia, 2½ to 3 feet; Pullman and Robinson, 3½ to 4 feet; Mayflower, 4 feet; Chadwick, 4 feet on late bud.

This would be in a modern house with good light and ventilation.

WOOD ASHES AND NITRATE OF SODA.

Kindly inform me the amount of nitrate of soda you would consider sufficient to cover a bed of carnations 6x100. If put on with wood ashes, how much of the ashes should be used with soda to cover above bench and how often should soda be used as a fertilizer? I have used soda with different results and I would like to get reliable instructions. Our soil is a good light sod soil, and carnations do very well in it.

F. D. R.

My experience with nitrate of soda in the mineral form on carnation benches has been most disastrous. Putting perhaps 2 lbs. (not more) on a piece of bench about 8x7 and thoroughly mixing it with the soil, which was 5 inches deep, and then planting the carnations, it killed most every plant. This was an experiment, and as the remainder of a long bed had no soda and the plants lived and flourished, we know it was nothing but the soda. Have heard others say it should be always used in solution; 1 lb. to 50 gallons of water is safe and beneficial, and at this strength you could apply it at every alternate watering.

For a top dressing to a carnation bed a sprinkling of wood ashes is beneficial, but I would prefer bone meal. Wood ashes, one of the very best of all fertilizers, should be mixed with the soil before planting; 1 peck to a yard of soil is about right.

WM. SCOTT.

CATTLEYA LABIATA.

We present herewith an engraving of a plant of Cattleya labiata as grown by Messrs. Frank Bros., Beardstown, Ill. The plant bears nine flowers on two leads.

It is interesting as showing what can be done by a commercial florist having a general stock and with no special facilities for orchid growing.

In response to an inquiry Messrs. Frank Bros. write: "We grow the cattleyas in a fern house, a lean-to with eastern aspect. Day temperature 80 to 85 degrees, and 60 to 65 degrees at night. No artificial shading is required as the house is glazed with heavy ribbed glass. Bottom and top ventilators are kept open day and night as long as weather permits.

"The floor and benches are damped down three times a day, and once a week with liquid manure to produce sufficient ammonia. The orchids are watered with settled rain water.

"As soon as growth is finished we remove them to the rose house, exposed to the full sunlight to ripen off the pseudo-bulbs, which is the main essential to induce the plants to bloom.

"We have about 25 cattleyas, mainly Trianae, Percivaliana, Gigas and labiata; also Laelia anceps, Coelogyne cristata, Sophranites grandiflora and a few cypripediums. All are doing finely with us. We grow these orchids more for pleasure than for profit."

COLD vs. WARM WATER.

The results secured at this station last winter in using water of different temperatures in watering plants do not agree in all particulars with those reported by the Wisconsin Experiment Station. Plants under glass were used only. The results of our experiments may be summarized as follows:

1. There was practically no difference in the results secured by the use of water between 45 and 75 degrees.

2. Water at temperatures between 32 and 34 degrees had a distinct dwarfing effect upon all plants treated.

3. Water at temperatures between 75 and 100 degrees caused a weak and somewhat spindling growth.

4. Hardy plants like geraniums were less influenced by cold water than tender plants like coleus.

5. The best geranium plants were grown by the use of water near the freezing point, while the poorest coleus were produced by the same temperature.

I am not prepared to say that there is "nothing in" this watering business.

AMONG BROOKLYN GROWERS.

What They Will Have for Christmas.

Brooklyn and Bay Ridge are now part of Greater New York, but it will be many years yet before their peculiar localisms, especially floriculturally speaking, shall be obliterated. Getting off the cars at Sixty-fifth street, the "old timer" may stand in a wreath of memories as he watches horses browse over the dilapidated spot where "once upon a time" the finest of plants were grown and yonder stood James Dean's house of generosity and countless friendships.

Across the lots is J. M. Keller's extensive range of greenhouses, and here as usual there is an abundance of stock in the best of condition. It is our motive to see what is being grown for Christmas. Here we saw a lovely living picture in the form of a batch of begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Small orange trees are well fruited and richly colored. Ardisias are grand. Ericas, daisies, azaleas, poinsettias, cypripediums and dendrobiums are promising well. Among azaleas Simon Mardner will be the best one for Christmas. The immense amount of stock intended for Easter is in the best of shape. Mr. Keller has stopped growing small ferns because they didn't pay for the trouble.

Just a block away is one of the old homesteads of New York floriculture, James Weir's Sons' place. Here were grown some of the first roses (Bon Silene and Safrano) for the New York market, aye, and tuberoses, too, when to cut a stalk full of bloom was a sacred ceremony, and single florets brought as high as 4 and 5 cents wholesale. Camellias also were worth their weight in precious metal. These very same plants are full of bloom today; having passed through the era of scorn, they are again destined to shine in popularity. Plants and flowers of every kind suitable for the retail market are extensively grown here. Specially grown mums have not been so large a feature as in former years, but several houses have been devoted to these flowers, grown in bush form, for funeral work and decorative purposes. A section of Newitt, a large white variety, was the best late one seen here. A house containing many thousands of Lilium Harrisii was being pushed for Christmas; they are the best and freest from disease we've seen this season.

A house of poinsettias is a picture worth going to see. They are growing here in several ways. Many are grown successfully in pans, intended for table decoration, and are in bloom from 6 inches to 12 inches high, six in a pan. The ones growing planted out on the bench are the best in foliage and bloom. Asparagus plumosus is a feature. A house planted in July with two-year-old pot plants which had been retarded has already grown two crops of long vines. Go and see their house of cuneatum! Ferns and ivy seem to be grown by the hundreds of thousands, and the enormous quantity of stock grown here is only a small portion of what is sold in the retail establishment presided over by the genial Johnnie Weir.

Henry A. Molatsch grows cut flowers for the Brooklyn market. Carnations are one of his specialties. His Flora Hills are in bad condition with the disease peculiar to that variety. A bench of his new scarlet carnation is in the best of condition and showing a fine crop. This carnation, which is not yet disseminated, is by its appearance here a great improvement on many of the reds we know. Among a bench of seedlings are many which promise much in the future. Mr. Molatsch is an extensive grower of sweet peas. He has his winter crop growing in pots outdoors. When his mums are over he plants these peas out, covers them with salt hay and starts firing in January. The varieties he forces are Blanche Ferry, Emily Henderson, Countess of Radnor and Catherine Tracy.

Greenwood cemetery is surrounded by florists. They are in bunches everywhere and all seem to be thriving. Many of their places are like old curiosity shops, miniature botanical gardens. Along Fort Hamilton avenue there are acres of glass. James Weir recently added several new houses to his already immense plant. Here everything that is good for either cut flower or cemetery planting is grown on a large scale.

Across the street is John Condon, who has also had built a beautiful new show house and office. Genial P. Keenan is in charge here. Mr. Keenan is well known as a successful raiser of new chrysanthemums. Many of the best grown around New York have originated with him. Bedding plants are grown by the numberless count; they put out in geraniums alone nearly 70,000 plants. Mr. Keenan says Summit is their best scarlet, Sherman the best dark, and La Favorite the best white. Eighty thousand pansies are now in frames ready for spring planting. Beaconsfield is the great favorite, and a beautiful and appropriate color it is, too, for cemetery work. A house of Jacqueminots planted eight years ago is one of the wonders. Of course the sash has been off all summer. The growth is fine; this will be tied down and the house got ready to have them in bloom for Easter.

As in all other places around the cemetery all the cut flowers grown, and more besides, are retailed on the premises. A vast quantity is being forced for Christmas. A house of poinsettias, another of callas, one of Stevia compacta is elegant and valuable, others of carnations. Mr. Keenan says Flora Hill has paid them best among the whites this year. A bench of a new light pink carnation raised on the place is a grand sight; the crop is immense, the color after the style of Dana, perhaps a little brighter, and the stem and growth are all that can be wished for. Here also can be seen about the best carnation support we have seen. It does not choke the plant and bring on disease as some do, but permits the plants their natural aspect; it can be folded up into small space when not in use.

At Anthony Wollmer's business was reported good. Mr. Wollmer has raised two geraniums, one a double scarlet, the other a rosy red, which he claims gave him more satisfaction than all others.

At Schanley's, Krombach's and all the other places here there is more or less specialty, each having a pet or favorite, and all bitterly complaining about the red tape of the cemetery authorities in regard to the decoration of graves. The restrictions put upon the planting of shrubs have greatly injured that trade.

Ed Wolz is gardener for E. W. Bliss, the man who supplied the government with the materials which sent the late Spaniards to heaven. His beautiful place at Bay Ridge is well worth a visit. Almost everything is grown here in a way to excite enthusiasm, every inch of space is utilized. The mushrooms under benches are in fine condition. His dwarf Champion tomatoes are elegant, whilst the flowers and plants would shame those on many a tradesman's place.

Everybody here knows Adolf Welsing, and if they don't it's their misfortune. There isn't much that's new in Europe or America that misses him, and there's always something novel to be seen in his overcrowded houses. Asked for his opinions on the chrysanthemums this year, Mr. Welsing's choices are: Whites—Robinson, Woodford, Ryerson and Weeks; Yellows—Australian Gold, Roosevelt, Golden Wedding, T. L. Park and Appleton. Crimson—Admiral Schley, Childs, Shrimpton and Cullingfordii; Pink—Morel, Perrin, P. Ivory, Glory Pacific.

Wm. S. Rennie is in charge of Mrs. Chas. Pratt's place. Lord & Burnham have but recently rebuilt the beautiful range of houses. A general collection of fine cut flowers and decorative plants can always be seen here. Chrysanthemums have been a splendid feature. Mr. Rennie's best varieties this season were: T. L. Park, Black Hawk, J. W. Goff, Waban, Lieut. Hobson, Roosevelt, Cornell and Barrington.

To sum up the Christmas flowers and plants among growers here, there will be more poinsettias than ever; lilies, doubtful quantity; roses in pots, none; daisies, plentiful; ardisias and oranges, fair supply; cypripediums, plenty; azalea, doubtful quantity; ericas, plenty; fair supply of decorative plants.

Thanksgiving Day Trade.

Thanksgiving trade was good, better than ever, but the oft repeated inquiry, "Have you any violets?" and the reply, "No, sir, we have not, I am sorry to say," became monotonous. Roses were all right, though none too plentiful, and American Beauty put on very aristocratic airs; eight and nine dollars a dozen retail produces nervousness in the asking and sourness in the paying, and yet they are worth every cent of it if you are going to get paid for your houses and labor.

Carnations were also in great demand, and many more could have been sold. But it was violets that were mostly missed. It is evident the crop is off, not here alone, but throughout the country. What is the cause? We believe that a very warm spell in October is the cause. It forced out the flowers in great quantity and the plants have since taken a rest. We know one place where they were picking twelve hundred a day seven weeks ago, and now they are picking the twelve without the hundreds. I believe they will be more plentiful at Christmas.

There is every reason to believe that the coming social season will be much gayer than for several seasons past. We can stand it.

Various Items.

Mr. C. D. Zimmerman has opened a very nice floral depot on West Chippewa St., a great thoroughfare. It is a greenhouse about 30x20 with a well appointed store office. It is a good move. A mammoth floral turkey some 8 feet high and 9 feet long was his Thanksgiving novelty. Body of galax leaves and wings and tail of cycas leaves. It must have been a good imitation, for I heard one hungry man say that next to sitting down to a fat turkey he liked to look at that one.

Mr. King is sojourning here laying down the great merit of Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening, and he finds a few who can afford to buy it.

The fall weather has been particularly favorable to the work on the Pan-American. The service or administration building is complete. The drainage and sewerage is done. Much heavy grading is accomplished and a large lot of trees and shrubs have been purchased and are on the ground. We have more confidence than ever that these 300 or 400 acres will be a wonderful place in 1901. W. S.

WANTED ON CRIMINAL CHARGE.

Otto Schubert (who sometimes goes under the name of Otto Swartz) is wanted at Crestline, Ohio, on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He was in the employ of Nicholas Amos, the florist, whose place he left Oct. 20th, and he is charged with taking $100 belonging to Mr. Amos and $500 belonging to another man. A warrant has been issued for his arrest. A liberal reward is offered for his apprehension. Following is his description:

He is a man about 40 years of age, height about 5 feet 6. Sandy complexion, hair gray and sandy mixed, short and thin; very light blue-gray eyes, the left eyeball slightly everted; bad teeth, and is perhaps without a mustache. He is very active, quick and jerky in movement and speech. Speaks good German but broken English.

When last seen wore a gray suit, a light gray overcoat with brown velvet collar, brown stiff hat and black shoes. He carried a large tan valise, which no doubt contained a black suit and black soft hat, which he took with him. He is an inveterate smoker.

Send all communications to Frank Miller, mayor of Crestline, Ohio.

BOSTON.

A hard fought, bloodless and perfectly successful revolution has taken place in the flower business of this noted borough. From a time of the most generous plenty, and small demand, to a period of the scantiest supply and a royal call for the goods all in one week is the record. Prices flew up like the gallant boys in blue at the hill of San Juan. The forward movement began four or five days before Thanksgiving and even now the man who charges the most is still considered the bravest. The co-operative market is of course the most active battlefield, as here the forces meet face to face in large numbers.

Chrysanthemum artillery scarce and of light bore at $1.50 and $2 per doz.; roses, fairly good ones from $1 to $2, and smaller ones at the top of the salesman's conscience; pinks, 3 to 6 cents, and quality not guaranteed; violets, $1.50 per 100 and more, and very bashful at that. Some few bulb goods now arriving and the usual variety, but not quantity, of other flowers and all selling great. Who would not a florist be? And the weather clerk is reeling us off fine summer weather by the web.

The heroic driver who takes the florist and his box from the station to the market with early dispatch and who can be depended upon to be at his post through thick and thin, is considered one of his best men, as they are really hard to find. So the news that one of the most reliable of the few utilized was killed by accident the day before Thanksgiving has called forth many expressions of regret. His horse fell upon the poor fellow twice, causing internal injuries from which he died a day or two later.

It seems Thomas Galvin is an expansionist all right. He has annexed the store adjoining his old store on Tremont street for a permanent thing, the story goes.

One of the most sensible ideas of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society is that of offering prizes to school children for collections of pressed flowers, etc. Their exhibition of the same last week was very interesting as well as highly instructive. Both halls were full of tables covered with them, each mounted upon cardboard upon which is written the formula required by the society. Of course the knowledge gained by the pupil in making out this formula is the main thing aimed at.

J. W. Howard, for many years identified with the seed and bulb business of the city and for eight or ten years occupying a very responsible position with W. W. Rawson, has relinquished his position to attend entirely to his rapidly growing floral trade at his Somerville and Charlestown stores. He will not need any best wishes. B. T.

NEW YORK.

All branches of the business expect an extra fine Christmas trade. Plantmen are sanguine, cut flower men are jubilant, all other varieties are expectant. What's the use of grumbling? Grow good stock, handle it properly, the public does the rest.

Holly and mistletoe (that is, good stock) have not put in an appearance yet. Cargoes are looked for this week. Prices are not quoted on mistletoe until we see what it's like. As to prices on cut flowers just now—well, whistle and wink; we'll give you them next week and later.

The Florists' Club will meet on Monday evening, Dec. 11th. Election of officers will take place and if you have anything extra fine, novel, or new in plant or flower bring it along.

The New York Gardeners' Society will meet at the Grand Central Palace, Forty-third street and Lexington avenue, at 8 p. m., Saturday, Dec. 9th. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected at this meeting, and new plants or flowers from any source will receive careful and considerate attention.

We speak thus of both the meetings because we know there are many fine new flowers in the country which ought to be shown at such meetings. The press prefers to encourage advance in horticulture than displays of oratory or definitions of parliamentary laws. Make the meetings educational—interesting.

J. N. Gallatin and T. W. Satterthwaite have opened a florist store at 491 Fifth avenue. This is two doors from Wadley & Smyth's floral establishment. Messrs. Gallatin & Satterthwaite have received quite a lot of advertising in the daily press, but—well, this is The Florists' Review; we can only look at honesty and art and appreciate both at their full value. We wish them success.

We were down to the law courts today and are fully conversant with a suit which has caused lots of unpleasantness in certain circles of our trade. Surely there is enough hard work and troubles in our business without resorting to law. We'd like the boys to shake hands and stand treat for the crowd; 'twould be better in results.

We are glad to be able to report that Mrs. A. S. Burns is quickly recovering from her severe illness.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

A great scarcity of stock has prevailed all of the past week. Nearly every line of stock has been short and prices remained high during Thanksgiving week. Although the weather has been exceedingly fine for a week, there seems little prospect for much increase in the supply for a week or so. Chrysanthemums have almost entirely disappeared and have little demand. This accounts for the increased demand in other lines. Crops of both carnations and roses are off and a great many of the growers speak of having a full crop for the coming holidays.

Beauties took the lead for Thanksgiving day sales. This rose is always in demand nowadays for all occasions. Meteors are beginning to show that objectionable blue black color that makes most of this stock unsalable. Bridesmaids, too, are sadly off color and could hardly be used for pink roses. Brides and Perles are somewhat improved in quality.

Carnations are very stiff now, fancy stock brings $5, and $2 is the price for fair common. Bulb stock is in fine condition and is selling at the regular price for this time of the year. Romans, valley and paper whites all are in good demand. Violets remain away up and Californias bring top prices and the demand is in excess of supply. Stevia sells in large bunches and has a fair demand.

Thanksgiving day trade was up to the usual standard; the market was well supplied with all kinds of flowers and the demand great. Out in the West End the florists claim that they were busy all day Wednesday and half the day Thursday. Take it all in all, the day was about the same as last year, only that stock was not so scarce last year. Quite a few shipping orders had to be turned down, owing to home orders that were in ahead. The commission men have nothing to complain of as they sold out clean early in the day and at good, round figures. They have one more day left this year to get a whack at the poor retailers, and that is Christmas.

Notes.

The exhibition committee wishes to thank Mr. James Gurney, Prof. Wm. Trelease and Phil Gable for their valuable assistance at our late show. Their beds of crotons and the new ageratum Stella Gurney were very pleasing to the eye of every florist, local as well as the visitors.

Max Herzog, out at Gratiot Station, has all his houses looking in tip-top shape and is cutting a lot of fine roses and carnations every day, which have first choice among the retailers.

Charlie Wors, at one time one of our leading commission men, is now selling flowers on the street corners.

J. W. Kunz, who, a few weeks ago, opened a retail store at 504 Olive street, is doing well and reports that his business for Thanksgiving was fine.

Fred Foster, at Eighth and Olive streets, has gone in the fruit business in connection with his flower store and makes a very pretty show in his two large show windows.

Misses Haug and Rudloff, florists, about a year ago leased the greenhouses of Mr. Klockenkemper. They put the place in first class shape and were cutting lots of fine carnations and roses. Now Mr. Klockenkemper takes the place from them on a snap judgment. The boys here feel very bad over the matter.

Next Thursday, the 14th, the regular monthly meeting of the club will be held and the members should not fail to be present to hear the report of the exhibition committee and the two essays. Also other important matters which require the presence of every member.

Visitors in town: Mr. J. W. Canaga, Shelbyville, Ill. Mr. Canaga ate Thanksgiving dinner in St. Louis with his parents, who live here.

Miss Nellie Croy, formerly with Frey & Frey, Lincoln, Neb., is in the city.

Bowling.

The bowling match between the Juniors and St. Louis Florists' Bowling Club came off Monday night and resulted in a clean victory for the older club. The Juniors did well, considering that they are not quite six months old. The older club did not roll with all their best men, such as Beyer, Sanders and Schray. After the match Mr. Ellison said that the Juniors would be ready for another match in February for a prize to cost not less than $25.

The match was rolled under the rules of the National Florists' Bowling Association. Beneke was high man for his side and Adels was high for the Juniors. The highest single score was made by Beneke; F. C. Weber, second. Adels also was high on single score for his side. J. W. Kunz and A. Y. Ellison were captains for their respective sides. Everything was pleasant and we had a good time. The scores were as follows:

The Market.

The scarcity of flowers continues and prices are holding up generally to Thanksgiving rates. In white roses the demand is not quite so brisk and prices are not quite so stiff as on colored sorts. In carnations the whites seem to be in even better demand than the colored ones. But there is ready sale at good figures for everything.

Chrysanthemums are practically done for the season. While prices on mums have at no time been extravagantly high the average returns have been very satisfactory and there have been no gluts at any time.

Violets dragged some last Thursday and it looked as though some losses would be made, but demand braced up on Friday and Saturday and took care of all in good shape.

The great scarcity on Tuesday preceding Thanksgiving was eased somewhat by increased receipts on Wednesday, quite a number of growers having made the same old mistake of holding back till too late to catch the shipping trade. As a result the city buyer who held off till the last moment had a little the best of it.

All the commission men agree that it is a bad mistake on the part of the grower to hold back stock at a holiday, and we notice that the growers who have their own city salesrooms do not do it. Experience has taught them better. The man who gets his supply in as regularly and evenly as possible is the one who gets the best average returns.

Both wholesalers and local retailers agree that the Thanksgiving day trade was the best ever experienced. And a very pleasant feature to the wholesaler was the small number of complaints from outside buyers. Stock seems to have carried well.

Kennicott Bros. Co. report that their November business surprised them by exceeding their December business of last year.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening there was an interesting discussion on the benefits of flower shows. It was opened by Mr. Edgar Sanders in a short paper which will appear in next week's issue.

Though the debate was entirely in favor of flower shows some very useful points were brought out, not the least of which was that should the shows be discontinued in this city there would undoubtedly be a glut and low prices at the time instead of the brisk demand and fancy figures that now prevail during flower show week.

Various Items.

In a general way the majority feel encouraged over the outlook for a good holiday supply of flowers, but there are some who are doubtful and say that the time is now so short that only unusually favorable weather will bring the crops along fast enough.

Christmas greens and other goods are moving freely. The supply of green has swelled up remarkably of late and there will surely be enough for all.

Bassett & Washburn report the largest Thanksgiving trade in their experience and rejoice over the fact that not a single complaint came from their customers.

Mr. Smith, of Smith & Feters, Cleveland, O., was a visitor this week.

McKellar & Winterson are displaying a fine stock of Cape flowers, immortelles and other seasonable goods.

Robert Kennicott Reilly, a nephew of Flint Kennicott, died Nov. 24. Though practicing law in this city he was the Co. of R. E. Kennicott & Co., of Carbondale.

DIXON, ILL.

Mrs. O. L. Baird died in Chicago Nov. 23. She had been a great sufferer for seven years. She left two children, aged 6 and 10 years.

The remains were brought home to this city for burial.

Butted Glass.

This is no longer an experiment, it has come to stay. There are various ways of making Butted Roofs, but the best way is with the Clipper Bar.

With this bar you can make a roof that is absolutely free from drip, and glass cannot be torn out by the wind. Butted glass makes a tight roof, a warm house and saves fuel. It lasts longer, looks better and costs less than the old-fashioned roof. But do not think that this is the only bar we sell, for it is not; we furnish what people want and there is nothing in greenhouse material that you cannot get from us, and all of open-air-dried Cypress clear of bright sap, stained sap, knots and all other defects.

PHILADELPHIA.

Trade has been very good the past week. The storekeepers report an old-time Thanksgiving, it being the best in many years; with Bridesmaids and American Beauties very scarce, not enough to go around. As for mums they have seen better days and are fast disappearing.

Mr. L. Kleeblott, who has been with the Floral Exchange for the past five years, has embarked in the florist's business for himself, opening a store last week at 1908 West Susquehanna avenue. He has designated it the Sharon Nurseries. Mr. K. intends to handle a general line of cut flowers and decorative plants.

Mr. A. B. Cartledge and Mr. Geo. Anderson are off on a ten days' gunning trip in North Carolina.

Julius Wolff, Jr., reports a very busy week, the principal event of the week being a big decoration at the Mercantile Club, which required eight loads of palms and decorative plants to do the work, to say nothing of the immense lot of cut flowers used. Also large bouquets showered with miniature incandescent lights. Mr. Wolff and his foreman, Mr. Dunning, were quite proud of the job.

Robert Kift reports an increasing demand for his unique adjustable hanging flower vase and plant holder. It is an ideal thing for short stemmed flowers. It is without a doubt indispensable for show window and house decoration, as it shows the plants or vase of flowers to the best possible advantage. It is one of those things that have to be seen to be appreciated.

Cut flower prices are about as follows: Beauties, $2 to $7.50 a doz.; Brides and Maids, $5 to $7 per 100; Perles, $5 to $6; Kaisersins, $5 to $10; Meteors, $5 to $8; Liberty, $15 to $25; carnations, $1.50 to $2.00; fancy sorts, $2.50 to $3; hyacinths, $3 to $4; valley, $3 to $5; single violets, 50 cents; doubles, 75 cents to $1; asparagus, 50 cents; smilax, 15; adiantums, $1.00 per 100; cypridiums, $2 per doz. or $15 per $100. SPRINGFIELD, O.

A meeting was recently held at the office of the Good & Reese Co. to arrange for an organization of the florists of this city.

Among the firms represented at this meeting were: McGregor Bros., the Geo. H. Mellin Co., Schmidt & Botley, the John A. Doyle Co., the Good & Reese Co. and the C. A. Reeser Co. (of Urbana). A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws.

Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best on the market, and if your other specialties are equally as good, they should make another addition to the money-makers of 1900.

Respectfully,

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the last meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society 43 members were present. Four new members were elected and four more applications for membership were received. The treasurer reported a balance of about $200 in the treasury after all expenses of the recent exhibition had been paid. Mr. Turner, superintendent of the exhibition, and the judges were given the thanks of the society for their valuable services. It was decided that the hour of meeting be changed from 8 to 7 o'clock.

Nominations of officers were made and the election will take place at the next meeting, Dec. 28, after which a collation will be served and a sociable evening spent.

In my report of the exhibition I inadvertently omitted mention of the exhibits of Mr. John Fursey, florist, Yonkers. He showed two fine floral pieces for which he was awarded two special first prizes. We hope that premiums will be offered for floral arrangements at the next exhibition.

The local florists report that business is good and that more business has been done this fall than for a number of years at this season.

The Grand New Rose

LIBERTY

Won Highest Honors Wherever Shown.
The Finest Crimson Forcing Rose of the Century.

Most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size and freedom of bloom—never showing any deformed, black or bull heads, either in winter or summer. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping.

its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance. To be sure of getting the best crimson forcing rose of the century and A1 stock, send your orders at once to the undersigned or his agents mentioned below. My stock for March delivery being all sold, I can only take orders for delivery in April and later. All orders filled strictly in rotation. First come, first served.

I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all lovers of the Queen of Flowers to come and see LIBERTY growing.

WASHINGTON.

Bright weather and lots of fine stock brought the buyers out for Thanksgiving, giving the florist lots of fine business. Stock of all kinds was plentiful and all bought up, thus making a record breaker in the way of receipts.

Roses of all kinds brought 8 and 10 cents; carnations went up as high as 3 cents for ordinary stock; violets went humming at $1; mums went at $1 to $3 per dozen and none left at that.

Following Thanksgiving came the convening of Congress. The Senate Chamber and the House of Congress were virtually turned into a garden of flowers, for there were more flowers there than has been for years. Some of the local dealers carried as high as eight wagonloads of baskets and bouquets. Some designs were quite elaborate in style as well as expensive. The larger designs were made by A. Gude & Bro., J. R. Freeman, J. H. Small & Son and The American Rose Co.

Mr. Eschner, of Rice & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor this week.

HOLYOKE, MASS.

E. H. Howland has just closed an exhibition which lasted four days and was attended by a host of admirers of the Queen of Autumn. In addition to the highly attractive display, an additional drawing card was the offer of a prize to the namer of a fine white seedling raised by Mr. Sinclair, the grower. Above one hundred names were submitted, many being original and suggestive.

Messrs. Canning, of the Botanic Gardens, and Copeland, of Northampton, found the task of selection a difficult one, but finally decided upon "Valley Queen" as being the most appropriate. The successful donor of the name was awarded a prize, a handsome palm, which doubtless the happy young lady is showing her many friends, and Mr. Howland is receiving lots of advertising in consequence.

S. H.

THERE IS nothing in the way of a Christmas gift to a friend in the trade that will be more appreciated than a copy of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott.

ETHEL CROCKER.

Absolutely the best pink Carnation ever offered the trade. Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself, you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from Sept. to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. Herr's Pansies at $4.00 now, and a regular assortment of Carnations in a list ready Jan. 1st. ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

American Beauty, Bridesmaid, Perle, Bride, Sunset, Meteor, Morgan, Testout, Mermet, La France, 3, 3½ and 4-inch.

A. S. McBean, Lakewood, N. J.

The grand new rose Liberty, most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size; never showing any deformed, black or bull heads either in winter or summer and far surpassing Meteor in freedom of bloom. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance. Prices are as follows for A1 stock: Own rooted plants in 2½-inch pots, 12 plants, 60c; 25 plants, 50c; 50 plants, 30c; 100 plants, 25c; 1000 plants, 20c each. Grafted plants in 2½-inch pots: 12 plants, 75c; 25 plants, 60c; 50 plants, 50c; 100 plants, 40c; 1000 plants, 35c each. Satisfactory reference or deposit from all unknown correspondents. Orders coming in after this date can be filled only in April or later, as my stock for March delivery is all sold.

The Florists' Manual, by William Scott, is a complete reference book for commercial florists.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Thanksgiving trade this year was but little inferior to Christmas trade of last. Everything sold out close, particularly roses and carnations, of which there were not enough to go around. Prices on previous similar holidays were never so high as on this occasion.

Roses at the stores sold for $1.25 per doz.; Beauties, $2 to $3.50; carnations, 35 to 50 cents; violets, from 20 to 30 cents, with light sales on this one flower only. Outside demand was in excess of the supply at $2 to $2.50 per 100 wholesale.

Mums at Smith's went from $1 to $2; they were heavily stocked and put the $2 price on to make sure of selling their best out close, which they did. Cunningham got as high as $3 for his mums and when asked if plants or cut flowers sold best replied, "Don't know; sold out every plant and cut flower we had and could have sold more." The Floral Co. and Renwick sing the same refrain, both claiming trade far in excess of last year. It might be roughly averaged that the money value of this year was from 40 to 50 per cent. better than last.

If Christmas is to be better than Thanksgiving with its stock of mums to draw from, what on earth are we going to do for flowers?

The next club meeting will be held at the Eagle hotel, Tuesday evening, Dec. 19th. GEO. F. CRABB.

YOU will surely want a copy of Mr. Scott's great reference book, The Florists' Manual. It is now ready for delivery. Price $5.00.

NEW CASTLE, IND.

The South Park Floral Co. are building a new range of houses which, when completed, will make their establishment one of the largest in the west devoted exclusively to the growing of roses for cut flowers outside of Chicago.

They will erect seven large houses for the growing of American Beauties and will plant their present ten houses in Brides and Maids.

William Dittman will continue as their grower, while Herbert Heller will have the general supervision of the place.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Business has picked up very much during the last few weeks, although prices are somewhat lower than they were at this date last year. The abundant rains during October and November have been a godsend to all growers of outside stuff. Owing to the early rains violets are coming in from the growers in large quantities, and as a consequence poor prices are being obtained.

Thanksgiving day was marked with sunshine and a victory for the blue and gold over the cardinals, the score being 30 to 0.

Business was 40 per cent. better than at this time last year. Good inside chrysanthemums, Bonnaffons, brought $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen. Outside chrysanthemums were poor and brought 50 to 75 cents per dozen. Reds sold at $1 per dozen. American Beauties, first grade, $4; seconds, $2.50 and $3 per dozen; Bridesmaids, $1 and $2; Brides, 75 cents and $1 per dozen.

In carnations, Portias sold well, 4 and 6 dozen for $1. Scotts were fine and brought 25 cents per dozen. Fine Flora Hills were 25 to 35 cents per dozen. Violets were grand and sold at $1 for Californias, $1.50 for Princess of Wales, per dozen bunches. Roman hyacinths, 25 to 30 cents per dozen. Paper white narcissus, $1 per 100. Free-sias have made their first appearance and sell at 25 cents per dozen.

On Thanksgiving eve Sievers' and Borland's store on Post street looked grand. Two boxes of lily of the valley were extremely well done; also a vase of their beautiful carnation, Anna Hobart.

Mr. Thomas Stevenson, "The London Florist," on Powell street, made a fine display of chrysanthemums, and one window filled with Roman hyacinths and Princess of Wales violets was a treat. Mrs. Stevenson says they did a good Thanksgiving business. Everything went, even the turkey (at the table, I suppose).

Mr. John Jack, head gardener for the California Jockey Club, has a fine lot of cinerarias in bloom, fully 4 feet in height and 3 feet across, grown in a cold-frame, and go to show the skill of this worthy Scotchman.

Mr. Vallance, with the Cox Seed & Plant Co., who has been ill for some time, is now much improved in health and it is to be hoped will soon be all right again.

Trumbull & Beebe, nursery and seedsmen, on Sansome street, report business good and many orders coming in, the result of the early rains all over the state. J. N.

A VERY appropriate Christmas gift to an appreciated employee would be a copy of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott.

We are now gathering our new

LOOK OUT FOR HIM.

A man named James Griffith, who was in the employ of Thomas Franks, Champaign, Ill., for about five weeks, left there Nov. 30, taking with him about $25 worth of ribbon, an overcoat and some money belonging to his employer.

Mr. Franks is of the opinion that he has been making a practice of working a few weeks at a place and then disappearing with whatever he can lay his hands on, and desires to warn brother florists against him.

He is an Englishman, about 5 feet 8 inches tall, and when last seen wore a dark suit, a black shirt with a small white stripe in it and a dark necktie. He had a black derby hat and a new pair of shoes. Clean shaven and a rather rough appearance. He is a pretty good florist and talks a good deal of where he has traveled.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Preparing for Christmas.

This will assuredly be a "plant Christmas." Every retailer of note has made provisions for it, and it is only a possible severity of weather that will in any way injure their hopes for this branch of the trade. This vigorously increasing growth of the plant trade for Christmas is a matter to be regretted on all sides. It bodes the greatest evil to the cut flower trade and that is the great foundation stone, aye, the principal pillar of our business. It is undesirable to split the Easter trade. It is inconvenient and troublesome for retailers to handle plants at Christmas—but what were we to do? The uncertainty, the poor quality of stock and the exorbitant prices were not alone sufficient to impair the sanity of the retailers, but it stunned the public and would shortly have destroyed the Christmas trade altogether.

In our business perhaps more than in any other it is "live and learn." It is bad policy to be continually disputing and trying to fly in the face of facts. High prices were never conducive to the expansion of trade. If growers cannot see the error of demanding extraordinary prices for salted flowers at Christmas, there are many hundreds of houses devoted to cut flowers today which will either be turned into plant houses or wrecks in a few years from now.

It is a source of much satisfaction to be able to go to your plantsman, see the plants, and know what you are to pay for the goods weeks or months before you need them. Whereas with the cut flower element one is continually on the gridiron until the very last day and then mostly all is disappointment. Plants last longer and give more satisfaction, of course they do—but they cause a decrease in the demand for flowers simply because they last so long. The successful or artistic retail florist has powerful influence with the public, he is a more important factor than the grower in the advancement of floriculture. The American people love flowers and will have them either on the plant or cut. We are in favor of the live and let live policy and would like to see every one succeed, but if any element is looking towards exacting all the wealth and pleasure there is in life, why, we agree with teaching them a lesson.

Holly is a great disappointment this year. What we have seen so far is very poor, compared with that of other years. The reason given is that all the available holly trees were butchered up last year by all manner of speculators and it will be years before the outrage can be effaced. This same thing is fast depleting the American landscape from much of its great charms in the way of evergreens. The Jersey and Connecticut coasts were once beautiful with stately hemlock, juniper, arborvitae and fir, now scarcely a decent looking one remains, and we are informed 'tis so all through the New England states. Even the woods of Maine are being dismantled without reason or cause. Over a quarter of a million Christmas trees are shipped to New York every year. They are mostly piled up along the docks in West street. Grocers and butchers and all manner of dealers handle and dispose of this stock.

Now let us see what we are going to have and what we are going to do for Christmas! We are busy on wreaths to hang in windows. They are going to be very popular again this year. Now you know if you want well made wreaths you must have them specially done for you. Holly, of course will lead. Make the wreath good and full; you can pack the inside with the poor material or with Princess pine, but have them good and round on both sides and have your extra special ones made in laureate shape, that is, both sides facing up, a cluster of berries at the bottom, with a good cluster of narrow ribbon, or it will do without. A good holly wreath is worth from $1 to $2.

There will be a few wreaths of mistletoe tied with berry colored gauze, but they will not be as popular as the bunches. Princess pine wreaths made round and full, with or without red immortelle stars, are going to sell well, so are laureate shaped wreaths of boxwood and cluster of berries. There is not going to be anything specially new in this line of work. The only thing is that the best work will sell first, and we know many a good customers has been caught through having finely made wreaths on exhibition for Christmas. If you use ribbon it should not be cheap looking nor too small. Silks will be better than satins, but neither should be the best part of the work.

Speaking of ribbons there promises to be quite enough of it used this season. Don't abuse it and be careful of the color harmony. Everything is supposed to be bright and cheerful for the great festival, and whilst we may take a greater latitude in our fanciful creations there are often times if we could only see our work midst the surroundings they often get among we would have cause to disown it. This applies to the milliner florist who cannot handle a carnation or violet without wanting to put a sash of ribbon around it, and the exuberant crepe paper artist who imagines every plant a doll and dresses it accordingly. As we have often said before, anything is almost preferable to a dirty plant pot, but, heavens, where's the sense of choking up the plant?

The best stores this year will show their plants in baskets. Some very fine work is seen already. Most of the baskets are of green luffa and the shapes are mostly after the classical antique vases, though there are some fine effects made from palm fiber in natural color. Small orange trees look elegant and have a native touch about them in these basket vases. All manner of plants will be sold singly, but most will be made up in baskets to sell for $5, $10, $15 and upwards. Almost any variety of flowering plant in good condition will sell well; top the pot off with green moss, holly or small ferns. You are liable to sell quite a few palms, ferns and foliage plants, but must put them where they can be seen.

In the matter of cut flowers one can never be positive until the last. Catleyas will be scarce; they are now bringing 50 cents wholesale and should not be sold for less than $10 or $12, that is, fairly good ones. Cypripediums will be plentiful; 12½ cents is what they are costing now and they are too plentiful to raise very much in price; they will retail at $4 or $5. Dendrobium phalaenopsis are plentiful and will retail at 15 or 20 cents a flower. Orchids are almost a nonentity for Christmas. They are mostly used to fill the delicate little vases customers send you to take care of weeks before. Valley, paper whites and Romans promise to be plentiful and cannot be very high in price. It is the fine grades of roses, carnations and violets which make us anxious, and from what we have seen there will be lots of carnations, few violets, and not a large quantity of extra fine roses, and from what we see now prices will not differ very much. Plants will interfere with and keep the market rates steadier.

Harrisias will sell for good figures, say $5 or $6. New flowers will be in demand. We hear one new carnation in New York is retailing now at $6 per doz. Stevia, callas and such stock will be plentiful. Keep your eye on the Meteors, Beauties and good Maids. We must leave our price list until the next paper.

Christmas means a great deal to the world in general, and among other things hard work, worry and vexations to the florist. The fatigue and chagrin of the long hours and ceaseless inquiries can be lightened by the exercise of a little thought and common sense. Let your help get their meals somehow. If they cannot spare time to go out, get it in the store for them; a cup of coffee to enable the inner man to meet the outer man means more in results than aught you can say or do. IVERA.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Christmas Preparations.

Every year of late the plant business has been more and more a feature of the Christmas trade. This has been largely brought about by the extremely high prices of cut flowers, and quality has not always risen correspondingly with prices, so the public has found they can get more for their money and have turned to plants. You cannot do much in preparatory work in flowers, but you can with plants do a great deal to help the rush go smoothly.

All wreaths and wreathing should be made up at the earliest possible moment and got out of the way several days before Christmas, for all hands, however much help you have, will be wanted the last few days. You can buy laurel wreathing cheaper and better than you can make it yourself and it keeps splendidly in any cool place. Holly wreaths you cannot buy equal to your own making, for when sent packed in cases they get flattened out and unsightly. A cool, dark cellar is the place for these, and so it is for the ground pine wreaths and wreathing, but if you don't have such a cellar a deep, tight frame outside will do very well, providing you don't pile them up too much. Snow and ice is all right for the ground pine, but holly should not be frozen too hard or you will lose many berries. The principal object to observe in keeping the ground pine and holly is coolness and closeness; keep light and air away from them.

The handling of flowering plants at Christmas, particularly if it is what our northern people profess to enjoy, zero with good sleighing, is a difficult matter, and there is room for lots of good sense and judgment. There is no set rule for wrapping up any plant, and I know of no article handled by other merchants that calls for the same care and horse sense. A turkey, a bonnet, a doll, a box of candy, or even a live baby will stand a little frost, or at least is easily wrapped up, but an azalea, a palm or poinsettia will tax all your care and experience to get them landed at their destination in perfect order.

Those who have a good sized heated delivery wagon have at this season a great advantage, for a slight covering of paper round the plant is sufficient to protect it while going from the wagon to the door. Heated wagons are, however, as yet not the rule, and many of us rely on long, close fitting boxes, laying the plants down after being well wrapped in paper and in the order in which they are to be delivered. There is a great deal in first appearances and although what I am going to say may sound entirely superfluous to many, yet you still see plants delivered in very crude shape. The present day demands neatness if not style. Two colored gentlemen in gold lace, sitting on an automobile, I have not yet seen delivering flowers, but the colored folks in gold we have, and the other will soon be started on Broadway, New York, or Tremont street, Boston, and delivering Mrs. Lawson carnations at $9 per dozen in anything but an "autbil" seems degrading and beneath the dignity of her divinity.

Newspaper does well for the commission man to keep out frost, but will never do to wrap up a two dollar cyclamen. I protest against any plant being sent out, however warm the weather, with the bare pot. It should have a sheet of wrapping paper covering the pot, whatever the season. Time spent in carefully and thoroughly wrapping a plant is well spent. And remember that it need not be freezing to greatly injure a plant. If the thermometer should be 40 degrees with a cutting wind and the bare flowers of an azalea or poinsettia or lily were exposed five minutes to it you would see in an hour or two some brown and wilted flowers.

There are some plants that can be partially hardened off for a few days before sold and will then feel less the change from greenhouse to store or house, or perhaps church, but you should not remove anything to a much cooler house unless it is well out. A poinsettia may be growing in 70 degrees; if fully developed it won't hurt in 50 degrees. A Harrisii lily will do in 40 degrees, the heaths in anything above freezing. Cyclamen are never grown warm, still 40 degrees for a few nights will stiffen them some. Azaleas have been truly forced and it would be the greatest benefit to give them a cool house for a week before being sold.

Customers for plants, and we expect many of them, will not all wait till the last day or two. Many sensible people will order a week ahead and that enables us to get out the orders, which is an immense advantage. For several seasons we have greatly expedited business by adopting a system and thoroughly adhering to it. Clear off 50 feet of bench or as much as your business needs. Cover it with coarse paper and have it in sections for the several days preceding Christmas. Directly a plant is sold and ordered delivered Friday, Dec. 22, it is put on the space allotted to Friday's delivery, the address card and donor's card attached, the pot washed, and it is all ready to be wrapped.

It will do no harm if it is there several days. No syringing is necessary. If you are busy with customers or other necessary work you can in the evening wrap up securely these orders that are to be delivered on Friday. Two or three handy men, if not bothered or called away, can do a great deal of wrapping in a few hours. We take a memorandum of every order, whether it is cash or charged, and when once the plant is wrapped ready for delivery the order is put away with that day's business so that it can be readily referred to.

Noah or some other ancient philosopher said that "mistakes occur in the best regulated families." This was occasioned by the monkey eating the squirrel's share of nuts in the ark, but the fewer mistakes the better for our business and peace of mind.

A good, smart, clear headed delivery man is a jewel and well worthy his hire, but while he knows the large run of your customers you should not tax his ability too far on these extraordinary occasions, and you will have all kinds of people delivering at this time.

Don't begrudge clerical help. One delivery gone wrong will pay the wages of a man who will write a thousand address cards for you. So we find the safest and only plan where two or three dozen plants are sent on one delivery wagon is to write on the address card the name and address and in addition what the article is if there is more than one plant for the same person. To illustrate: "Mrs. White, number and street; 1 lily, 1 poinsettia, 1 cyclamen." This label goes on one plant and on the other two just the name and address. Nothing less is safe. And although this may seem fussy it will pay over and over again. WM. SCOTT.

HISTORY OF THE JUBILEE CARNATION.

John Hartje was asked how he happened to originate the above carnation, and in reply, he says:

"In January, 1891, I attended a meeting of the Society of Indiana Florists at Lafayette. The members present were entertained most royally by Mr. Dorner and were shown his carnation houses. One was full of seedlings, and I understood him to say that they were cutting from 500 to 600 blooms per day from this house (about 100x20), and were retailing them at 75 cents and $1.00 per dozen. I went home full of inspiration, and with a bad case of seedling fever.

"I did not know much about hybridizing. Had the following varieties to work on: Grace Wilder, Century, Grace Fardon, Pres. Garfield, Silver Spray and Crimson King. The flower intended to be seeded was prepared by pulling out some of the petals, so the pistils would project somewhat. Then I cut off a bloom from some other variety, and would rub them together. I would often cross a pod with two or three varieties, and occasionally use side flowers for seeding. We did not disbud in those days.

"The seeds of all the pods were gathered and put into one package, no record being made of any of the crosses. Seed was laid away for a week or so and then planted. Had about 800 plants, and out of this number a little over 200 kinds were propagated; from 5 to 20 of each variety were tested. Jubilee was not thought much of as but five plants were grown.

"About five days before the meeting of the Carnation Society at Pittsburg, I went over to Richmond and took a flower along to show it to Mr. Hill. He was not at home, so I left it there. This same flower was afterward shown at the meeting, and commented upon by the judges. The stock was afterward sold to Mr. Hill. Other red varieties have been introduced since Jubilee, but so far have not taken its place. I think Crane and America are dangerous rivals."

NEW YORK.

The Market.

At this time of writing there is more guessing than aught else as to what the cut flower trade will be the next two weeks. The weather so far has been unusually warm, which is bad for the holding back of stock. Very few advance orders have been given, unless for very special stock. Prices are gradually creeping upwards. Saturday, December 9, ordinary carnations brought $1.50 and $2; a few fairly good Bonnaillon and Robinsons, $2 per dozen; paper whites, 6 cents; Romans, 1½ and 2 cents; Harrisils, $2; valley, from $2 to $5; Liberty, $4 per dozen; Testouts, $8 to $15; ditto Maids and Brides, also Victorias; Beauties, 60 cents, and so on. Of course, no prices could then be quoted for Christmas.

Holly is selling slowly at any price up to $5 per case for the best. The Greeks were selling valley at 10 cents a bunch of four or five flowers and leaves on Saturday last; a retailer could not buy them for that.

New York Florists' Club.

There was quite a large gathering at the meeting on Monday night last. The following were elected to office for the convention year: President, Patrick O'Mara; vice-president, Arthur Herrington; treasurer, Charles Weathered; secretary, John Young; Messrs. Wm. Plumb, John N. May and W. A. Manda were elected trustees of the club.

It was decided to hold the club's annual dinner at the time of the annual meeting of the executive committee of the S. A. F. Messrs. John N. May, Walter Sheridan and Charles Weathered were appointed a committee to make arrangements for this event.

F. W. Kelsey brought up the matter of delays in the transmission of goods through the custom house. After long discussion the matter was referred to the legislative committee. Mr. O'Mara has been appointed by the Merchants' Association as special representative of the florists and nursery trade. There will be an important meeting in January to look after trade interests and Mr. O'Mara will be glad to present any specific cases of delay; in any case write him full particulars.

Phil. Breitmeyer was present and made a few remarks, wishing the club the same success as the Detroit boys had with the S. A. F.

Messrs. Siebrecht, Withers, Sheridan, Asmus and Atkins were appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions from the trade in general for the proposed permanent "Dewey Arch."

The disposition of the club's gold and silver medals to be offered at the Rose Society's show in March was left with the board of trustees.

Resolutions on the lamented death of the late Mrs. J. H. Taylor, Mrs. John Morris and W. H. Brower were passed, ordered spread on the minutes, and copies sent to bereaved relatives.

New fancy foliaged cyclamens were exhibited by Lehnig & Winnefeldt, Hackensack, N. J. These specimens were remarkably well grown and were awarded cultural recommendation, with the request that they be shown again.

Mr. C. W. Ward showed his fine new carnation Governor Roosevelt. The club's certificate was recommended in the usual form. Mr. Ward also exhibited a very promising numbered seedling, which was highly praised. Mr. Ward reported that he had visited Dailedouze Bros. in order to comply with the exhibition rules of the club and he heartily recommended their new carnation 666 the club's certificate.

Another new carnation, No. 4, exhibited by Dailedouze Bros. was awarded a certificate subject to the usual rules. James Whitcomb Riley, also shown by the above, was highly commended, as were also Lulu Fischer, exhibited by Mr. Fischer, of Great Neck, L. I., and several seedlings from Lehnig & Winnefeldt, which the committee recommended be shown again.

The entertainment committee provided refreshments and a general good time, which were attended to and enjoyed after the adjournment.

The annual dinner of the Westchester (N. Y.) County Gardeners' Association (to which your correspondent has received a cordial invitation) will be given at the Irving Hotel, Portchester, Saturday, Dec. 16, at 7 o'clock. Robert Williamson, William Anderson and Robert Jenkins, Jr., comprise the committee of arrangements.

Mr. E. Jansen, the well known basket manufacturer, has recently sold considerable of his property on Nineteenth street to Altman Bros., the large dry goods firm. Mr. Jansen is busy attending to the erection of a fine new building, No. 112, 114 and 116 West Eighteenth street, which he intends to occupy in time for the convention next August.

The regular monthly meeting of the New York Gardeners' Society was held at the Grand Central Palace, Saturday, Dec. 9th. The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, William Bartholomae; Vice-President, Adolph Welsing; Secretary, Joseph A. Manda; Treasurer, Frank Pierkovsky.

We regret to inform you that Mr. John H. Taylor had one of his legs broken in a recent carriage accident.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The majority of the wholesalers report the market easier on roses and carnations, except Beauties. Good Beauties are exceedingly scarce. Aside from Beauties, there now seems enough of everything to go around, though the quality is not up to the standard for the season. Violets are moving much less freely and at times there is a surplus. Romans and narcissus also move more slowly. There is practically no change in quotations, though these are not so stiffly held in many cases as last week.

There is quite a variety of opinions as to the outlook for Christmas supply. The present dark weather causes many to fear a serious shortage. Growers say the buds are there, but they must have sun to open them. And some who were confident of having a crop in for Christmas say they won't have the real thing till later, especially if the present weather conditions continue.

A good deal of guessing is being done as to Christmas prices. The only list yet definitely adopted is that of Bassett & Washburn, which is as follows: Beauties, per doz., extra long, $12 to $15; 24-inch, $9 to $10; 20-inch, $8; 15-inch, $6; 12-inch, $4; 8-inch, $2. Brides and Maids, extra, $15 per 100; No. 1, $12; No. 2, $8; Meteor, extra, $18; No. 1, $15; No. 2, $10; Perles, No. 1, $12; No. 2, $8. Carnations, extra fancy, $8; fair average fancy, $6; No. 1 common, $4; No. 2, $3. And Mr. Washburn says they will have no Beauties to sell outside of regular orders. They will, however, have a fine crop of teas. Prospects for carnations dubious.

Kennicott Bros. Co. think that there will be enough to go around at Christmas, with the exception of Beauties. Their advice is, "Don't order Beauties."

E. C. Amling thinks Christmas quotations will run about the same as for the last two years ($12 to $15 on tea roses), but that roses will be held at outside quotation, and that carnations will go up to $5.

Christmas comes on Monday, which means that much of the shipping will be done on Sunday, and it should not be forgotten that express trains are not so frequent as on week days. This should be borne in mind in placing orders, and probably quite a few shipments will be made on Saturday instead.

In view of this condition, growers had best have as much of their cut reach the commission man on Saturday as possible. Don't hold back till the last day under any circumstances. "Holding back helps the big grower out, as it gives him a chance to clear out his whole cut at good figures before the other fellows get their stock in," is the way one of the big growers puts it. But the result is really bad for all.

McKellar & Winterson think there will be flowers enough for all at ruling rates if the growers will keep their cut coming in. They will have a good supply of poinsettias for Christmas, as will also E. H. Hunt.

The supply of bouquet green has materially increased during the past week and there promises to be sufficient green and holly for all demands.

Various Items.

We hear rumors of important changes among the wholesalers that are to take place Jan. 1.

The leading retailers in the residence sections are doing a splendid business, having a heavy run of decorations for "coming out" parties. Fine roses are largely used at these affairs, and many of them are taking place on Saturdays. C. A. Samuelson used 1,200 Bridesmaids in such decorations last Saturday.

Mr. C. J. Stromback has fully recovered from his recent illness and is again attending to his duties at Lincoln Park.

The bowling team has joined the American Bowling League and is team No. 6 in that organization. They will play their first league games next Friday evening, 15th inst.

Mr. E. Dailledouze, Flatbush, N. Y., is in the city.

Branches of a very pretty red berried shrub called "Winter Berry" have been very freely sold in this market lately. It is Ilex verticillata (syn. Prunus verticillata). The stems are devoid of foliage, but the berries are very plentiful and bright in color and the branches have been used with very fine effect.

PHYSOSTEGIA VIRGINIANA ALBA.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a white form of this native American perennial which was sent to us by Mr. C. K. Schnelder, Darmstadt, Germany, who writes that in the nurseries of Mr. H. Henkel, in that city, many hundreds of the plants are to be seen and that they supply large quantities of flowers for cutting. In these nurseries the plants begin to bloom July 1, and continue in bloom till autumn.

The type, which bears pinkish white flowers, is indigenous to the vicinity of Chicago, and is found plentifully on wet banks. It bears the common name of False Dragon Head. The white form is undoubtedly a decided improvement on the type and should be useful in American gardens.

BUFFALO.

Trade Conditions.

A big snowstorm that came so suddenly that it prostrated the trolley lines, with one zero night and now dark, rainy, sloppy weather, are the climatic features we have to record for the past seven days. As we have no bowling to record, we must fall back on the weather. We suspect it is the elements, of which we are all so much the creatures, that accounts for the great scarcity of flowers. Of violets and carnations there is a great shortage, much more so than is usual. This will have to be a plant Christmas with many.

Holly has arrived, and if it is all as good as that supplied by our Mr. Kastling, we are in luck. His first consignment of two carloads is splendid. We can feel in the air that this is going to be an "old-fashioned" Christmas. Greenery of all kinds will be used to an immense extent. Rhododendron sprays from the Adirondacks will this year mingle its somber green with other products of the forest.

A Trip to Hamburg.

We took a jaunt to Hamburg, Erie county yesterday to visit that good grower and thorough student of his business, C. T. Guenther. The place is not yet eighteen months old, but much has been done in that short time. There are eight or nine houses, mostly 100x20, and entirely devoted to roses and carnations, well built, steam heated and what is most gratifying to the writer, there is not an ounce of putty on the whole place. The next time some presumptuous young man slaps me on the back and says: "W. S., you ought to know better than talk this butted glass fad," I hope to have Mr. Guenther at my side. He will shut him up if I can't. Mr. G. worked in Germany, England and several of the very best places in this country and has seen for himself, and now he says: "I would not dream of ever doing anything but butt my glass."

His roses, Brides, Bridesmaids and Kaiserins, are in grand order. Most of his carnation houses are looking splendid. The exceptions are those planted in solid beds in the spring. They are by no means bad, but Mr. G. says no more of it for him. He will in future put them all in the field and lift very early in August.

What to grow in carnations is beginning to be a puzzle, as it was with mums a few years ago. Mr. G. says: "I like Flora Hill; it is early and productive," and I agree with him, although his White Clouds are immense. He likes Mrs. Joost and so do I; it is destined to entirely supersede Scott. Mrs. Bradt with him is free and magnificent. As he grows Armazindy it is indispensable. Triumph will have to go, but Victor is large, free and profitable. It is pleasant to see Genesee so well done as it is here, but the greatest revelation was a bench of Red Jacket, grand stem, fine flower, and lots of them. My opinion of Red Jacket was that it always looked promising but you never realized, but now I am convinced that it can be grown well and profitably.

Sub-Watering.

Mr. Guenther can show you his experiment with sub-watering. He has sixteen feet of bench about five feet wide, beneath which is a galvanized iron tray; on that are the bricks, and then four inches of soil. It is Prof. Arthur's plan carried out faithfully. Excepting the first watering when planted (three months ago), the bed has only received water from below. An adjoining sixteen feet is bricks stood close together on the ordinary bench and soil on top of them, and watered, of course, on the surface. Next comes the usual board bench. All one variety. The sixteen feet of true sub-watering looks slightly better than any and the brick drainage a trifle better than the ordinary bench. But the difference between all is not very marked. Mr. Guenther says rather decisively that the expense of the water-tight bench and bricks precludes its commercial use.

Before we left Mr. G. showed us the use of the "Aphis Punk," which he says destroys fly to a certainty, and after repeated trials cannot see the least harm that it has done to the roses. It certainly emits nicotine enough to make a Baggs or a cat sneeze. The visit was profitable and pleasant and on the ride home we found ourselves singing the innocent little refrain that we remember from our early musical education, "How pleasant it is at the close of the day no follies to have to repent, but look back on the past and be able to say, my time has been properly spent."

Plant and Flower Beggars.

The most important club meeting in some years occurred last Wednesday. The begging and borrowing of palms and flowers for church fairs, bazaars and many other such affairs has grown to be an intolerable nuisance; not one beggar a day, but some of us get five and six a day. Not only is it a great tax on our business, but loaning out palms has actually belittled the business. A decoration of palms is no longer thought good taste for they can be seen everywhere, even to a dog show; not very long since we had some palms at such an affair and they absorbed so much of the flavor of doggie that for months we had to say, when sending out palms for a decoration: "Be sure and don't take any of the dog palms."

Why should we give away incessantly a bunch of flowers to every fussy, cheeky individual who wants to do something for charity? So much could be said on the subject, and doubtless we are not the only ones; other cities suffer likewise. It has come to a stop here, and suddenly. We have all signed an agreement that, after the 15th of Dec., all solicitations for donations will be refused. Every florist has deposited a sum of money with the president of the club, which, on proof of violation of the agreement, will be forfeited.

A copy of the agreement will be given every one of us and we intend to have it neatly framed, so when Mrs. Chronic Sympathy wants a few palms and a few flowers for the seventeenth anniversary of the Cold Water Section of the Daughters of Rebecca, we shall show her in big type our agreement, and if all will stick to it loyally this scourge to our business is at an end, and the earnestness of all in the business portends its success.

Of course, there are some fine people who spend their money with you freely and seldom or ever ask a favor, but if they should, and then it would only be for a public hospital, we have provided to meet such cases. The text of the business agreement, as well as that we have to show our customers, will be gladly furnished you when you have time to print it. There are a few sweet souls in the world who have in their hearts, or rather in their heads, the feeling that was taught the early Christians, "that it is better to give than receive," but by far the greatest number of our nominal Christians are less removed from the hog.

David, the Son of William.

David J., the fifth son of William Scott, has left home to work for Mr. Robert Craig & Son, of Philadelphia. We feel sure he will work hard, but we are not so sure that he will awake in time. "Read, mark, learn and inwardly digest." Some of us wish we had made better use of our time when young. Then we could have easier times now.

W. S.

ST. LOUIS.

Business Conditions.

So far this month the business with retail florists has been satisfactory, and with the holidays close at hand, we will have nothing to complain of. Nearly all the florists are busy making wreathing, wreaths, bells, stars, and other holiday goods.

The store fronts are beginning to look Christmassy. A few of our large department stores are this year handling greens of all kinds. Union Market is full of it, and by next week the street fakir will be selling wreaths and wreathing in place of flowers.

Most of the growers seem to think that they will have a large crop for Christmas; of course much depends on the weather. We sincerely hope the growers will not think of picking their roses this year, as no doubt they have learned better by this time. It is different with carnations, violets and other flowers, which can be kept back with perfect safety.

Shipping trade was not up to the average the past week. Quite a lot of Christmas orders have been placed; still, many of the retailers are holding off until they know something of the prices likely to prevail. It is not expected that very high prices will rule, but no doubt they will advance somewhat the first part of the week.

Beauties are still scarce, and first quality brings $4 per dozen. Some extra fine Meteors sold as high as $5 to $7 per 100; Bridesmaids are rather poor color and not good sellers; Brides and Perles are in good demand and the average price for these is $5 per 100. Violets are still scarce and are kept at $1 for Californias; small singles, 50 cents. In bulb stock, good valley holds up to $4 and there is quite a lot of it sold at $3. Romans continue plenty and the supply is much greater than the demand. The same may be said of paper whites. Asparagus seems to sell better than smilax this season.

Notes.

Ellison & Tesson are making a fine display at 625 Olive street of holiday goods. Their front is very tastefully decorated.

Mr. Alex. Siegel, who recently opened a store at 720 Olive street, says the location is good and that business is better than ever before with him.

Cannon Floral Co., at Webster Grove, are cutting some very fine Beauties and other cut flowers. This is their first year growing for the market.

The bowling club will do but little, if any, bowling before the holidays, but after the busy time is over we shall begin in earnest and perfect ourselves for the great New York contest, which, no doubt, will be the grandest in the history of the S. A. F.

Bowling.

The Bowling Club rolled four games on Monday night with six members present, and some good scores were made, Kunz being high man on the night and Sanders high on single score. The scores made were as follows:

	1	2	3	4	Tot.	Av.
J. W. Kunz.....	162	161	139	175	637	159
C. C. Sanders.....	132	143	182	158	615	154

BOSTON.

Some epigrammatist (not necessarily in the profession) has said that the presidential administration that takes up the least room historically is the best one. If that same rule works upon the weekly record of floral Boston, last week was surely a good one because one sentence very neatly tells the whole story.

The week started off with everything scarce and high and finished up in the same shape, with the exception of carnations, which had forgotten to keep shy and began to tumble in more plentifully, so that the figure upon them was crowded down. They have been selling at from 1½ to 3 cents for the ordinary kinds and naturally a little more for fancy breeds, while the peerless Lawson still retains its exclusiveness to a great extent, but I have seen a few that did not come from the main camp at Ellis, and they were wholesaling at 8 to 10 cents each. There has been a fair supply of other material, too, and since the demand has been so good it may be supposed we have got our winter form on and that trade will continue on present lines until after Easter at least. Kindly hope so for us.

News also scarce and coming high. But E. M. Wood, with his well known adaptability for keeping up with the times, has laid at least the mental sills for two rose houses, each seven hundred feet long. One of them is intended to shelter the American Beauty and the other shields the Liberty, so their loyalty to the national colors cannot be questioned. Ground is broken for them and the job will be handled with accuracy and dispatch.

A fire in the building containing the Calder Co.'s establishment, on Monday morning of this week, destroyed their chance to make a dollar for a day or two at least, but as this happened too recently for me to know the particulars we can only hope the damage is no more.

Our immaculate climatic conditions still continue, each attempt at a storm clearing away warmer and warmer. Grass is green and flourishing and except for the lack of flowers and leaves on the trees one might think an advanced state of spring were in vogue. Those who remember former years expect a change some time between now and April 1st. By the way, if we get a cold snap before Christmas we shall have a famine in flowers at that date, perhaps.

B. T.

PITTSBURG.

Cut flower trade is good. Retailers are all busy. Prices are good; stock scarce, not enough to go around. Considerable funeral work has been made up lately. T. M. Ulam had several large pieces, among them an express car very tastily made up.

A few chrysanthemums are still to be had at a good price for fair flowers.

A. W. Smith is well pleased with his new location and roomy store.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Company moved to a larger store room, No. 504 Liberty St., a central location, where they will be more able to handle their fast increasing trade. A full line of florists' supplies are on hand now, which is a convenience to their customers.

F. Burkl, Bellevue, has been cutting Harrisii for over a month. He reports them comparatively free from disease this year. He will have freesias before Christmas. Other growers will have Harrisii to cut from now on.

Stock of Ethel Crocker has been already received from E. G. Hill. This new carnation and The Marquis have been quite largely ordered by Pittsburg carnation growers.

Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri seem to be quite plentiful here. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Company are handling a great deal of both.

Murdock's Fifth avenue window is always very tastefully arranged.

BEAR.

EMPLOYEES.

"Encourage your employees to study and thoroughly master the details of their work. It will make them more valuable employees as well as better men." This has been the advice of all thinking employers.

Now is a good time to act upon this advice. Present your employee with a copy of the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is not only a handsome volume that makes an attractive gift, but it contains the sort of matter that will make your employees better workmen. You will benefit yourself as well as showing your employee that you regard him as something more than a mere machine.

The Right Cypress for Greenhouse Material.

Have you heard of Cypress Greenhouse Material that has not been satisfactory? If you have it does not follow that Cypress is not the best lumber to use. There is White Cypress, Yellow Cypress and Red Cypress; there is Cypress that grows on the high lands and Cypress that grows in the swamps.

All of these different kinds are not suitable for greenhouse purposes. Do you know which kind is best and do you know that kind when you see it? If not you would better buy from those that do know and will deliver exactly what they sell. We introduced Cypress for greenhouse construction and pushed it to the front. We know all about it. For fifteen years we have made a specialty of furnishing it, and during this time we have built up a reputation that we can not afford to jeopardize. We send out the best only.

Carnations, Ethel Crocker, $5 to $6; other varieties, $1 to $3; cypridiums, $15; hyacinths, $2 to $4; valley, $3 to $5; narcissus, $2 to $4; violets, single, 50c; double, $1 to $2; mignonette, $3 to $4; asparagus, 50c; adiantum, $1; smilax, 15c.

Club Meeting.

At a well attended club meeting on Tuesday night, Dec. 5, Mr. Paul Huebner, landscape gardener for the Reading railroad read an interesting paper on landscape gardening for railroad corporations. Mr. Huebner is of the opinion that each railroad should establish its own outfit for the plants and shrubbery needed, and that from an advertising standpoint the floral decorations have great value.

The monthly contest of the bowling club brought out an unusually large number, 41 taking part. A. J. Hamilton, the club's star bowler, winning for the fifth consecutive time, making an increase of two pins over his previous general average.

Visitors: Mr. Giles, Reading, Pa.; Mr. Cook, with Small & Sons, Washington, D. C.; Ira G. Marvin and Mrs. Muir, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Mr. Severy, Boston, and the junior Scotts of Buffalo.

GREGSON SPRINGS, MONT.—Mr. Wm. Day, formerly of Butte, is building two greenhouses here, each 25x100. As an experiment they are to be heated by natural hot water from a hot spring.

INDEPENDENCE, IA.—The E. M. Bissell Floral Co. has been dissolved. The business will be continued by E. M. Bissell, J. A. Cilley retiring.

TRUST CUTS THE PRICE OF GLASS.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 8.—The American Window Glass Company is reported to have made a cut of 33 1-3 per cent in the price of all window glass, effective last Wednesday, and to have ordered fires lighted in all its factories, the purpose being to resume operations about January 1. This move is considered a declaration of war on the independent manufacturers.

ETHEL CROCKER.

Absolutely the best pink Carnation ever offered the trade. Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself, you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from Sept. to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. Herr's Pansies at $4.00 now, and a regular assortment of Carnations in a list ready Jan. 1st. ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

ROSES.

The grand new rose Liberty, most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size; never showing any deformed, black or bull heads either in winter or summer and far surpassing Meteor in freedom of bloom. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance. Prices are as follows for A1 stock: Own rooted plants in 2 1/4-inch pots, 12 plants, 60c; 25 plants, 50c; 50 plants, 30c; 100 plants, 25c; 1000 plants, 20c each.

Grafted plants in 2 1/4-inch pots: 12 plants, 75c; 25 plants, 60c; 50 plants, 50c; 100 plants, 40c; 1000 plants, 25c each. Satisfactory reference or deposit from all unknown correspondents. Orders coming in after this date can be filled only in April or later, as my stock for March delivery is all sold.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

At the last meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: C. F. Woods, Pres.; T. B. Rudy, Vice-Pres.; Henry Lichtefeld, Rec. Secy.; Joseph Coenen, Fin. Secy.; H. Kunzman, Treas.; Jacob Schulz, Sentinel; Henry Fuchs, trustee. On Tuesday, January 2, the installation of the new officers will take place, and a good attendance is expected.

Business is not very brisk at present and has been quiet all this fall. The prosperity wave has not yet reached our florists. Everything we have to buy is higher, and what we have to sell is lower in price than for years.

Chrysanthemums are about over. Plenty of Romans and P. W. narcissus are coming in, the latter not so good as last year.

Mr. T. B. Rudy raised this summer some of the largest tomatoes ever seen here, some weighing as high as 3¾ lbs. It is a variety that he has improved and that is not yet in the market.

Jacob Schulz and Nanz & Neuner each had a public show of chrysanthemums. Both cut blooms and pot plants were very fine.

Mr. Henry Lichtefeld raised a nice lot of very fine chrysanthemums.

H. Walker & Co., on Fourth avenue, have the conservatories back of their store filled with a fine lot of palms, ferns and other decorative plants.

KY.

GRAND RAPIDS.

There has been no marked change in the condition of the market since last report. Mums are done and owing to their being past, caused an extra demand on roses and carnations; in fact we have seen no oversupply for some time, and carnations are now up to 2 and 2½ cents on common sorts; fancy a shade higher.

The usual dull weather caused a lull in trade, but as stock is short and Christmas near at hand prices remain very firm all around.

Roses going at $1 to $1.25 per doz.; violets, 25 to 30 cents; Romans and paper whites, 50 to 75 cents. All the stores are busy, and shipping trade is at its height.

The season up to now has been the best known in Grand Rapids for years. Crops seem to be off and it looks as if stock would be more than short for Christmas. One thing of note is that there are less blooming plants than usual at this time of year.

Prices are now considered at the top, but at these prices there will not be enough to fill orders. One thing is true, Grand Rapids must base its prices on Chicago, and a look at Chicago notes makes the home growers put on their thinking caps, for Chicago offers more, at wholesale, than the prospects are of our getting at retail.

The Model EXTENSION CARNATION SUPPORT.

Lancaster, Pa., June 17, 1899
MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best on the market, and if your other specialties are equally as good, they should make another addition to the money-makers of 1900.

Respectfully,
ALBERT M. HERR.

MR. THERON PARKER,

Dear Sir:—It gives me much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in getting up carnation supports. I think that those I have had from you are about as perfect as anybody will be able to make them. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal carnation support, a thing I have been looking for a long time. Wishing you every success in the sale of them, I am,
Yours truly, E. ASMUS.

Christmas Suggestions.

A Merry Christmas and a better New Year to all. We hope all of you have had a fair share of orders and that business has been better than in recent years. Florists richly deserve whatever success they can wring out of trade, for theirs is largely a life of speculation and anxiety, handling the most perishable of goods, dealing with the most exacting parts in human nature. Yes, boys and girls, some there are who think all in it is gold and sunshine, but we ourselves know there is lots of misery and hard work.

Christmas is mostly an awe inspiring event in floriculture. It is a tug of war for existence with many a florist. The public begrudge him his due, aye, even the grower considers that the retailer is getting the best of him at Christmas.

We were just thinking what a vast change has come over our business, anyhow. Up to a very few years ago every one used to work days and nights for weeks before Christmas getting greens ready, preparing boxes and baskets, and clearing the decks for the great rush. Everyone would surely have to work all night Christmas Eve. Nowadays there are scarcely any preparations made at all, and very few have to work all night. Four or five hundred boxes of flowers used to be a feature in the Broadway stores then, but now 'tis rarely if ever the case. Yet the volume of business is forever increasing; many do not see it so, because it is scattered.

Even at this late date we are not able to say what this year's trade will be. Weather has been against cut flowers, though good for plants. The general feeling is for a very good business. Prices will not differ very much from other years, unless they be a shade lower. Good Beauties will, as usual, be scarce, and will probably retail at from $18 to $24 per dozen—that is, for top grades; others, of course, will run from these figures down to $5. No Hybrid Perpetuals are on the market, which fact is to be regretted. Meteors come next, and the finest of these will sell at from $6 to $10; Brides, Bridesmaids, Morgans, Testouts and Victorias will bring $5, a few $6, most of them $4 to $3. Of carnations, ordinary ones will be plentiful and will be sold for from $1 per dozen up; fancy varieties will be popular and good prices will be asked—that is, from $2.50 up to $5. There will not be much of a raise in bulbous stock; narcissus $1 per doz.; valley, from $1.50 to $2.50 per bunch of 25; Romans, 75 cents per doz.; violets will be the most unsatisfactory flower—yes, more so than ever this time; there are a quantity of good ones, but not sufficient to go 'round. This will hurt the violet, for the most ardent lover of that flower grumbles if asked to pay more than $5 per 100, even for the best. They will run from that to $3. Harrisii is expected to bring about $5 per doz. Mignonette is grown in too many sizes to fix a price on, but the big spikes will sell at $2 to $4. Poinsettias are of many grades in quality and can be sold from 35 cents to 75 cents each; Eucharis amazonica, $5 per doz.; sweet peas, $1.50 per bunch of 25; gardenias, 75 cents to $1.25 each; Japan quince, $1 to $1.50 per branch; Cypripedium insigne, $4 per doz, fancy varieties, $5; other flowers at prices quoted last week.

Every retailer knows or should know that prices are largely a question of circumstance; the higher prices can only be gotten for very superior grades of stock and from the high class trade. There are many who will sell—aye, be compelled to sell—for very little higher prices than they themselves paid for the stock, and in some cases this has to be done in the grandest of stores and to the richest of people. Every storekeeper has more or less trouble to put up with; none entirely escapes the suspicion of being an extortionist.

If there is anything we can put up a price on, it is either quality of work or novelties; with novelties of course are included rare or very scarce flowers. Take, for instance, a pretty bunch of sweet peas, clover, quince, lilac, cherry, extra fine orchids, or any such flowers; you are justified in demanding good big prices for such stock, just the same as other lines of business ask fancy figures for exclusive patterns or designs. Whilst almost any kind of flowers are acceptable to the recipients on Christmas morning, still it is not always safe to do as we please, throw anything into a box and fire it out; if we do so we either lose that customer or hear unpleasant things from them.

There are many who expect the best from you, even if the sender refused to pay the price, and these very same senders know that you dare not send this particular person anything but your best; in such cases it is always best to either substitute or send less in quantity but more in quality.

Delivery of goods is a mighty important matter. Don't pick up any badly dressed slob; get the neatest and most intelligent messengers you can and compel them to carry the flowers carefully. All your "fixin's" can be spoiled by one rude shake of the box.

When arranging flowers in a box or tying them into a bunch, use as much care as possible in the matter of harmony. Of course you can use considerable latitude in the case of what are called spring flowers. The following are a few combinations which go well: Scott carnations and yellow daisies; cypripediums, mignonettes and Meteors; valley and forget-me-not; or valley and sweet peas; Testouts or La France and white lilac; Beauties and lilies; Meteors and jessamine; pink, yellow, and crimson carnations. Most perfect flowers will look best by themselves. A bunch of valley is permissible in almost any box of flowers. Care should be taken not to have white in the majority where flowers are sent to a sick person.

Cut the ends of all bunched stock. They will look fresher, and be careful what kind of string they are tied with. Bunches of flowers such as valley, myosotis, sweet peas, etc., will look all the better if wrapped cornerwise-end-open in white or tinted paper and tied with No. 1 ribbon of the same color; this is, of course, for special boxes. Many special boxes are this Christmas being tied with silk ribbon, spray of holly or mistletoe in the bow. New Year's Day, which used to be even better than Christmas, is now no better than an average good Saturday to the trade. Remember, suitable greens in a box is a great help when flowers are scarce. Cut some Boston ferns for the big ones, such as lilies, etc. IVERA.

TOBACCO ASHES.

Would the ashes from burned tobacco stems be beneficial as a top dressing between bench roses? Would they be good for carnations?

Which method is best to sweeten soil on rose benches—lime water or a sprinkling of air-slaked lime?

ENQUIRER.

Have never used tobacco ashes as a top dressing, but believe it would be beneficial if not overdone. There is nothing injurious in tobacco. Have seen the decayed stems plowed in as manure and productive of fine crops.

If the rose bed is troubled with worms to the extent that they are injuring the roses, then a watering with lime water would most quickly rid the soil of them. A lump of lime, say 2 lbs., dissolved in 50 gallons of water, will fix the worms.

If it is not worms that are troubling the bed, but the surface of the bed gets dirty, then a sprinkling of air-slaked lime just sufficient to whiten the surface will be of benefit and not the slightest harm to the roses.

WM. SCOTT.

COLD vs. WARM WATER.

A note by Professor Craig, in the issue of December 7, discussing the influence of cold water on the growth of plants, prompts me to give a brief review of the work done at the Wisconsin station, that readers of The Review may be better able to compare results.

A variety of plants were watered with ice water—among others, beans, tomatoes, coleus, geraniums, and begonias. Similar plants were watered with water at 50 deg., at 70 deg., and at 100 deg. After trials covering two years, it was concluded that:

1. Water at as nearly the freezing point as was possible to obtain produced short jointed and stocky plants, but in no case affected the health or vigor of the plants. Coleus plants so treated were excellent in every respect, with well developed colors and healthy foliage.

2. There was no discernible difference between the plants of coleus, geraniums, etc., watered with water at 50 deg., and at 70 deg., but in the case of the vegetables a slight difference was noted in the yields.

3. Water at 100 deg. in many cases caused a rather spindling growth in the case of the coleus, etc., but affected the yield of the tomatoes, etc., but little.

The above refers to plants grown in pots and raised on benches. Similar results were obtained with plants in solid beds and in the open ground.

I fail to note that the results differ greatly from those obtained at the Iowa Experiment Station, except in the case of coleus. One point cited by Professor Craig is worthy of careful consideration by every greenhouse man, viz.: "There was practically no difference in the results secured by the use of water between 45 deg. and 75 deg." Similar results were obtained at the Wisconsin station.

This is really the important point, and the one that affects the florist. It is not expected that florists will use water at 34 deg. nor at 100 deg.; These points were selected, in our work here, as the extremes, with intermediate temperatures that more nearly represent the temperature of water used in greenhouses.

If the temperature of water available for use in the greenhouse is 45 deg., will it pay to put in an expensive tempering apparatus to raise it to 75 deg.? In the light of our present knowledge of the subject, it is reasonably safe to say that money might be expended more profitably in other directions.

FREDERIC CRANEFIELD.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The preliminary list of premiums to be awarded at the first exhibition of the American Rose Society, to be held at the Eden Musee, New York city, March 27, 28 and 29, 1900, has been issued. It is certainly a very liberal prize list and should bring out a fine display. Class A is open to all, and liberal first and second prizes are offered in 31 named sorts, 25 blooms of each. Class B covers about the same varieties, but only 12 blooms are called for and competition is limited to those having not more than 20,000 feet of glass devoted to the culture of roses. Class C takes in pretty much the same sorts, but is open to private gardeners and amateurs only.

Class D calls for 16 sorts of hybrid perpetuals, and is open to all, 12 blooms each and two prizes in each case, and there are liberal special premiums for 50 distinct named varieties one of a kind; 20 varieties one of a kind; and collection named varieties, 12 blooms of each. Class E also covers hybrid perpetuals, but is open to private gardeners and amateurs only, as are also Class F, devoted to pot plants. Class H is devoted to standard roses; and Class I devoted to climbing roses in pots. Class G covers climbing roses in pots and is open to all.

Class J provides for the award of certificates to new varieties not yet in commerce and of cash prizes to blooms of varieties of recent introduction. Class K contains eight splendid special prizes for blooms of various sorts, and it is stated that additions to this class will be announced later.

Copies of the list may be had by addressing Paul M. Pierson, Secretary, Scarborough, N. Y.

Announcement is also made of another exhibition of roses to be held in New York next June.

GOVERNMENT SEEDS.

Secretary Wilson is giving the proper turn to the free seed distribution carried on by the government through his department. In a recent interview he said:

"Congressmen can never be convinced that it is not for the good of the country for them to distribute free seeds. No, you will never abolish free seed distribution; but I will tell you what can be done. The distribution of a new seed which will be of actual benefit to the farmer for an experiment can be substituted in place of sending him a package of breakfast radishes every year. There is not a farming section in the United States that knows it all—that cannot be improved by the introduction of new crops; but it will be a gradual matter to get farmers and congressmen to look at the matter in this light and to substitute free good seed for common ones. I tried to get some of the Virginia members to send out Vicia villosa seeds last year; they wouldn't touch it. I sent out some to Virginia farmers and they are delighted with it as a forage, feeding on it way up into the winter. Next year Virginia congressmen will get demands for Vicia villosa.

"This sort of plan would be a scientific distribution of seeds. We could send Turkestan alfalfa all through the northwest where the ordinary alfalfa winter kills. We have found a rice in Japan which may mean millions of dollars to the south; we will find crops for the rich, moist savanna country and we will find crops for the arid, sandy stretches. But yet congress has never yet directly appropriated a cent for this work, and we have to shave and pare to make seed distribution a thing of benefit to the country."

The sort of distribution advocated by Secretary Wilson is only what was contemplated by the law that first authorized free distribution. If he can succeed in carrying out the law as intended by its framers and prevent its further distortion by congress, the seed trade will make no complaint and free seed distribution will be of some real value to the farmers of the country.

FLOWER SHOWS.

Can a flower show be made to pay on its merits from the box office standpoint? We are pretty well convinced that it cannot where a heavy rental has to be paid in addition to the premiums and other expenses. But flower shows can be given, and the heavy expenses provided for if the right people are interested.

It is, however, very difficult for a purely trade organization to secure the financial assistance necessary. This is much more easily obtained by a society officered and controlled by men who are merely lovers of flowers and without any trade associations. In such societies the major part of the work must still be done by those in the trade, but the powerful assistance of men of wealth is brought to bear upon the financial problem which in purely trade organizations is so difficult to solve.

A horticultural society with a large membership would be the ideal solution of the question. The principal attraction to possible members would be the annual free pass to the exhibitions, and with a membership sufficiently large the importance of fair weather during the exhibition week would be considerably lessened. In other words, the management has sold a large number of season tickets for which the money is already in the treasury regardless of what the weather may be.

If the right people are interested at the start it is comparatively easy to secure the co-operation of others. Many will contribute liberally to the support of an exhibition of flowers if they are convinced that they are doing something purely for the advancement of good taste and that will reflect credit upon their city. Such will respond liberally to the requests of men whom they know to be entirely disinterested, while they would pay little attention to representatives of a purely trade organization.

ARE FLOWER SHOWS BENEFICIAL TO FLORISTS?

[Read before the Chicago Florists' Club, Dec. 1, by Edgar Sanders.]

I propose to take the broad ground that flower shows are beneficial to every florist in the city. I know there are some who will dispute the proposition; if he is present let him be heard. Nay, I go further, and assert that every display of flowers, in the parks, in the gardens, in the florists' stores, aye even in the streets, tends to encourage the use of flowers and create a demand therefor.

If this is so, why are not these displays beneficial to everybody in the trade? What we want is more buyers. The grower as first hand, the wholesaler as second, and the retailer as third distributor, needs no extra push nowadays to start or enter into the florist's business, nor ever did in my experience. He may, as to the best way after starting, to make a success of it.

After fully half a century of connection with flower shows myself in one form or another, it's an enigma to me to find so few florists of this city lending them a helping hand. Not a few seem actually indifferent whether they visit them at all, except they can get in for nothing. Why, out of easily 500 in the trade in this city, not 100 belong to either the Horticultural Society or the Florists' Club, which to my mind tells a strange story.

If my assertion is correct, that shows are an educator of the masses to love flowers, they should be encouraged in every way by those making a living from the sale of all horticultural products, which you see takes in all kinds, from state and county fairs, exhibits at horticultural and florists' societies' monthly meetings, up to the grand yearly fall show of flowers. Suppose for a moment, in your estimation, a good many of the exhibits are rather tame affairs. Do your share to improve them.

Surely none will dispute, if a flower show, in whatever form, encourages a taste for flowers, and causes more to be used, the grower can have no kick coming. Has it not been a fact that at every one of our fall shows prices for all good stock rises during that week, however dull the trade has been before? This being so, we opine the wholesale man is equally benefited, as he gets bigger commissions by the booming of his trade.

The retail man, taking him in all his varied phases, may possibly kick at anything that tends to increase the prices of the flowers he wants to buy. But low prices and gluts are the bane of the business, bad for everybody but the fakir. We will leave him to fight his own battles. He after all flourishes mainly through overproduction. If the growers cannot, or will not, adjust supplies to demand, which, after all, controls prices, there is bound to be trouble, as there is at times in everything obtained from the field and garden.

High or fancy prices long continued is not a favorable condition of the market in the long run, any more than gluts and ruinous prices. If periodical gluts must come, you will have either to destroy enough flowers to bring an equilibrium, either at the greenhouses or in the commission house, or put up with these gentry one hears of so much, but who in the time of low prices get rid of as many flowers as those we are accustomed to call legitimate florists.

I claim if a florist in any of the divisions feels like aspiring to the top of his calling, he had better weigh well any thought he may have that he can afford to give societies and flower shows the cold shoulder. The grower needs the stimulus that a competitive exhibit of his stock against that of his neighbors may give him. It may take down a little of the conceit that he alone has the best that is going.

Will you, for example, you retail men, for a moment cast your thoughts back during the shows in this city during the past ten years and note the names, for example, of the prize winners, say of decorative materials, tables, mantels, etc.? Would not the story tell who commanded the cream of the trade of the time? Yes, there is surely danger in your standing aloof. The public, your customers, will be apt to be impressed by what they see. Consider the old adage—"To him that hath shall be given."

I have not touched on the advantages of flower shows in encouraging new productions in the way of plants and flowers. Something new and fashionable to strike the public fancy is what all progressive florists should aim at. Strike out for something novel and taking, and once obtained push it for all it is worth. Most successful men find great help from new things. Set your wits to work that you may also for a time enjoy the monopoly of something or other.

In conclusion, to me a florist who sees nothing helpful in flower shows reminds me of a Niagara Falls story I heard the other day. A Canadian police officer tells it something like this: "A Pennsylvania Dutchman hove in the other day and asked the officials at the Falls if there was anything about the place worth seeing. 'You see,' he said, 'it's shust like dis. My frients and frau told me I should take id in and I vant to take everyting in der iss to zee. Dey say dere vas someding great here und I forgot id alreatty, and haf walked all ofer und zee noddings.' The visitor was at once taken to the finest view of the Falls, where he stood a few minutes looking. 'Well,' said his conductor at last. 'Vell,' returned the man. 'Don't you see the Falls?' 'Vat, dot vater falling? Iss dot vat I coom all dis vays to zee—a liddle vater dripping? Jiminy, I go me home.'

Let me suggest we want a higher tone in this florists' business all round this city. We want a reading, thinking body of men, not mere machines, that are content to plod on in a humdrum way. Let us have progressive men, and they will patronize our societies and take a deep interest in everything connected with their calling.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The outlook for Christmas supply has improved somewhat since our last report. Several sunny days promise to materially improve the quantity and quality of roses and carnations. Except as to Beauties, rose orders will probably be fairly well filled. The demand has been strong and a very large number of advance orders have been booked.

Kennicott Bros. Co. will have a large cut of Klehm's Gontiers and say that customers must not be surprised if these are sent in place of Meteors. They look for a fair supply of everything except Beauties. They are receiving some very fine valley from E. G. Asmus. Mr. Pieser reports a sale of 3,000 P. W. narcissus to one party at $3 a hundred, which was a great help, as this stock has been moving rather slowly.

Mr. Spencer, of Reinberg Bros., says he anticipates a fair supply of everything except Beauties.

McKellar & Winterson take a favorable view of the outlook for Christmas supply. Among their Christmas specialties will be a splendid lot of poinsettias. They are already selling quite a number, and those already received are certainly of extra fine quality. And they will have 3,000 of these for Christmas in addition to a large supply of the usual run of flowers. This firm has been doing an enormous business in green, holly and other Christmas goods. They have been handling the "winter berry" in quantity and have sold over 50 cases to one local retailer.

Bassett & Washburn say they will have a good crop of tea roses and carnations, but will be short of Beauties. They have booked a very large number of advance orders and say the proportion of highest grade stock called for is notably large.

E. H. Hunt looks for a fair supply, but large advance orders will take it all. He reports a splendid trade in green and holiday supplies.

Various Items.

Mr. E. C. Amling has leased the large basement floor of the Trude Building, 32 to 36 Randolph St., and will remove to this location about January 1. Here he will have a space 70x80 feet, with remarkably handsome finish, including marble wainscoting, mosaic floor, modern plumbing, handsomely fitted toilet rooms, etc. The fittings will be entirely new throughout and an ice box 8x14 is now being built. The light is good, extending the full length of the Wabash Ave. side of the building. Mr. Heffron has planned the arrangement of the fixtures admirably, and when completed this will certainly be a strikingly handsome and convenient wholesale cut flower establishment, as well as an unusually large one. Mr. Amling's business has been growing with great rapidity and a move to larger quarters was imperative. He will now have abundant room for further expansion.

The firm of Reinberg Bros. has been dissolved by mutual consent, to take effect January 1, and thereafter each of the two brothers will have his own city salesroom. Peter Reinberg will retain the present quarters and George Reinberg will take the place now occupied by E. C. Amling, having purchased the latter's lease and fixtures. Thus the brothers will still be on the same floor and as close together as possible. The old quarters had become too small for the two. The partnership really extended only to the city salesroom, the greenhouse establishments at Summerdale having always been managed as separate concerns. Archie Spencer will continue in charge of the present salesroom for Mr. Peter Reinberg, and Robert Northam, one of Mr. Spencer's present assistants, will manage Mr. George Reinberg's new salesroom.

Mr. E. F. Winterson moved into his new house recently and to celebrate the event invited a lot of his friends to a berry party. The berries were in the decorations on the table and around the room and were of the "Winter"-son variety. Thirty-six pickers sat down to the table and berried within themselves a most enjoyable dinner, including an English plum pudding of aldermanic proportions. The club quartette did its duty royally and there was instrumental music, too. Mr. Winterson never does things by halves and all present enjoyed themselves most heartily. The berry party in December was voted a decided success.

The bowling team played its first league games last Friday evening and, not wishing to hurt the feelings of the members of the opposing team, allowed them to win each of the three games.

A. C. Kohlbrand has taken a position with Mosconosotes.

BUFFALO.

Outlook for Christmas.

From present outlook Christmas trade will be good. There is at this writing more inquiry for decorative material than we ever remember. Metropolitan florists may disdain to deal in holly, but we have to. The flower growers need not complain that plants have taken the place of their product for they will be sure to sell all they have and at most excellent prices. Still it will be a great plant time and Buffalo is well supplied with good plants of the leading kinds.

We are awfully glad to see that the poinsettia will be in good demand, for then we shall be strictly in it. The fancy basket filled with plants is very attractive, but it is slightly above our rank and not lasting enough. A good palm or dracaena is preferred when money is plentiful.

Some Decorations.

There is a decided increase in social events over the past five or six years. An elaborate and costly decoration at the Twentieth Century Club was lately done by W. J. Palmer & Son. An immense amount of wild smilax and wreathing was used and one item was 100 fine poinsettia plants. The following day a very swell dance called for some more fine decorations. White azaleas and yellow chrysanthemums were the feature in the reception room and green and scarlet in the ballroom. Laurel, sweet bays, Boston ferns, holly and poinsettias filled the bill.

A dinner at the Buffalo Club deserves mention, for although the work of W. S. it was a little out of the common. The round table was 20 feet in diameter, seating thirty men. From the lofty ceiling over the center of the table ran strings of ground pine (100 of them), and extending to five feet outside the table, eight feet from the ground, and then dropping four feet, so the table and guests were inside a circus tent of green. In center of table was a mass of poinsettias five feet in diameter and not over fourteen inches high; this took 100 4-inch plants. Three feet from the center bed and at intervals of three to four feet were stood 10-inch pans of poinsettia, in which were six plants not over twelve inches high.

All unoccupied space was covered with holly sprays, and the only part of the tablecloth visible was a margin of two feet around the edge of the table. There were no orchids or American Beauties. It was simple but most effective. And Admiral Sampson and Capt. Chadwick and the other twenty-eight diners thought it was just right. I forgot to say that an 8-foot ring six feet above the table was studded with electric lights. Everybody could see everybody else's top vest button across the table, and that is what they wanted.

We have had all kinds of weather within a week and the change is going on hourly, so we don't know what to expect. Good sleighing, bright weather, and not too cold, would best agree with our wishes.

The Carnation Convention.

We are awaking to the fact that on the 15th and 16th of February our city will see the greatest display of carnations that the world has ever seen, at least since the flood. And with them will come the men celebrated in their culture. Yesterday a commodious hall was secured for their reception. It is in the center of the city, on Main street, and large and light. There will be the need of placing "The Marquis" so near "Ethel Crocker" and "Genevieve Lord" that flirtations will occur, and Olympia can show broadside without being annoyed with smaller craft.

There is also a most convenient ante-room where Mr. W. N. Rudd can call together the faithful members of his noble (?) auxiliary society, which I don't believe has had a genuine good meeting of the faithful since Philadelphia last February. There has been a pretense at reunions, but the president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and board of lady managers was absent.

LATE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the new late pink chrysanthemum Miss Florence E. Denzer, which originated with Mr. Ant. C. Zvolanek, West Hoboken, N. J.

It is a clear pink, in shape and size similar to Ivory, with narrow, dark green foliage and a stiff stem three feet long. It blooms at Christmas.

ORANGE, N. J.

"Ancient and Modern Floral Art" was the title selected by Mr. James I. Donlan for his talk before the New Jersey Floricultural Society on Wednesday, Dec. 6. He attacked it with his usual energy and held his hearers spellbound until nearly midnight. When he entered the room, accompanied by numerous parcels of all sizes, one of the members thought it was a distribution of Christmas gifts and changed to a front seat, so as to be on hand.

He seemed to have the wand of an enchanter; his agile fingers worked as he talked, while with the same elements he produced wreath, garland or bouquet. Nine years ago, said Mr. Don-lan, a man came to me and asked why he could not find as large carnations here as in London. "We have them," was the reply, and as he talked the speaker selected three Lizzie McGowans which, with a quick movement, he deprived of calyx and seed vessel and, mingling the petals with another quick move, he deftly wound a wire around the whole, making one fine, large carnation—a model boutonniere. "Why do you do that?" asked an under gardener, and for once the speaker left the realm of fancy and became the commercial florist, as he replied, "Because it's better to get twenty-five cents for this than five cents for those others. In making up the bouquet, avoid regularity; that is not floral art, and a few stems carelessly mingled produces a better effect for corsage, or as a gift to a sick friend, which may be a few red roses or carnations; if any white flowers are used at all, only one or two, and be careful to avoid anything which may suggest a funeral, and too many white flowers do so.

"In table decorations give attention to the green as carefully as anything, and do not measure one flower with another, but let each have a beauty of its own. Conceal any defect with one of the weaker blooms, and strengthen the weak stalk with wire, first sticking through the bulb and then winding around the stem; then you may bend it into any position also. Avoid a flat, level mass in bouquet or piece and conceal the stem with a flower."

In his demonstration upon the tying of bows of ribbon, Mr. Donlan gathered the boys around him and at his earnest request one of them came forward to try his hand. It was Dave Rose, who remarked that "his wife usually tied the strings." Someone suggested he better learn, for she might get a divorce, and after a while he finally did tie one to satisfy his instructor.

The artist of today is returning to ancient floral art for his motifs. We have made no advance in the refinement of art, but we have in arrangement. The United States today leads the civilized world in the refinement of floral art, because we have the best element from all countries. Societies offer but little inducement to bring out this element, however. Do not bring a grower to judge your artistic arrangements for effect. There is as much beauty from an esthetic standpoint in the small flowers as the large, which indicate simply overfeeding, but add nothing to beauty in arrangement.

In the election which preceded the address Peter Duff was re-elected president and Joseph B. Davis was made vice-president. Both being the only nominations, were elected by acclamation, and in the balloting which followed George Smith was elected secretary and Malcolm MacRorie treasurer.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

On Thursday, the 14th, the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held, this being the first meeting since the flower show. The meeting opened with President Ammann in the chair and about twelve members present. More were expected, but the approaching holiday rush no doubt kept many away. The executive committee made a report showing a loss of about $1,000. This is not a final report, as all the prize money has not yet been collected. The Shaw prize money was on hand and the treasurer was ordered to pay this out at once. Not before the next meeting will the committee be able to make a final report and pay out what money is on hand.

A euchre party, same as last year, will be given for the benefit of the prize winners, which will be given the latter part of January or early in February. The president appointed a committee of three, consisting of F. C. Weber, John W. Kunz and J. J. Beneke, to assist the trustees, who have the matter in charge, in making it a grand success.

Mr. J. W. Kruse was elected a member of the club, and Mr. Chas. Connon, Sr., made application for membership.

The next meeting of the club our annual carnation exhibition will take place, and the secretary was instructed to correspond with growers of new carnations to send a few of their new ones for inspection.

President Ammann made a few remarks, saying that he hoped in the new year the members would attend the meetings oftener, which would make the meetings more pleasant. The city members, at least, should attend; the members from Kirkwood, Belleville and other suburban towns attend more regularly than they do.

This closed the last meeting of the year of 1899. The first meeting in the new year will be held on Thursday afternoon, January 11, at 3 o'clock. Every florist in St. Louis and suburbs, whether member or not, is invited. The attraction will be our annual carnation exhibition and two essays on carnation growing by prominent members of the club.

The Market.

The market is uncertain and will be all this week. Among the florists, the wholesalers were not overloaded, but had plenty for all demands, showing that stock was not scarce; even some roses and carnations went to the dump pile.

Beauties, first selection, were the only roses that held up in price, selling from $3 to $6 per dozen; Brides, Meteors and Maids selling at $6 and $8 per 100 for first choice; Perles and Woottons, $4 and $5, and from that down to $3 for seconds. Carnations are not so strong as they were. Good stock can be had for $1 per 100; $2 and $2.50 is the price for fancy stock. No longiflorum in the market. A few callas are coming in and sell at $10. Romans and paper whites are surely a glut and the best of stock is sold at $2 and $10 in 1,000 lots. Valley is also selling slowly. Violets are very scarce and Californias bring $1 and $1.50 for the best. Among the plants offered for Christmas are cyclamen, azaleas, poinsettias and begonias. They are in the market now and in fine condition.

Sales on holiday greens are more than satisfactory and holiday goods of all kinds are in great demand. Some of the down-town florists claim that the demand so far is better than last year, and the business houses seem to be decorating their fronts more this year than ever before. With the West End florists the sale for greens and holly will not begin until this week, and with lots of orders booked, the outlook for a great Christmas trade is very bright.

A Euchre Party.

A very pleasant euchre party was given on last Saturday night, December 16, by Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber at their home, 4326 Olive street, to a few of their friends in the trade. At 8:30 p. m. five tables were filled with players, and the play continued until 10:30 p. m., when the winners were announced. They proved to be Miss Meinhardt, who won first ladies' prize; Mrs. Kunz, second, and Mrs. Meinhardt, third. John Young won the first gentlemen's prize and Carl Beyer the second. Mr. C. C. Sanders had the good luck to win the booby prize, which caused much laughter. After the distribution of the prizes we all sat down to an elegant lunch. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Meinhardt and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John Young, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Beyer, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Kunz, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kuehn, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fillmore, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beneke, C. S. Sanders, Fred Weber, Jr., F. H. Weber, and Herman Weber. At 11 o'clock all went home and expressed themselves as having had a good time.

Notes.

Mr. John M. Hudson is again in the business, at 615 Locust street, dealing in all kinds of Christmas greens. You can't lose him.

C. Young & Sons Co. make a very fine Christmas display in their large show windows, using red lights, which makes them look very attractive. Will C. Young is now at the down-town establishment and Harry and Jim are running the greenhouses.

Fred C. Weber, Charlie Connon, Mrs. Ayers and other West End florists make fine Christmas displays in their stores and show houses. Most of them use red lights, which show off the goods to good advantage.

NEW YORK.

Christmas Notes.

The weather continues to be very mild and the prospects are there will be plenty of stock this Christmas. Prices promise to be very moderate and everyone expects a good rush of trade. Just now flowering plants rule supreme; every store window is filled with them, resplendent in high colored baskets and ribbons. All are busy preparing for the rush. Holly has turned out somewhat better than we expected and there is the usual quantity of all manner of greens.

It scarcely seems like Christmas. Only for reminders in the way of holly wreaths, mistletoe, piles of firs and slashes of red ribbon, 'twould seem more like the end of October.

Some very fine samples of made up work (that is, plant baskets) are displayed. There seems to be more care paid to harmony in arrangement, and it looks as if it will not be the store-keepers' fault if this Christmas is not a record-breaker as far as sales are concerned. Steps should be taken to prevent the bottom being knocked out of the cut flower market. This can only be done on the basis of reasonable prices, which can only result in benefit to all.

Various Items.

Perhaps some of our readers will have noticed the amusing notices in the daily papers anent a new carnation on Broadway. You cannot blame any man for advertising his business, but it is to be hoped growers will look at such things in a right light.

Robert Jenkins, Jr., who has been secretary of the Westchester County Gardeners' Association since that society was organized, will shortly leave Rye, N. Y., to go into the real estate business in Brooklyn, N. Y.

At the Metropolitan Club, Tuesday evening, J. W. Withers gave an interesting talk on "Strawberries every day in the year."

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society will have their first annual dinner in the Vanderbilt building, Tarrytown, December 28th. A jolly good time is assured.

The Bowling Club will not meet again until the evening of January 2. The scores tonight were:

SAN FRANCISCO.

Frosts have made their appearance and have left their mark on outside chrysanthemums. Unless there are heavy frosts the Chinese growers keep bringing in these outside blooms until well on in spring, but the stuff is almost worthless. Fancy inside blooms are nearly gone. Domoto Bros., the Japanese growers at Fruitvale, who are the largest growers of fancy chrysanthemums for this market, have made their last cut.

American Beauties are scarce and of poor quality. Prices range from $1 to $4 per dozen. Brides and Maids are of better grades, and bring from 50 cents to $1 per dozen. Some nice poinsettias are in the market. They come from R. T. Whittlesey, Los Angeles, and bring $7 to $9 per 100 wholesale. Bradts, Flora Hills and Gold Nuggets are selling at 35 cents, and Scotts and Portias at 15, 20, and 25 cents a dozen. Some nice pans of Roman hyacinths are to be seen and they sell well. Business is good and prices will be better in a week or so.

E. W. McLellan & Co., the Burlingame growers, have opened a wholesale store at 23 Union Square Ave. They close at noon after Dec. 6.

"The Flower Basket," at 117 Grant Ave., is empty once more. Mrs. E. Fredericks, who has made several attempts to open a store under the above name, has failed, and the place is now to let.

James Stevenson had the decoration of the Grand Opera House for the Elks' Carnival Dec. 2, and it was one of the finest ever done in this city. Other years the work was done by the cheaper Italian and Greek florists. This year Mr. Stevenson was selected and did the work so well that the committee gave Mr. S. a vote of thanks for his artistic arrangement.

The stage, which is 75 feet deep, was set with mountain and forest scenery and a life sized elk was placed near a cliff as if coming down through the valley in the mountains. Every variety of palms and ferns found in California was used in this decoration.

Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material.

This with us means the best growth of Cypress Lumber and the best grade of that growth; and from this grade all the sap—bright sap, which only experts can detect—as well as stained sap, knots and other defects cut out. Others do not equal our quality if they do beat our prices. It is not hard to see the reason: You can not buy gold dollars at fifty cents each. Experienced growers know that the best is not too good and cheapest in the long run.

The speaker's table was one large elk's head nestled in a bank of ferns, as if the whole body of the elk was there. On one large cliff to the left of the stage was placed a cross made of ivy, nine feet in height, with a beautiful sash of white ribbon thrown across its arms. One of the boxes on each side of the stage had an elk's head nestling in grasses. Sixteen white electric lights were placed on the antlers of each head, and the effect at night was very pleasing.

The foyer was elegantly decorated with evergreens and hundreds of white chrysanthemums, American flags and purple ribbons, purple being the Elks' color. I might add that the large cross was an exquisite piece of work and was given by Mrs. Leland Stanford of Menlo Park.

I paid a visit to Mr. A. Galloway's place in Fruitvale and found that gentleman busy among his carnations and violets. One bench of Gold Nugget and another of Flora Hill looked fine. Mr. Galloway thinks well of Painted Lady as a pink, but is looking for a scarlet to take the place of Jubilee, which he intends to discard next year. The carnations are grown on solid beds at this place and the health of the plants and size of the flowers prove the wisdom of this plan of culture in California.

J. Cleary, formerly with H. S. Sanborn, Oakland, who opened a store at 182 Eddy St., this city, has failed to make it go. Two months was enough for him. Mr. Sanborn has offered him his old position. J. N.

The retail florists report an old time Christmas rush the past week. The wholesalers have done well, too, as shipping trade has been good. There has been an exceptionally big demand for holly, and, unfortunately, it is rather scarce, especially the berried holly.

Christmas Prices.

Beauties, $6 to $12 per doz.; Brides, Maids, Kaiserins, Meteors, Golden Gate, $10 to $20; La France, $6 to $8; Gontier, $8 to $10; Perles, $6 to $12; Liberty, $25 to $75 per 100. Cyripediums, $15; carnations, common $3 to $4, fancy $5 to $8; Ethel Crocker, $8 to $10; hyacinths, $3 to $4; valley, $3 to $4; fancy, $5 to $8; mignonette, $4 to $5; narcissus, $3 to $4; violets, single $1, double $1 to $2.50; adiantum, $1; asparagus, 50 cents; smilax, 15 cents.

Notes.

Visitors: M. H. Reeves, Coatsville, Pa.; Patrick Foy, Roanoke, Va.; H. J. Tice, New Brunswick, N. J.; Alex. McConnell, of New York, who was in search of plants for basket work, and J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, who was, as usual, on a selling expedition.

The H. A. Dreer Co. report an unusual rush in their shipping department and in order to deliver goods on time for Christmas their entire force of packers is working until 10 o'clock every night. A visit to their establishment at the present time would give one a good idea of the immense business they are doing. R.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The local florists are already beginning to build, not even waiting for spring to arrive. Henry Smith is starting in on four houses, Eli Cross four violet and one carnation house, Chadwick three or four, with more to hear from later. Crabb & Hunter will largely increase their violet capacity.

The funeral of Gen. I. C. Smith, a popular citizen, called out a lavish display of flowers. While Crabb & Hunter had charge of the decorations, by far the most elaborate and artistic piece was furnished by T. R. Renwick & Co. It was about 6 feet high. From the point was caught an American flag, its folds falling gracefully on each side of the piece. Two army swords were crossed near their points and just below was a crescent of violets, and below that a large Masonic emblem, the circular center of which projected several inches. It was made with Modesto mums, the four intersecting bars projecting beyond the center were of violets; the base, 3½ by 2 feet, was done in mums and roses. The next most conspicuous pieces were a spray by Henry Smith of 20 dozen pink and white mums, and a wreath by the Grand Rapids Floral Co., caught in the center with a heavy cluster of Romans.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

Conard & Jones Co. register Canna "Olympia." Height, 2 1-2 to 3 feet; foliage green; spike erect, medium to large; flowers, medium size, pinkish violet purple, showing bluish tinge. Robert Montgomery registers rose, "Mrs. Oliver Ames," a sport from Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan. Color, delicate pink with faint line of deeper color at edge of petal, softening to almost pure white at base of petal. Other characteristics identical with parent. WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

CARLISLE, PA.—Jesse Robbins opened a new cut flower and plant store at 10 West High St. on Dec. 13.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—John Siegel's greenhouses on 73d St. were damaged to the extent of $500 by fire, Dec. 8.

SHAMOKIN, PA.—Fire in the greenhouses of Joseph Harris of Springfield did damage amounting to $1,500 Dec. 7.

QUINCY, ILL.—August Fisher, the florist at Sixth and Madison Sts., has left the city rather suddenly and it is said that a large list of creditors are mourning his sudden exit.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—There is a lack of greenhouse room at the University of Illinois, and the erection of additional glass is being urged. It is expected that the Illinois Central R. R. will soon erect greenhouses here.

ETHEL CROCKER.

Absolutely the best pink Carnation ever offered the trade. Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself, you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from Sept. to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation; and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. Herr's Pansies at $4.00 now, and a regular assortment of Carnations in a list ready Jan. 1st. ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the State Florists' Society was held at the store of Huntington & Page. The president and vice-president being absent, Mr. Langstaff acted as chairman. Mr. E. A. Nelson read a paper on rose culture, which was well received. As the next meeting will be the state meeting, it will be held at the State House, and it was proposed to entertain the state florists at that time, and the following committee was appointed to make arrangements for the occasion: Robert McKeand, J. T. Huntington, Fred. Hukriede. The meeting was well attended and we all hope that the good attendance will be kept up.

H. W. Rieman showed some seedling carnations and a mum, a sport from Rieman. It is a yellow, on the style of Vivand-Morel.

Cincinnati Florists' Visit.

A crowd of Cincinnati boys came over the other day—well, it was on the 13th, and there were just 13 of them; but notwithstanding all this, a luckier and happier lot of fellows were never entertained by the Indianapolis boys. They were met at the depot at 6:10 p. m., coming here from Lafayette, where they had been to visit Mr. Dorner. It was 8 o'clock when we reached the Walla Halla, and, of course, bowling was on the programme, and the way those Cincinnati boys bowled was a sight. It seems as though they had been looking for a snap and they certainly struck one, for they captured all the team and individual prizes. Mr. Jackson was the luckiest, he being the high man with 176 in a ten-frame and 102 in five frames.

Following is the score of the prize game:

CINCINNATI.	INDIANAPOLIS.
Schuman154	Billingsley116
Jackson176	Rathsam138
Rodger118	Vollrath76
Witterstatter ..113	E. Rieman101
Sunderbruch ..131	W. Bertermann 85
Total692	Total516

Following are the lucky thirteen: A. B. and C. Murphy, Rodgers, Schuman, Witterstaetter, Jackson, Gillett, Giesy, Sunderbruch, Bartlett, Wundram and Adrian.

Mr. Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, was also one of our guests.

At the conclusion Mr. Gillett made a neat speech, in which he thanked the Indianapolis florists for their kind hospitality.

They left the next morning at 8:10 for Richmond. FRED.

PORTCHESTER, N. Y.

The annual dinner of the Westchester County Gardeners' Association was given at the Irving hotel, Portchester, December 16. Some forty members and friends sat down to enjoy the good things provided. President John Shore presided, and when the demitasse and cigars came, toasts, stories, songs and speeches were in order. Secretary Jenkins read letters of regret from some of those invited from distant points. Among these was one from Alfred Dimmock, who was by that time, to use his own words, drinking their health in his stateroom on the Lucania, which sailed that day for England.

Delegations were present from all the surrounding towns. The party from Tarrytown brought an invitation to the society to dine with them at their first annual dinner, which will be held in the Vanderbilt building, Tarrytown, December 28th. Mr. J. W. Withers and J. I. Donlan, of New York city, made short addresses on "Horticulture" and the "Horticultural Press." The affair was a most happy one and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. D.

CLEANING GLASS.

Can any of our brother florists give me a way to clean glass on the outside? It is a sediment of bituminous coal smoke, and water will not affect it at all. If some florist will give me a way to clean it, he will greatly oblige.

A SUITABLE Christmas gift for the head of the family and that doesn't cost too much is generally difficult to find. A copy of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, will exactly fill the bill.

ST. PAUL.

Trade has experienced a little dullness since Thanksgiving, which is not an unusual condition at this season. The weather has been very unfavorable for the production of good blooms, the cut being small. Wholesale prices have steadily advanced until holiday figures were nearly reached. Retail prices have been very high in consequence and this may have had a depressing effect on sales.

There has been an unusually good sale of all greens and dealers in these have been kept very busy.

Violets have been woefully off crop and will be in short supply for Christmas. Carnations will be fairly plentiful, but roses will be short. An abundance of Romans, paper whites and valley will relieve the under supply of other stock and help out in difficult places.

L. L. May & Co. have a fine lot of azaleas in full bloom, with some Chinese primrose, primula obconica and Baby primroses for slimmer purses. A ramble through their houses shows a remarkably fine crop of carnations just coming in. In new varieties White Cloud, Chicago and Victor are the most promising. Flora Hill throws a fine bloom, but the stem is too weak, and White Cloud will most likely supersede it. Jubilee is still considered the best red, though Crane is most promising. America is a disappointment, a poor color and shy bloomer. Firefly ditto. Melba and Mrs. McBurney are failures here, while Victor and Triumph vie with each other for first honors in pink.

This firm is growing Lady Dorothea rose and is highly pleased with it. It is a free bloomer, a vigorous grower, while the color, form and size of the bloom will place it in the foremost rank with the retailer.

Mr. McHutchison, representing Aug-Rhotert, of New York, was a recent caller.

PEORIA, ILL.

Demand was in excess of former years for cut flowers at Thanksgiving. Carnations sold at 50 cents a dozen. Mums sold well from start to finish, but are now over. J. C. Murray furnished the flowers and decorations for the Merkel-Ulrich wedding.

A run out to Kuhl's at Pekin found everything in excellent shape. He has a heavy cut of high grade Maids and Brides, also some fine long-stemmed Beauties.

A trip to Washburn's place at Bloomington, Dec. 3, was well worth the time. Three carnation houses, 18x150, with tile benches and steam heated, were a sight to behold. These were planted early in August, and the varieties are Scott, Cartledge and McGowan, the stems 18 inches long, straight, and blooms extra fine, as many as 18 flowers and buds to a plant. His house of Maids is in good shape for the Christmas cut. Violets are a failure this year.

Greens.

Christmas eve among the florists of New York is an occasion to be remembered; the enormous amount of work done, the vast quantities of stock disposed of, are, to say the least, wonderful.

Saturday we were down in the wholesale greenery district trying to get you a few statistics and we find that there were about four thousand cases of holly disposed of in this market; lots of it was not worth 25 cents a case; this was particularly the matter with southern holly this year—it was dirty yellow and much of it berryless. The Delaware stock was good and consequently went with a rush. We saw some of the best bought for $3.00 a case, but the average price was $4.00 and $5.00. There were several hundred cases of mistletoe, but most of it was not fit to use. The American was damaged they say by frost, the English was either badly packed or smashed up in transit, the French was about the best. There were hunting parties out for this line of goods, but none to be had.

Seventy-two carloads of Christmas trees, with an average of fifteen hundred trees to each car, came in from New York state, and then remember the largest part of our supply came by boats from Maine, New Jersey and Connecticut; they were almost entirely white spruce or balsams and sold for 25 cents up to $15 for 20-foot trees. The number of trees sold will exceed the quarter million mark. The best part of the trade was supplied with specimen Norway spruces from the local nurseries. Princess pine sold well. In fact, to sum up the green market, it was very good, and fine material went early and high.

We tramped the entire city looking for news and novelties, and many amusing and pathetic sights and stories were seen and heard in this greatest of Bohemias—this magnificent market where sentiment influences the petrified hearts of many. Down in the poorest parts of the city we saw the Jew and the Gentile, aye, even the Chinese, carrying home bunches of greenery, or sprays of flowers, and who shall fathom it?

We find this year, and it is a good sign, that the poorer and middle class trade was extremely good. There was not near so much artificial stuff either shown or sold. The small retailers sold a vast quantity of roping and wreaths such as was bought wholesale; holly wreaths, in fact any kind of good wreaths, were scarce in the wholesale market. Up in the first class stores the wreaths were made by contract at from 10 to 12½ cents each wreath, by experts who are employed for this every year.

This year's Christmas decorations were more general than ever. Many thousands of houses, clubs and hotels displayed wreaths and garlands and whilst there were quite a lot of mixed and pine wreaths, the great majority were of holly; we are pleased to notice that there was more refinement shown than ever before in these decorations, and we are afraid that many retailers are not responsible for this, because many who pay high rents offered numerous loud things in the way of solid immortelle wreaths, etc., which still hang in their stores. The people are not slow in appreciation, and fine work like fine stock goes quickly.

Most of the green wreaths were tied with red ribbon, and let us remark that though in many cases, particularly in wall or balcony decoration, it is best to tie the bow at the bottom, in the case of windows where fine curtains are hung and all is expected to be neat and trim it is best to tie the ribbon on the top and have the loops reach half or three-quarters down; this makes a more compact effect. If some wish to be different, short bows on the right don't look bad, especially if the wreath has a few sprays there; this can be alternated to the left side. Most of the retailers cleared out of Christmas greens and are very well satisfied with trade in that line.

Plants.

As we predicted in previous notes, this year broke the record for the sale of plants. The quantity disposed of was something enormous; thousands upon thousands of them were sold, not alone of flowering plants but all manner of ferns and foliage stock; they were mostly made up in all sorts of baskets. Each florist endeavored to have something different from his brother, and in consequence some beautiful and many funny things were seen. Gauze ribbons were used very profusely. One party introduced lace handkerchiefs among his gauze. One thing we noticed, and we considered bad judgment, was the great prevalence of sickly colors, such as whites, washed out blue and yellow and faded lavenders; we think these colors retarded or spoiled many a sale. We should make a difference between Christmas and Easter colors.

Of course there was an oversupply of white stock, especially white heather (in fact this plant caused a monotony almost everywhere, and if anything remains it does), and no doubt the boys were anxious to match colors; combinations sell better sometimes. The weather was very mild and a great amount of tender ferns were used in baskets with good effect. Low poinsettias in pans went with a rush, so did ardisias. We saw lots of azaleas with one or two flowers on; it was hard to sell such. Every florist made a specialty of plants and these were disposed of before the cut flower section was seriously considered.

One point is worthy of note and of commendation: that most of the plants were sold in neat baskets, that though lots of crepe paper was used—and used with a vengeance—the public seemed to dislike it and preferred the plant to its dressing. Begonia Glory of Lorraine was a pretty feature and sold well where it was appreciated and offered reasonably. We haven't time to enumerate all the leading items in plants, but everybody did a big trade and it is safe to say there will be more grown next year.

Cut Flowers.

It is difficult to say what this Christmas was in a cut flower way. Prices for top grades were about as we quoted, but the greatest volume of trade was very much cheaper. First class fresh roses sold well, violets became a drug, bulbous stock was over-plentiful, white stuff in general moved slowly or not at all. As we said before, we traversed all sections to study the situation. We saw fairly good roses retailed for 75 cents and $1.00 per dozen; violets, $1.50 and $2.00 per 100; valley, 15 cents per dozen; Romans, 10 cents per dozen; and so on, and this in the streets on Christmas day. But on the other hand we saw as big prices as were gotten the past eight years. There was a tremendous quantity of flowers disposed of.

The following is a fair estimate of what was on the market in New York for Christmas, and it almost all disappeared somewhere somehow: Violets, 500,000; roses, 200,000; carnations, 200,000; lily of the valley, 100,000; Roman hyacinths, 100,000; poinsettias, 20,000; cypripediums, 25,000; miscellaneous flowers, 250,000; vines, 10,000; red berries (Ilex verticillata), 10,000 bunches; common ferns, 100,000; galax, 100,000; mixed greens, 500 boxes; holly, 4,000 cases; mistletoe, 350 cases; Princess pine, 200 cases; garlands, 500,000 yards; wreaths, etc., 750,000; Christmas trees, 300,000; ferns and foliage plants, 50,000; flowering plants, 100,000.

Who shall say we are a mere nation of machines? We cannot compare these figures with those of any other city in the world, we simply give them for consideration. Our country is only 125 years old, and when one city uses almost the entire amount of stock we name for its Christmas decorations of 1899 it is pretty safe to say we are far from dying and that the future of our art is brilliantly bright.

We had the good fortune of being able to get a few pictures of the New around you. It's all very nice if your individuality in a business way can stand out artistically prominent, but don't lose sight of this very important fact that it is far better for you to give the people good flowers and plain boxes than fancy boxes and poor flowers. The highest forms of art are the plain and simple ones.

And here's another subject: There is enough interesting history connected with most plants and flowers if we would only learn it without going to extremes in fabrications. We noticed in a prominent Broadway window a plant in flower of Epiphyllum truncatum. This was labeled, "Century Plant; blooms once every hundred years." It's foolish to do this kind of thing, because the great majority of Americans know better.

Very few flowers were worn on the lessen the decorative effect, but when these thickly berried twigs are arranged with suitable accessories the effect is superb.

These berried branches have been used with splendid effect in some of the finest decorations in Chicago this winter and were a regular annual supply assured they would undoubtedly soon become very popular.

We understand, though, that the berries are of little value after severe winter weather sets in and that the large supply in the market this year is due to the remarkably mild winter up to this time. Could not this difficulty be overcome by cutting the branches after the first frost and storing away in a cool but frost-proof cellar or root house? We would be pleased to know whether this has been tried.

Surely it is worth some little effort and expense to insure an annual supply of these beautiful berried branches. They sell on sight at a good price and are exceedingly useful in many ways. During the past week many a holly wreath was doubled in value by the addition of twigs of the Winter Berry.

Another berried shrub of which branches have lately been seen in limited quantities is an ilex of which the specific name is not yet known by the dealers (possibly Ilex Dahoon). In this the foliage is present, small lanceolate leaves, and the berries a bright red, though not nearly so numerous as in the case of the Winter Berry. It would be very popular if it could be supplied in quantity, and in good condition at fair rates.

CALIFORNIA PEPPER.

Among novelties in Christmas material noted this year were the berries of the California pepper tree (Schinus Molle) seen at Mr. C. A. Samuelson's, Chicago. The berries are about the size of peas, of a beautiful pale rose color and are borne in panicles.

We present in this issue two engravings showing how effectively these berries were used on the handles of plant baskets by Mr. Samuelson. They were also fastened in the bows of sashes of ribbon and used in various other ways.

While the color is not so brilliant as that of other berries so freely used in Christmas decorations, there is most decidedly a place for this berry.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The Christmas trade averaged very much ahead of last year and some hold that it was the largest Christmas business in the history of the trade in this city. The commission men as a rule report supply in excess of last year, though still insufficient to meet all the demand except in white flowers. The only stock that was in oversupply was bulbous stuff, especially Roman hyacinths, and there were some of these last left over. A number of Basket of Cyclamens with California Pepper on handle.

York florists' stores on Christmas eve and we wish to sincerely thank the several artists for the courtesy shown our representative in a very busy time. The views will be published in connection with this department as soon as possible.

One thing we particularly noticed in several stores was that baskets of plants were massed together, and we think some good sales were lost on account of this. If you want your goods to be attractive and show their full beauty they must be arranged properly. You may often notice that the basket or vase you put on a pedestal or some place where it will be singled out from the rest is the first sold.

We are also of the opinion that too much money is thrown away on flashy trimmings in the way of wall paper boxes, bad ribbon, awful colored papers and several other things you see streets Christmas day. Violets and red roses were the most popular. We noticed that a great deal of holly and mistletoe appeared in buttonhole and corsage.

New Year trade promises to be fairly good in the way of cut flowers.

IVERA.

THE WINTER BERRY.

The Winter Berry (Ilex verticillata—synonym, Prinos verticillatus) or Black Alder has been a very important item in Christmas decorative material in the Chicago market this season. It is a native shrub that grows about six feet in height and blooms in May and June. In fall the bright red berries (a trifle smaller in size than those of the common holly) are thickly set on the twigs, which are then bare of foliage. The absence of foliage would seem to large growers, though, report a smaller cut than last year, especially in Beauties and Meteors, and that the increase in price was not sufficient to balance the decrease in quantity. There was certainly a big lot of stock from somewhere and aside from the roses above mentioned orders were fairly well filled.

One unpleasant feature was that pickled stock turned up in quantity at the last moment and with the usual result. We hear of pickled carnations being sold at $2.00 a hundred that would have quickly brought $4.00 had they been brought in when right.

American Beauty roses were the scarcest they have ever been, and this is generally accounted for by the fearfully hot weather in early fall which it is believed took a great deal of vitality from the plants which has not yet been recovered.

Kennicott Bros. Co. report the Christmas trade as much the largest in their whole business experience. They didn't expect any Beauties worth mentioning, and their only disappointment was that the Gontiers they had depended upon to help out in colored roses were not up to expectations. They made three very long distance shipments for Christmas (one to the Pacific coast) and feel sure the stock must have carried well, as the consignees had telegraphed orders for double the quantities for New Year's. They find that bulb stuff travels best packed dry in boxes separate from other flowers.

The market is now almost bare of flowers aside from white flowers, especially bulbous stock, and Christmas prices still rule; in fact these figures will be shaded little, if any, till after New Year's, anyway. And if trade is at all brisk prices should hold up well for some time. Unless the plants should suddenly bring that long deferred "crop." All report their plants as now in excellent condition and prospects good, but the stock doesn't come in despite the fact that never before have we been favored with so much bright weather in December.

The fact that better figures were made on white flowers for Christmas induced some retailers to push them and with results which show that the people will take them if price is lower. One retailer bought 600 bunches of narcissus, dressed them up with ferns and sold them out clean at $1.00 a bunch.

Seen at the Retailers.

At E. Wienhoeber's: Natural birch bark jardinières filled with various small plants. One combination was an ardisia with baby primroses and small ferns. Another, red cyclamen and various ferns. A large round birch basket had an araucaria at back, with white azalea and large ferns in front. A plant stand contained a Dracaena Sanderiana, two ardisias, two baby primroses with Cyrtomium falcatum and nephrolepis at the edge. A lower shelf of the same stand was filled with cyclamen and nephrolepis. In the center of the store was a 4-foot section of a huge log on end. In the upper end was sunk the pot of a large kentia and into the soil of the pot had been inserted a lot of winter berry branches, making a mass of the bright red berries, while ivy vines were draped down the log. There were many cyclamens and not so many azaleas as usual. Some made up pots contained an ardisia with small cyrtomiums around.

At C. A. Samuelson's: The window display illustrated and described elsewhere. Many baskets of plants in which cyclamens were most frequent, the handles often decorated with California pepper, as shown in illustrations in this issue. A green hamper filled with two small cyclamens, several baby primroses and sprays of Asparagus plumosus. Small hamper filled with marguerites and mignonette. The same filled with two bunches of violets and a few sprays of valley and mignonette. A dull gilt basket containing a white cyclamen and sprays of holly. Hamper filled with cyclamens, sprays of winter berry and asparagus, and California pepper along the edge of cover. A basket containing two plants of Primula obconica, several baby primroses and sprays of holly.

At H. F. Halle's: Cyclamen with pearl crepe paper cover tied with ribbon to match and spray of winter berry through the bow. Laureate wreath of leucothoe with bunch of holly at the base, the holly brightened by the addition of winter berry. A remarkably fine white cyclamen. Ericas, Otaheite oranges, azaleas, primulas. Many fern dishes. His window display was a very effective combination of above and decorative plants. He also had filled the pot of a large palm with winter berry.

At I. C. Silliman's: Many natural birch bark fern dishes. These, by the way, are made by local talent and they were very effective as well as low priced. Azaleas in pot covers were also prominent here.

The retailers all report a big Christmas trade, the increased call being for cut flowers as well as plants. With several of the leading florists poinsettias were a feature and they sold exceedingly well. Individual orders averaged larger than for some years past.

Various Items.

A look through the greenhouses of Mr. Peter Reinberg, at Summerdale, shows his stock to be in extra fine condition. He cut a fine lot of stuff for Christmas and the quality was excellent. He has an immense lot of rooted carnation cuttings coming on and all are in splendid shape. He is arranging for an experiment as to the effect of electric light on plant growth and has the poles up for a number of arc lights that will throw the light over some of his houses at night and on dark days.

The house occupied by Burt Jackson and A. V. Jackson, Jr., at Bowmanville, was destroyed by fire last Saturday noon. The house was owned by the former. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Charles Held, the well known florist, died December 20 at his residence, 922 North Campbell avenue, aged 45 years. He had been in poor health for several years. He had many friends in the trade who deeply regret his demise in the prime of life. Interment was at Waldheim last Sunday. He leaves a widow and four children. Mr. Held had accumulated some little property and leaves his family in very fair circumstances. When he moved his establishment to North Campbell avenue he was surrounded by open prairie, but this section is now solidly built up.

Mr. O. P. Bassett has moved into his handsome new residence at Hinsdale.

BUFFALO.

Now the hurly-burly's done, now the battle's fought and won, we can gasp and look over our profits, for some profits there must be, even if in some lines we were not successful.

It was a misfortune that the 24th fell on a Sunday, for we scarcely knew "where we were at." It is very unlikely that the same climatic conditions prevailed throughout the north, but locally we were much blessed. The last three days of the week were bright and even warm, the temperature going up to 45 degrees every day. This was an especial favor for Saturday, for then was when the largest quantity of plants were delivered. To many it was a great saving of time and labor. In fact, if Friday and Saturday had been as it is at this moment, we could scarcely have got the orders off at all, and then the scolding that would have followed! Sunday was warm and wet and Christmas day cold and clear.

It was as we predicted—a great plant time, and color was wanted. Palms were asked for less than formerly. Poinsettias took the lead, and in pans of five or six dwarf plants they went much faster than single plants, yet as single plants at $1 an immense quantity was sold, as were five or six fine ones in fancy baskets, with Boston fern, which brought from $5 to $10. Azaleas sold well, and if well flowered would all have gone at a good, profitable price. There were not many cyclamen offered. Pans of Romans sold very well. When a good 5-inch pot of Gloire de Lorraine begonia can be retailed for $1, it will be a fine Christmas plant, although there are plenty of people who rebel at its purplish pink color. There were plenty of nice little orange trees offered, but they seem to have had their day. Medium sized pots and pans of Boston fern sold remarkably well; the public knows what an admirable house plant this is.

In the aggregate there was a large quantity of other stuff sold, including Primula obconica, Chinese primroses, begonias, bottle brush. Altogether, from personal observation would say that there was 30 per cent more plants handled than ever before.

There is not so much congratulation over the cut flower trade. There is kicking in various quarters. There was too much of the same old story: "Flowers very scarce," and then they came tumbling in by the barrelful on Sunday. Trade was quite brisk on Christmas morning, but there was never more than enough to supply it, and if much is left over you lose all the profit on what is sold. Several thousand violets will go to deodorize the perfume of the garbage wagon.

It is perhaps true, as someone said, that whatever we get, we do not get enough for our plants and flowers; but the public don't philosophize that way, and they shy at Beauties at $1.50 each, violets at $4 per hundred and Bridesmaids and Meteors at $4 and $5 a dozen. There are a few people who will pay anything, the higher the price the better they like it, but they are the great exception, and our steady customers revolt against what they consider extortion. I want to tell some commission men that "Ethel Crocker" carnation may sell at $2 per dozen in Philadelphia, but they won't here. All we want is carnations that sell at $1 a dozen.

When we consider the great quantity of plants sold for gifts, how can we expect the cut flower part of the business to be what it was a few years ago, and it is not. Ribbon was used quite largely and few plants went out without being trimmed with colored paper. The bare pot was seldom seen, and the paper is assuredly a great addition to the attractiveness of the plant.

Holly was cleaned up, but there was less demand for ground pine. The Christmas tree has grown in fashion till now they come by carloads, and the supply was sadly overdone. We noticed in a New York paper a long article on Christmas, the tree, its history, and the sources of supply, etc. Maine, it appears, supplies largely New York city. The author said: "The Christmas tree was introduced to Britain by the Saxons, and from England we got the Christmas tree with other things." I think he or she is wrong; the introduction of the Christmas tree into England was not over fifty years ago. It is to the Germans we owe the Christmas tree. "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's." The weinerwurst and saurkraut, the fragrant limburger, the sainted Santa Claus and the beautiful Christmas tree are distinctly German. The holly and mistletoe are English and, although their use here is not over twenty-five years, and in general use much less, the holly is now so universally used that we noticed sprays of it in the humblest home.

There has been and is still going a continuous round of entertainments, which helps business in general. Altogether we have reason to be thankful. The aggregate of business done must be an advance, and the elements were with us—both for the grower and retailer.

I failed to mention that, with the exception of Romans and paper whites, of which there was plenty, we saw no other bulbous stuff, and there was not the slightest occasion for their appearance. And I would add, in conclusion, for the benefit of Mr. E. M. Wood, that the finest Maids and Brides that came to town were grown by Mr. Guenther, of Hamburg, under butted glass.

NEW YORK.

The Christmas Trade.

The greatest event of the year has passed into history and it is difficult to choose words to truthfully describe its effect. Very few realize the fact that the position of New York correspondent to any of the florists' trade journals is a hard post to fill and please everybody. It is in most cases necessary to adopt the tactics of a government diplomat, and in order to get and give facts and authentic news a vast amount of stuff has to be sifted. This is particularly the case in regard to Christmas prices. We go to several dealers; they tell us that they had a better business than ever and they quote high prices for stock they do not handle; others next door say it never was worse, etc. Of course, there is quite a lot of this true, and the only sensible way to look at things is to see and admit that the flower market is but a flower show, where the best stock wins every time.

This Christmas will be memorable for several things, principally the immense plant trade, the enormous quantity of very ordinary and poor grade flowers, a superfluity of white or sickly colors, and, above all, low prices. We ourselves have never seen much of the stock sold so cheaply on a Christmas before, but fine flowers brought the usual big price; the man who considered quality as much as quantity fared pretty well.

Very few orders were given for cut flowers up to Saturday night and the rain on Sunday morning cost the flower trade many thousands of dollars. Sunday coming in between made it bad for the wholesalers. On the whole, we think the retailers had the best of it this year, but many of them had troubles of their own.

It is useless to grumble and find fault; we can look at the facts, and even if they are unpleasant, be satisfied. The condition of the market is the growth of faults to which all sections have contributed their share. There was a large Christmas trade done here; it is yearly increasing, and will continue so, but the people will not pay the prices some desire, and we cannot prevent them from selecting the plant or flower they prefer. With the grower it is a matter of right or wrong judgment in selection. If the public refuse to purchase all the Bridesmaids and Brides we can grow, then we ought to try them with something else, always remembering that good bright colors are the most popular in this country.

American Beauties brought big prices except in some cases where prominent retailers demanded them for their own figures, and the dealers had to comply in order to retain their trade; this was not fair to do on limited stock. Meteors and extra good Maids went satisfactorily, but the rest of the stock could be bought at your own figure. Cypripediums were kept at the set figure of 12 1-2 cents; valley, violets and bulb stock were sold in large quantities as cheaply almost as any other time of the year. Red carnations sold well, as did well grown poinsettias. The people seemed to have been more particular than ever and the best went first. There was quite a brisk cut flower trade all Christmas day.

Dealers in greens report a specially fine trade. Good holly sold well; everybody cleaned out. Some very poor holly was seen; 'twas fit for nothing; but anyone having good stock got rid of it without much trouble. Mistletoe was very unsatisfactory and was in demand, too. Princess pine brought a good price; in fact, there was a general clearing out of anything that was presentable.

Reed & Keller report an immense Christmas trade in baskets and general supplies; they sold over 50,000 wreath rings.

Thomas Young had an unusually large amount of shipping orders. His high-grade stock and novelties seemed to have been in demand from all sections.

There were numerous new stores opened in time for Christmas and all seemed to have been well patronized.

CHRISTMAS WINDOW DECORATION.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the Christmas window decoration of Mr. Chas. A. Samuelson, Chicago. The decoration was an exceedingly handsome one and the photograph does not give the slightest idea of its beauty. It may serve, however, to make plain to the professional eye what the actual effect was.

The window space was canopied with wild smilax, which was studded with branches of the winter berry. From the canopy were suspended by red ribbons of varying lengths many small bells of red immortelles.

At the right of the window is seen a gracefully built up bank of poinsettias, while the main space is occupied by baskets of plants (of which some examples are given in other engravings in this issue) and various other Christmas specialties, including small rustic logs filled with holly sprays interspersed with twigs of the winter berry.

The general color scheme was green and red, the only important variation being the light colored flowers of cyclamens, of which many were used. Ribbon was very sparingly used.

PITTSBURG.

Christmas business was very satisfactory to the florists here. Some report an increase of 50 per cent over last year, others 25 per cent, and a few the same amount as last Christmas.

There was a very large quantity of greens handled and most of it cleaned up, trees as well as holly, etc.

The two commission houses did a big business. The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company handled 50 per cent more stock this year than last, especially carnations. Their new location, with about three times the room they had in their old place, made it easier to handle the increasing trade.

The retailers are very well satisfied with their Christmas business. Prices ruled about the same as last year, although New York offered stock at very low rates on Saturday.

Breitenstein & Flemm, who have Patterson's old stand, corner of Market and Liberty, have been very busy for the last three weeks, mostly orders on account of social affairs.

The market florists did a very large business Saturday, though they did not sell out as clean as in former years, especially in Allegheny. The weather was miserable Saturday evening, and bad weather always hurts the market people more than the stores. A drizzling rain fell all the evening. Sunday we had alternate snow flurries and sunshine. Christmas morning the ground was covered with snow, and more snow and more sunshine during the day, with a clear, cold night, the temperature down to 10 degrees. It was lucky for the plantmen that the cold did not come on Saturday, which was mild enough to expose plants and flowers.

There did not seem to be much pickled stuff coming in this year, except from a few of the smallest growers. Carnations were much more plentiful than expected, no doubt owing to the mild sunny days just before Christmas.

Burkl sent in a large lot of White Cloud and Victor. C. Blind had a big cut of Mrs. Fisher carnation, which is still grown here to a considerable extent.

Roses were not so plentiful. Growers complained of much dark weather the last two months. Harrisils were in fair supply, though there was not enough to go round. They seem to be some of his houses at night and on dark days.

The house occupied by Burt Jackson and A. V. Jackson, Jr., at Bowmanville, was destroyed by fire last Saturday noon. The house was owned by the former. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Charles Held, the well known florist, died December 20 at his residence, 922 North Campbell avenue, aged 45 years. He had been in poor health for several years. Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade was never better, and, from all the reports that I can gather at this early date, everybody had all they could do. All hands were at work early and late and, as there was plenty of funeral work, many had to work all night Saturday in order to fill their orders for Sunday delivery. A good thing for the retailer was that white stock of all kinds was plentiful and prices not too high. The retailer, grower and wholesaler say they have not had a better trade at Christmas in years.

The rose stock that came in was more of the second quality, although good prices were obtained. Carnations were plenty and of good quality, especially white, with prices up to the average year. Violets were scarce and brought top prices. Bulb stock was a great glut and lots of it will be dumped by the wholesalers. Romans and paper whites could be had at your own price. Valley held its own and callas sold well. Those who handled plants report an exceptionally good demand both for green and flowering plants. Quite a lot of ferneries were filled and sold.

Prices.

Prices on stock were as follows: Select Beauties, very scarce, $18 per dozen; second choice, $12; Maids, Brides, Meteors, Perles and Carnots, first choice, $18 to $20 per 100; seconds, $8 and $12; Woottons, $10. They were not so scarce as expected, yet the demand was great and satisfactory to the wholesaler. Carnations, fancy, $8 per 100; others from $4 to $5. Some were sold as low as $2 and $3, but these were very poor. Good reds were scarce, but Scotts, Daybreaks and white plentiful. Bulb stuff, Romans and papers, sold at from $1 to $3, and hard to sell at that. From the looks of the commission houses every grower must have gone in heavy on bulbous stock. Violets, California, brought $2 and $3 per 100; small, single, 75 cents and $1.

Not much is expected in the way of business for New Year's, but no doubt the prices will remain up until after the first of the year.

We were too much confined to business the past week to give any news notes and will close my letter for this week by wishing all the readers of The Review a "happy New Year."

J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Christmas Trade.

Up to the 18th of December we had dark, rainy weather and the wholesale men were afraid to quote roses and carnations for holidays at any price. However, during Christmas week, with the exception of Saturday, we were favored with bright, clear weather, and our growers were able to cut nearly twice as much stock as they had anticipated.

Poinsettias were largely grown this year and sold well. The majority of the blooms were medium sized and brought $25 per 100. Harrisii were limited and went slow at 15 cents. Bulbous stock was plentiful, of good quality, and sold fairly well at $3 to $4 per 100. Saturday was a miserable day, rain falling from morning till night, just enough to keep the flower-buying people at home.

Christmas falling on Monday kept the commission men guessing as to just when they would want the bulk of their stock. Friday proved to be the best day, although considerable shipping was done on Saturday and Sunday. Christmas morning was clear and cold, the thermometer registering 18 degrees above at 8 a. m.—not exactly the weather desirable for delivering plants.

Your scribe called at the downtown stores on Monday, and after waiting 15 or 20 minutes to see the boss, secured the following information:

J. A. Peterson reports business very good, considering the weather. The sale of cut flowers equals that of last year, which is saying a good deal. Plant sales beat anything on record, cyclamen, azaleas and poinsettias selling best. Foliage plants, such as palms, dracaenas, etc., went slow.

A. Sunderbruch's Sons: Christmas trade almost double that of last year. They had fine stock and plenty of it. With them plants went very slow. Prices were about the same as last year.

B. P. Critchell: Broke even with last year. If the weather Saturday had been favorable, would have run way ahead. Had stock enough except Beauties. Did well with holly and festooning.

E. G. Gillett: Sales short of former years. Prices as a rule were better except on bulbous stock, which was a glut with him. Could have sold more fancy carnations and good roses.

J. M. McCullough's Sons: Sales about 25 per cent better than last year. Could have sold more colored flowers. Bulbous stock sold readily, but cheap.

Ohio Cut Flower Co: Sales fell short of previous years. Bulbous stock went slow. Don't know if we could have sold more roses if we had them. Prices realized were about the same as last Christmas.

Cincinnati Cut Flower Co.: Business and prices about the same as last year. Plenty of stock, with the exception of colored roses, especially Beauties. Romans the only thing that went slow. "Glad Christmas is over." B.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Christmas, the season of all seasons, has rolled around again, and finds the florists very busy all over town in all kinds of work. The grower is also busy holding back his stock of flowers. As a consequence, carnations are scarce this week. Very few fancy carnations are to be seen at the stores. Roses are more plentiful, because they refuse to be canned or pickled like the carnation. Holly wreaths are in great demand and sell at a nice profit to the makers. The rains have stopped and the weather looks as if it will be a Christmas of sunshine instead of snow and storm.

Prices are advancing on all kinds of stock and the florists' and growers' harvest has begun. Portias, 25, 30 and 35 cents per doz.; Scotts, 30 to 40 cents per doz.; Fancies, Flora Hill, Triumph, 50 cents to $1 per doz. Rose prices are slightly higher than last week. Violets are of good quality and about equal to the demand. Californias, $1 to $1.50; Princess of Wales, $1.50 to $2 per dozen bunches. Freesias, 25 cents; Roman hyacinths, 3 dozen for $1; paper whites, $1.50 per 100.

J. P. Koller has opened a store at 902 Broadway, Oakland. The stand looks like a good one and it is hoped that he will meet with success.

George N. Miller, florist, on New Broadway, Oakland, is thinking of retiring from business. Old age is the cause. Mr. Miller says he had an offer from one of Oakland's dry goods stores to pose as Santa Claus. "What does the public want?" Is the florist's art not enough for them?

Asparagus Sprengeri as a basket plant sells readily and many fine specimens are to be seen at the various stores.

The little baby rose, Cecil Brunner, is a good seller in this market and is always in demand.

Antonia & Figona have opened a store on Sutter St., near Kearney. The location is a good one. It is a good move.

Mr. Peter Nicholson, our Haywards grower, is bringing in some of the finest American Beauties ever seen in this market in a long time, and shows the great care Mr. Nicholson has taken with his plants. The boys around town say that he sleeps with his plants. "I can hardly believe it." He has got married lately.

Mr. John Carbone, of Berkeley, is supplying J. Suelberger, Seventh St., Oakland, with some very fine blooms of Minnie Cook carnations.

E. Gill, Washington St., Oakland, has been making a fine display of outdoor grown Belle Siebrecht roses. They go rapidly at wholesale, Mr. Frank Pelecano, the Kearney St. florist, getting the bulk of them.

J. J. Pouyals, florist, 1211 Polk St., San Francisco, had a runaway Dec. 10. A collision between his horse and wagon and a cable car resulted disastrously to the horse, which had to be killed, and caused a panic among the passengers in the car, besides injuring a policeman, a boy and the driver, Joseph Konigsberg. The horse dashed against the side of the car, smashing two of the windows, and the horse in its struggles to rise kicked the policeman on the knee, knocking him out.

PHILADELPHIA.

The florists report an old-time Christmas, some of the leading ones have been working night and day filling orders. Both flowering and foliage plants sold well and there was a big trade in oranges, Jerusalem cherries and fruited ardisia. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine took the lead in flowering plants, with the prices ranging from $2 to $8 each. Plants of good shape and well flowered, in 8-inch pots, sold readily at $8 each, retail. This is without a doubt the best novelty in the way of a flowering plant yet introduced and we believe it is here to stay. It flowers continuously from December to May.

Joseph Kift & Son, who were the first to introduce them in this city, made a specialty of filling Parisian baskets. Their gardener, Wm. Spott, deserves a great deal of credit for the taste he displayed in arranging them.

Prices.

Beauties, $3 to $9 per doz.; Brides, Maids, Kaiserins, Meteors and Golden Gate, $6 to $12; Gontiers, $4 to $8; Perles, $4 to $10; Liberty, $15 to $50; cypripediums, $15; carnations, $2 to $5; hyacinths, $2 to $4; valley, $3 to $5; narcissus, $2 to $4; violets, single 75 cents, double 75 cents to $1.50; mignonette, $3 to $4; smilax, $15; asparagus, $50; cuneatum, $1.

Penna. Hort. Society.

At the meeting December 19 the society decided to hold a spring flower show March 20, 21, 22 and 23, upon lines similar to that of last season. The committee on establishing premiums is composed of Edwin Lonsdale, W. Atlee Burpee, John G. Gardner, John Westcott, W. K. Harris and John McCleary.

Letters were read from the Department of Agriculture at Washington and the Division of Pomology, asking for photographs of Horticultural Hall and the officers of the society, to have place in the department's exhibit at the Paris Exposition, and advising of arrangements in progress for supplementing the show there of apples of 1899 with the early fruits of 1900 in their season.

Secretary Rust reported premiums offered by Henry F. Michell for competition at each of the monthly meetings of 1900; also at the March and November shows.

Fourteen new members were elected and fourteen others were proposed for membership.

The exhibit of the meeting was of seedling orchids from the houses of George B. Wilson, West Philadelphia, shown by the gardener, Alphonse Perrecot. One, the Cyp. "G. B. Wilson," was grown by the exhibitor. The judges, Edwin Lonsdale, J. D. Eisele and J. McCleary, recommended a silver medal for the Cattleya Percivaliana alba, a certificate of merit for the Cattleya cross of grandiflora and Eldorado alba, and honorable mention for the others; also a vote of thanks for the superb display.

Officers were chosen as follows: President, Jas. M. Rhodes, Ardmore; vice-presidents, Henry F. Michell, Robert Craig, George Goebel, M. D., Edwin Lonsdale; treasurer, Sidney W. Keith; secretary, David Rust; botanist, Thos. Meehan; entomologist, Dr. H. C. McCook, D. D.; chemist, Dr. Persifor Frazer. Executive council, John Westcott, Dr. J. Cheston Morris, Moses Paxson, W. K. Harris, Chester Davis, Thomas Long and John McCleary.

FLATBUSH, N. Y.

Flatbush growers practically all sold out of flowering plants and say it has been the best "plant Christmas" on record.

Charles Zeller & Sons, who have for many years made a specialty of small orange trees, say they could have sold twice as many as they had ready and that was over 800 trees. They were grand this year and every store of any account had some.

Carl Woerner, manager for Mrs. Meissner, reports splendid business, not alone in flowering stock but also in palms, ferns and general decorative plants.

Louis Schmutz made a great strike with primulas and his remarkable novelty, the new "Pepper." It has been a busy season with him.

David Mellis wishes it came oftener. Business has been extremely good with him, to be sure. His decks are ready for Easter now.

As to the cut flower growers, Dailledouze Bros., as usual, have had a very busy time of it. Their carnations have been superb. Their new carnation, "666," has been bringing the highest price on record for carnations in New York; it is certainly the largest we've seen.

Clem Wocker reports business entirely satisfactory. His carnations have done well so far.

To strangers visiting New York we would say, spend a day among the Flatbush growers; you will learn and see something new, meet the best natured lot of boys in the country, and if you happen to be there on a Thursday night you'll have a good time on the alleys. On the evening of December 28th the club will roll for the "mysterious prizes," which contests always provoke the utmost hilarity. The following were the scores rolled December 21st:

BOSTON, DEC. 16.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Superba, a silvery pink Jap. Inc., which scored commercial scale 88 points.

CINCINNATI, DEC. 16. — Superba before this committee scored commercial scale 91 points.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—Ant. C. Zvolanek, West Hoboken, N. J., exhibited Miss Florence E. Denzer, a light pink Jap. Ref., which scored commercial scale 83 points.

BOSTON, DEC. 20.—Miss Florence E. Denzer before this committee scored commercial scale 86 points.

ELMER D. SMITH, Sec'y.

TORONTO.

The annual meeting of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association took place in St. George's hall, December 19. The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $105, and a membership of eighty-five. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, W. Jay; vice-president, W. Grainger; secretary, W. Jay, Jr.; associate secretary, E. Collins; treasurer, G. N. Mills. Executive committee: Thos. Manton, W. Manton, G. W. Goodier, Alonzo Watkins, F. Brown, John Chambers, W. Woods.

CLEVELAND.

Christmas trade was generally satisfactory. There was a large increase over last year in both plants and cut flowers.

J. M. Gasser reports quite a demand for good cattleyas and other orchids. Also for violets. He alone disposed of 10,000, and ran short.

THE LAWSON CARNATION.

Editor Florists' Review: In your issue of Nov. 23 it is stated that Dailedouze Bros. had placed their order for 20,000 Lawson carnations and Robert Craig for 16,000. It should have been the Chicago Carnation Co. 20,000 and Robt. Craig & Son 16,000. The latter have now ordered 19,000. The order of Dailedouze Bros. is for 10,000. PETER FISHER.

Benjamin Dorrance registers new rose Sara Nesbitt, a sport from Madame Cusin, a size larger than the parent. Color, light pink, very delicate, shading deeper in center; does not grow dark in summer weather; a better grower than Madame Cusin; habit otherwise identical.

Mr. Henry Schroeder, our local nurseryman, read a very interesting paper on "Early Plums" at the twenty-fourth annual session of the Iowa State Hort. Society at Des Moines, Dec. 12 to 15.

He has had it reprinted, as also a paper read by him at Mt. Pleasant, November 22, and will no doubt be willing to mail copies to friends in the trade.

GERMANTOWN, PA.

After a discussion by John Welsh Young on the subject of "Roses" at the meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society December 11, an election of officers for the ensuing year took place, resulting as follows: President, Edward Neville; vice-presidents, Chas. J. Wister, Albert Woltemate and Roberts Le Boutillier; secretary and treasurer, George Redles.

WAVERLY, IA.—Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Case have started in the business with one greenhouse.

FULLERTON, CAL.—The nursery firm of Richman & Mills has leased new grounds near Placentia that will double the size of their establishment.

UNIVERSITY PARK, COLO.—Albert O'Brien sold his lease to Lyle C. Waterbury, which brings the latter back after an absence of over two years.

Greenhouse Woodwork

Open-air-dried Cypress Lumber is more durable, and better suited to Greenhouse conditions than kiln-dried stock. But you cannot get it from those that are engaged in the business in a small way—even though their entire business is confined to greenhouse material—for it takes a long time for the lumber to thoroughly dry and this means an investment in lumber that only those of large capital can make. The only way to have air-dried lumber is to buy green lumber and hold it until it dries. Those that order dry lumber from the producers of Cypress get kiln-dried stock. It is cheaper for them to kiln-dry than to hold the stock long enough to season it in the open air. We carry a large stock and fill all orders with open-air-dried Cypress clear of knots, sap and all other defects.

PEORIA, ILL.

The florists of this city are well pleased with their Christmas trade. Carnations sold at 75 cents a dozen and cleaned up well. Of roses Maids, Meteors, Brides and Perles went at $1.50 to $2.00 a dozen, and at these figures there were good sales. Cole Bros. cut 8,000 carnations from their benches, including some fine Bradts. Louis Miller cut a good many violets and Cole Bros. took the whole cut. Chas. Loveridge had a nice crop of Beauties and carnations.

J. C. Murray's roses and carnations were in just right and from some benches containing 3,000 carnation plants 2,000 blooms were cut in four days. Henry Baer is in charge of the carnations and is to be congratulated on his success.

The plant trade was excellent. Cole Bros. had a house of azaleas and a quantity of Boston ferns that were remarkably fine. J. C. Murray disposed of 100 azaleas, also many primulas and cyclamens.

Kuhl's store reported an excellent trade. Mr. Kuhl was the only florist having Harrisii lilies.

Green was a drug in the market, the commission men selling it as low as 2 cents per yard and not cleaning up at that. Holly went well, as did also Christmas trees. J. R.

FREEPORT, ILL.—John Bauscher, Jr., has finished the erection of several large modern houses that make an important addition to his establishment.

JOLIET, ILL.—A. R. Starr, the veteran florist, is dead. Death was due to paralysis, from which he has suffered for several months. He was born in Ithaca, N. Y., in 1832 and settled in this city in 1871. He leaves a widow and three married daughters.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Christmas trade here was the best known in years and everything sold at good prices. Carnations retailed at 75 cents to $1.50; roses, $1.50 up; violets also went well at a fancy price. The growers here got their share of the pudding in selling carnations at $4 to $6; roses, $8 and upwards; violets, $1.50 to $2.

Blooming plants sold well. Azalea and cyclamen took the lead at good prices. The market florists felt a little blue on Saturday morning, as it was raining, but by evening were a happy lot, each one having had his share of the excellent trade. Taking the trade in general, they all had a "merry Christmas" and are looking for a "happy New Year." FRED.

TROUBLE AHEAD.

Editor Florists' Review: Kindly advise as to who is responsible for that (?) after the word "noble" in your late Buffalo notes. Is it the Buffalo correspondent, the editor, or the printer? We can forgive the printer much, the editor more, but if after honoring a poor worm like W. S. of Buffalo with all the offices within our gift—yea, even going beyond the limitations of sex and making him board of lady managers—he is going to insert such offensive punctuation marks when they are least deserved, we wish to know it right now. We will attend to his case in February.

THE ANANIAS SOCIETY.
Per W. N. R.

TIFFIN, O.—In the Tiffin Daily Tribune of December 20 appears a three-column description of the greenhouse establishment of Mr. Lewis Ullrich, together with an excellent portrait of that gentleman. From it we learn that Mr. Ullrich started into the greenhouse business in 1882 and now has fourteen large modern houses and that the large business is conducted in a thoroughly systematic manner.

WINCHESTER, MASS.—Carl J. Dane is building another house at the Hillcrest Conservatories. This is No. 3.

WILLIAMSTOWN, W. Va.—The greenhouse business formerly conducted by J. W. Fischer, who died last July, will be discontinued.

MARINETTE, WIS.—C. H. Gleason has moved his store to 1509 Main street.

BAYONNE, N. J.—The greenhouses of Paul Stier were damaged by fire to the amount of $1,500, December 16. There was no insurance.

NATICK, MASS.—E. M. Wood & Co. will this winter build two large rose houses, each 20x350. The contract has been given to the Lord & Burnham Co., New York.

ETHEL CROCKER.

Absolutely the best pink Carnation ever offered the trade. Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself, you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from Sept to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. Herr's Pansies at $1.00 now, and a regular assortment of Carnations in a list ready Jan. 1st. ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

ROSES.

The grand new rose Liberty, most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size; never showing any deformed, black or bull heads either in winter or summer and far surpassing Meteor in freedom of bloom. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance. Prices are as follows for A1 stock: Own rooted plants in 2½-inch pots, 12 plants, 60c; 25 plants, 50c; 50 plants, 30c; 100 plants, 25c; 1000 plants, 20c each.

Grafted plants in 2½-inch pots: 12 plants, 75c; 25 plants, 60c; 50 plants, 50c; 100 plants, 40c; 1000 plants, 35c each. Satisfactory reference or deposit from all unknown correspondents. Orders coming in after this date can be filled only in April or later, as my stock for March delivery is all sold.

DETROIT.

Christmas was a hummer and no mistake, with good weather to deliver stock without wrapping, up to Sunday evening, when it turned cold and continued so up to the time of writing. Everything sold well, but it is apparent that as each Christmas comes around the demand for plants increases and the supply was not equal to the demand, Breitmeyer & Son having the best and also the largest quantity. They also put up a great many baskets, which sold nearly as fast as one man could fill them. Mr. B. goes east for new ideas every holiday season and his efforts seem to be appreciated by the high priced buyers.

In cut flowers all the retailers report a clean up, with carnations and violets in the lead. Roses were none too plentiful, thus making the price high. In fact, we hear the old refrain that trade was 50 per cent better, so of course the growers feel good, for settling day is near at hand and the 50 per cent more business means prompt payment of bills.

We are to have another retailer in Woodward avenue. Mr. Chas. Scheible, who has been with B. Schroeter for some years, will soon open up above the park.

At the last meeting of the club Mr. E. A. Scribner read a paper on "Fumigation for Green Fly," which was very ably written and contained some new ideas on such an old subject. He claimed death was caused by suffocation and not from the effects of nicotine in the tobacco, and that he had the best success with old, dried up stems that had been bleached out by rain and sun for a great length of time. A great deal of quizzing was done, but he made his point good. RAG.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

To sum the situation up here, "people were flower crazy." Anything and everything sold, and at top prices. Trade began about Friday, or rather it started the beginning of the past week, and wound up like a whirlwind.

Stock was somewhat scarce and of fair quality. A few of the older growers resorted to pickling, and in consequence did not realize top price for their trash. From all accounts the trade ran about 30 to 40 per cent better than last year.

Green stuff also had its turn and was done to a finish. Not a scrap of a tree could be found Saturday night. Thursday and Friday saw more trees, holly, pine, etc., than was ever shown in Kansas City, and some predicted that there would be low prices on this stuff by Saturday night, but the writer spent something like a dollar in messenger service trying to find a tree Saturday night, and then could not get it. Holly was of fair quality and sold up clean.

In cut flowers, pink roses and colored carnations led, prices ranging from $2 to $4 for the former and 75 cents to $1 for common and $1.50 to $2 for fancy carnations. Beauties sold at from $3 to $18 per dozen; very few of the latter ones were to be had. Me-teors in good demand, with light supply. No violets to speak of. Bulb stock sold better than usual, principally narcissus and Romans. Plants had their inning, also, and sold well, among which were to be seen some fine poinsettias, azaleas, oranges, ericas and Sprenger, and brought top prices.

The fact that Christmas fell on Monday gave the florists additional work, as nearly half the transient or late comers came in Monday, thereby making delivery very irregular and preventing early orders from having the care they should have had. Weather was all that could be desired up to Saturday evening; even then not bad enough to tide the rush. We sure enough feel and welcome the times of prosperity. W.

ASTORIA, L. I.

A visit to W. H. Siebrecht's extensive and well kept place is always a pleasure and of the greatest of interest. Mr. Siebrecht is probably the largest bulb grower we have around New York. He forces upwards of a million bulbs a year and is considered a great authority on that line of stock. He has been experimenting with home grown lily of the valley with great success; his houses were full of the finest stock for Christmas.

A house of poinsettias looked grand, and then there were the immense quantities of bulbous stock in pots, pans and boxes, either for cutting or plant trade. He will soon have a fine lot of Acacia pubescens. A bench of Asparagus Sprenger is in splendid condition, so also is a general collection of foliage plants. Holiday trade has been very good with him. MENTOR, O.—Carl Hagenburger has a fine new pink carnation, a cross between Scott and McGowan, that he has named Lizzie Hagenburger.

ART AT FLOWER SHOWS.

Dear Editor: "The Novice" tells us that he can "with wonderful accuracy read between the lines" in what we wrote on the above subject in a recent issue. We are sorry he did not read our lines and not bother looking for what was not between. "The Novice" is not the only one who builds in rehearsal the sugar-loaf group. We assure him the fault is general. We can also assure him that most of the group classes call for or intend for "effect." What is a group arranged for? Flowers and plants, no matter how finely grown, become monotonous when similarity or formality rules in the arranging. Flower shows are not held for the purpose of pleasing judges or growers alone; we depend on the public to make them pay, we are expected to show the public our very best, and art is the very soul of Flora—it is merely disfigured or destroyed by many interpreters. Do away with the long tables of monotony, do away with formal groups, do away with the idea that art is of less importance than science at our shows. IVERA.

ST. JOSEPH, MICH.—The greenhouses of August Loeffler, one mile south of this city, were destroyed by fire the evening of December 24. Loss $5,000, with no insurance.

BRADFORD, PA.—Christmas trade nearly double of last year. Plants were the fad. We had a large supply and sold out clean at good prices. Cut flowers were very scarce. W. C. R.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Business continued firm all the week. Most of the florists, particularly those doing a shipping trade, started in Monday with Christmas prices, which were the highest ever obtained here, and there was not enough stock to go around.

Carnations especially were scarce, red and pink being in greatest demand. When they were gone white sold freely enough. Roses were scarce, too; Beauties took to the woods early and couldn't be found. Violets sold better than in former years. Carnations seem to be the favorite for the holidays and sold at 50 cents to $1.00 per dozen, the demand being greatest for the 75-cent quality. Beauties $6 to $12 per dozen; other roses $2 to $3.50; Romans and paper whites, 75 cents to $1; lilies $3 to $4; violets 30 to 35 cents. There was a good supply of pot plants on hand, but the increased demand was so heavy that everything in the shape of a good plant sold. Azaleas took the lead, although poinsettias sold well. Romans in pans and cyclamen and lilies stood next in favor.

Holly? Yes, holly wreaths sold well. Oh! how they sold. The desire to buy them seemed to possess man, woman and child, and the demand used up the supply of holly in a way that was astonishing; probably double the quantity was used this year than last.

Trade was greater than last year, variously estimated at from 10 to 25 per cent more. The whole fall business has been splendid, never better, and everybody seems satisfied.

A young man ordered a spray of flowers for his girl, which started the query, "Is she dead?"

G. F. CRABB.

MILWAUKEE.

Christmas business exceeded all former years, summing up the total, although a more noticeable shortage in colored roses was experienced than ever before. There was not nearly enough Maids and Meteors to go around and good stock ranged around top figures, $15 to $18 per 100.

White stock had to be substituted to a great extent to make up respectable proportions on orders. Although prices weakened on all white stock and supply was fair, still everything was cleaned up at the final rush. Carnations came to the rescue in fine shape, and, while just about enough to go around, still good reds were short of demand. Prices ranged $4 to $6, with market firm. Violets were not over plentiful, bringing $2 per 100. The usual glut of this stock the last day was not noticeable this Christmas. Beauties were listed high enough to keep orders well within supply and what were in the market were disposed of early. Prices ranged from $3 to $12 per dozen, according to quality. Poinsettias sold readily from $3.50 to $5 per dozen. Romans, paper whites, stevia, mignonette were somewhat weak on the market the early part of the week, but later were pretty well cleaned up for work on orders for assorted flowers. Smilax was plentiful.

In holly, green, mistletoe, needle pines, wild smilax and other decorative stock there was an unusual call, and the sign of prosperity is shown by the large amount of decorative stock used everywhere. Holly wreaths sold beyond the expectations of some of the florists and many were cleaned out by Saturday.

Blooming plants, palms, ferns and araucarias came in for a good share for Christmas gifts. The weather was ideal for delivery until late Saturday, when it turned cold, and plants had to be protected against frost.

The outlook for New Year's trade is good, but a shortage of stock is anticipated.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

The Past and the Future.

Let us congratulate The Review on the fact that it will be the first floricultural trade paper printed and sent flying all over the world in the last year of the century. Let us extend to all in our business—the old and the young, the great and the small—our congratulations and hopes for a bright future. It is an all important matter for contemplation that whatever we think, say, or do belongs to this end-of-the-century year, and that all of us, we hope, are destined to have the opportunity of assisting in some way to make the new era the brightest and the happiest, certainly the most wonderfully advanced, of all that has passed.

We, the retail florists of America, have nothing to be ashamed of in our share of the world's floricultural history during the past hundred years, for though as a distinctive line of trade ours can only date back to the latter part of it, yet in that brief time we have accomplished more, sold more, perhaps, than the combined florists of the Old World. The American retail florist can only refer back to or study the past fifty years. The struggles of those early days were pathetic—heroic. Coming from homes across the seas, moneyless, but rich in love of flowers, we find them starting upon nothing with the few insignificant plants and flowers they found here; for one of the first sales we can trace is a pot of ivy, then a geranium, again a rose plant, till boxes and hanging baskets were filled, and finally it got large enough to open a store and cause competition.

To the Society of American Florists we would say, when holding your great convention in New York next August: Go in a body to Old Washington Market, where the first flowers and plants were sold, and have the venerable Charles Zeller unveil a bronze tablet to the memory of the few who started the business on the glittering road it has traversed, aye, to those who made the trade even what it is to-day, for history and even present events cast a halo 'round their names.

It was only the other day we met an old friend, and after summarizing the present Christmas trade, he started anecdotes of thirty years ago; sand was used in place of moss then, and broom corn stalks for sticks, thread instead of wire, yes, often pieces of white cotton were used in wreaths to fill in between flowers. We, ourselves, down to fifteen years ago manufactured roses out of fallen petals; the same with camellias. Balsams were the leading flower for "groundwork," and no funeral would be complete without the tuberose, and what carnations and roses! And then the prices—whew! It's delicious to look back on the past for some things.

The civil war took many of the country's brightest florists away, but the prosperity that followed the struggle gave the greatest impetus to floriculture, and there are many among us to-day who are deserving of as much honor as the greatest men in other lines of art, science, or commerce. Let us just glance at history.

What does the world's floricultural history tell us? Oh, yes; our art was recognized at the very start; it has decked both the civilized and the uncivilized natures in every corner of the earth; we know there were many lovely designs made in the earliest ages, but the descriptions and prices of floral decorations in almost all ancient history are purely mythological suppositions. And what do we find in modern history? Well, several affairs where as high as $1,000 or $1,500 were spent by whole nations or rulers to beautify certain celebrations.

All Europe thought the French were crazy—aye, even the French themselves imagined they were influenced by the highest pinnacles of enthusiastic grandeur when they paid $2,500 for the floral decorations to crown Napoleon and Eugenie's glory. Within the past twenty years, even twelve years, this sumptuousness has been cast into shadow by private citizens of New York. Over $3,000 was paid for the flowers used to decorate one dinner and there have been several society balls where the floral decorations have cost $5,000, and we have reason to believe the decorations at one wedding cost $8,500. Many a belle has had $400 or $500 worth of bouquets sent her at the Patriarch's ball, and the combined value of the floral decorations and bouquets seen at those events would often reach $10,000. All honor to those who were and are equal to the occasion.

The astonishing growth of our business during the last quarter of the century may be attributed by one authority or another to several causes, but history or facts will prove that next to the prosperity of the country the retail florists deserve the greatest credit. It was they who put the value on stock and induced the growers not only to build, but gave them the means of doing it. It was they who, just as they are continuing to do, enhanced the worth of plant or flower by beauty of arrangement, and en-

The Past and the Future.

Let us congratulate The Review on the fact that it will be the first floricultural trade paper printed and sent flying all over the world in the last year of the century. Let us extend to all in our business—the old and the young, the great and the small—our congratulations and hopes for a bright future. It is an all important matter for contemplation that whatever we think, say, or do belongs to this end-of-the-century year, and that all of us, we hope, are destined to have the opportunity of assisting in some way to make the new era the brightest and the happiest, certainly the most wonderfully advanced, of all that has passed.

We, the retail florists of America, have nothing to be ashamed of in our share of the world's floricultural history during the past hundred years, for though as a distinctive line of trade ours can only date back to the latter part of it, yet in that brief time we have accomplished more, sold more, perhaps, than the combined florists of the Old World. The American retail florist can only refer back to or study the past fifty years. The struggles of those early days were pathetic—heroic. Coming from homes across the seas, moneyless, but rich in love of flowers, we find them starting upon nothing with the few insignificant plants and flowers they found here; for one of the first sales we can trace is a pot of ivy, then a geranium, again a rose plant, till boxes and hanging baskets were filled, and finally it got large enough to open a store and cause competition.

couraged and demanded higher and more perfect types of material. But we wish to be generous, and give all a share in the glorious achievement of raising American floriculture to such a high standard. When you come closer to the retailer and study art, you will find that it is of a quality all alone; there is no country to-day where floral art has reached the standard raised by Americans, and this was made possible only by the production of perfect flowers, for it is to excellence of material almost as much as to refined judgment that technical knowledge of and better appreciation of commercial flora, ideal and successful flower shows, a more definite realization of "the survival of the fittest" in everything, a Society of Floral Artists, a National Horticultural Society, the concentration of specialists in cultivation as well as artists in arranging, in larger and more magnificent city establishments, the disappearance of trade or horticultural newspapers run by cliques or in the interest of growers alone, the supplying of European flower markets in winter by American growers, a specially intended for retailers, we are told that there are very few growers who don't peruse this corner, for what sells best in the market interests all, and if a paper is worth reading it is worth the paltry subscription of one dollar a year. We want you to help us make this department better than it is; we help you, you can help others, and make this year memorable in many ways.

The convention next August will possibly be the largest gathering of florists and the best trade exhibition ever seen anywhere; it is to be hoped that the retailers will either make a creditable display or see one that will benefit them in many ways. The smallest are often capable of producing the greatest results, and there is no florist too humble or too poor to aspire to in some way elevate floriculture. We must all understand that to learn is compulsory with the florist; to succeed he must continually study. No man can say that he has passed entirely through the school, for in every branch of our trade there is lots of room at the top. 'Tis well it is so, for that fact will always insure greater effort and higher attainments.

The observant among us will have noticed many things the past Christmas and New Year's day and will benefit thereby. The demand for flowering plants will increase, but we must improve in cultivation as well as in variety. Every dealer will admit that if he had better stock he could have sold very much more. Take ericas; we must have brighter colors; there will be a use for plenty of tall poinsettias, but the short ones in pans will increase in popularity. We must have roses in pots; ditto bright colored carnations. And what is the matter with Euphorbia Jacquinæiflora? Although for cheap work ordinary Chinese primroses will do, yet we must have those named varieties, such as Crimson King (a grand color), Giant Pink, Purity and Reading Blue.

We have long since dispensed with seasons in flowers, but we need closer relation between retailer and grower on what is best. Many and many a good flower has been poorly received in this country because its vitality was low on account of over-propagation. We can afford to be more generous, we can afford to give more encouragement to the great men who are aiming to reach higher standards in the race of commercial flowers.

One prominent feature of the plant trade at Christmas was Begonia Glory of Lorraine; it was forced too much and, after a week in the stores, shed its flowers in consequence. Much of it was left on hand, and it is more than likely many retailers will refuse to buy it again; that would be a grave mistake, because it is a lovely thing, grand in hanging baskets.

We have noticed that brighter colors prevail in the florists' windows for New Year's day trade, but regret that much of it is in ribbons. Wintry we owe whatever success or prominence we may have attained, and though we have accomplished wonders in the recent past, everything points toward far greater results in the near future.

We have already got the finest retail florists' stores and attachments in existence, the finest flowers and the highest prices to be seen or obtained anywhere, but we have much to learn and lots to avoid. A new element has crept into our business only to retard, not to stop, the growth of refinement. The monstrosities which are the fruits of narrow minds and dwarfed intellects can be seen like a fungus on every art in every age, but beauty of thought in language or substance remains imperishable through all vicissitudes.

We are destined to see many changes in our business in the early part of the twentieth century: A better understanding and a closer relationship between retailer and grower, a different system of marketing, better quality and more variety of all classes of plants and flowers, a more paper exclusively devoted to retail florists, home production of everything imported now, etc., etc.

And there is no good reason why we should not commence some of the great improvements at once. The sooner we realize the fact that this country will neither become smaller nor less an important factor in the destinies of other nations, that the American people will not grow to be less lovers of the beautiful, we will understand that there can never be a market like ours, if we are but equal to it.

The millstone 'round the neck of a greater prosperity to-day is a woful lack of variety of stock on the market. We seem to want to dictate to an imperious beauty what she shall wear, whilst nature is busy producing gems which should shame us.

With this first issue in the New Year of The Review, we would call attention to the important fact that it is the only paper in the world that devotes a special department to retail florists, and whilst what is written is weather has driven peddlers off the streets, to the benefit of store trade.

Although New Year's trade has almost dwindled to nothing in some cities, compared with what it used to be, yet in New York there was quite a brisk trade in cut flowers, which were of better quality than those supplied for Christmas. It is expected that on next New Year's day, being the dawn of the twentieth century, there will be an enormous trade in flowers, and 'tis not too soon to think of it.

KEEPING CARNATIONS.

Editor Florists' Review:—Almost every florist is more or less interested in the keeping qualities of the various varieties of carnations after being cut. A remarkable case has come to my notice to-day which is a record breaker. On Thanksgiving day, Nov. 30th, I cut 12 mixed carnation blooms for a friend. They were Jubilee, Mrs. Bradt, Flora Hill, White Cloud, Mrs. Joost, Daybreak and Victor. To-day, Dec. 26th, I saw four of those same blooms in good condition and likely to last three more days. They were two Flora Hills and two Mrs. Bradts. They were kept in a cool room and of course had fresh water and the stems cut every day, but even with such treatment four weeks is a long time to keep carnation blooms. A. F. J. BAUR.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Looking Ahead.

In some greenhouse establishments there will by this time be a transformation scene. Christmas demands have cleared off benches, and stock wanted later will now receive attention. As I have often remarked, a florist must be a thinking man, at least more than in some callings, for if he is going to be successful he must be nearly always thinking and preparing a year or so ahead of time.

You will naturally want to perpetuate or prepare a good stock of those plants that were in most demand at the past holidays, and although your memory may be excellent, and you a veteran at the business, it is far safer to make a memorandum of the quantities you had and how they sold, as well as what you should have had. There is one broad fact: A man who keeps a store buys everything and is under no expense for growing. He makes a fair profit on all he handles. But the man who has a greenhouse and retails should endeavor to raise all he possibly can and have it in the best order when wanted. If he has to buy much he makes little profit, for he has had the expense of running the greenhouses, which will more than consume the profits on what he buys.

It is these considerations that compel us to see the great advantages of a division of labor. Growing or producing and retailing are entirely distinct businesses. If you found a man with the ability for both, it would be impossible for him to practice both. One would unfit him for the other. And although there are perhaps thousands trying to do this very thing, the sooner this grand division of the business occurs the better.

Azaleas.

Azaleas that have been used for decorating or where not well enough flowered to sell can either be put in a good warm house and encouraged to grow (in which case they will set their buds very early and can be flowered early in the fall), or they can be put in a cool house and can wait till after Easter, when you will have others to prune back and start growing.

While on Azaleas, let me remind you that your Easter plants should now be in a very cool house. That splendid old variety, Mme. van der Cruyssen, is always difficult to keep back, but remember that anything above freezing will do for the Indian azaleas that you want to retard.

Cytisus.

Cytisus (or genista, as it is often called) also wants a very cool house, or it will be too early for the middle of April.

Poinsettias.

Poinsettias have sold so well that we are short of plants for next year's stock. If grown in pots, and you have any left, just lay them on their sides under a dry, warm bench; the dryer they get the better. Those grown on benches for cutting is where most of the stock will come from. They can be lifted and their roots put into flats of dry soil and they will keep in any dry, warm house or shed. Early April is quite early enough to start these old plants growing.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

It is not advisable to try and grow on poor plants of the beautiful Gloire de Lorraine begonias. Good plants can be propagated now; or, rather, propagated now they will make fine plants a year hence. The European horticultural papers say they propagate them both by cuttings of the stems and leaves, the leaves making the thriftiest plants. We will allow them to be the best authority, for our experience is yet limited with this most attractive of plants.

Bulbs.

We have practiced this winter as we preached, and brought in no tulips or Von Sions. Of late years there is always a large percentage of loss with these extra early attempts. After New Year's any of the good tulips, such as La Reine, Waterloo, Yellow Prince, or Rose Grisdelin, will force early and surely as well as Von Sion narcissus, providing, of course, that you boxed them early enough to be now well rooted, and that you give them a top heat of 70 deg., with plenty of moisture, and covered with cheese cloth or some other shading.

Don't attempt to force Dutch hyacinths till February. They are not in any demand and not very satisfactory.

Astilbe.

It will be time now to pot your Astilbe japonica. Give the roots a good soaking before you pot them and if short of room they will do under the bench for four or five weeks.

Crimson Ramblers.

We have a number of Crimson Rambler roses that were grown during summer in 7 and 8-inch pots and which made canes of 5 and 6 ft. The wood is well ripened and as the roots are not disturbed they will, I believe, come into flower with 10 or 11 weeks in the houses. But those lifted from the ground in November should not be exposed to very hard freezing at any time and should be now in a very cool house and coming along slowly. They take a good fourteen weeks to bring them in right. It takes some time to get them well rooted; anything like forcing would be fatal unless they were rooted.

With any plant of this kind, either established or not, it is proper to begin cool and let the heat increase gradually. If you have to do three weeks of strong forcing let it be the last three weeks, for that is natural and will do no harm.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas could have been put into a cool house a month ago, but nothing like forcing should have been done up to this date. After they show signs of starting keep them in a temperature of 50 degrees. The last six weeks before Easter they will stand 60 degrees at night without harm, but are easily hurt in the early stages of their growth.

Various Plants.

There are several plants of which you lifted several for stock and now you have time and opportunity to propagate by putting in a batch of cuttings and disposing of the old plants, for the young stock will give you plenty of cuttings. I refer to salvia, ageratum, acalypha, feverfew, lobelia, sweet alyssum, etc.

Lilies.

The care of the Easter lilies will soon be on you, and you cannot begin to sort them over too soon. I notice at present that the Bermuda longiflorum will want at least 10 degrees higher from now on to bring them in with the Harrisii, and you may as well give them the extra heat at once. If the 7 to 9 Harrisii were potted and started soon after receiving the bulbs they will be plenty early enough in a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees for the next six weeks. I am glad to say that with us there is a decrease in diseased plants from last year.

NEW YORK.

There is but little to record on the first day of the year. In regard to business, in a certain degree we might repeat what we wrote you last week. Right after Christmas the weather became intensely cold and still continues so. It was impossible to sell flowers on the streets; too cold, even, to wear Traendly & Schenck's basement; the damage was very slight.

Remember, next Monday night, January 8, the Florists' Club meets. Bowling as usual in the afternoon. And on the Saturday following the New York Gardeners' Society will meet to discuss the question of quarterly meetings, at which all the local societies will be invited to exhibit. It is proposed to hold a grand carnation show in March, and it is hoped samples of every new carnation in America will be at this show. Then a rose show in June, and so on. Kindly prepare for them.

This seems to be the season of festivity. Invitations are still coming in from the outlying horticultural societies. We wish the trolley car or train services were better in many places.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

One of the most enjoyable affairs ever given by those in any way connected with horticulture in New York was the first annual dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, held in the Vanderbilt building, Tarrytown, December 28. Some seventy-five members and friends were present. From New York city to Sing Sing along the Hudson, and from West Farms to Greenwich along the Sound, there are probably more wealthy homes than can be found in any like rural section of the world, but this section of the country is not only famous for its wealth and scenic beauty, but for its horticulturists, and when, as on an occasion like the above, one can have the pleasure of meeting men whose names and any; and if you are inclined to be reflective, consider these points and their effect on the market. Of course, there was quite a business done, but if we quote the majority of both wholesalers and retailers, it was only equal to that of a good Saturday trade.

Extra grade stock naturally went first, and at fairly good prices. There were many who offered plants and quite a few were sold. We don't wish to write anything discouraging on this day; nay, we would say if you are dissatisfied in any way, try another. New York is a splendid market for anything good, but the worst of all for anything poor, and it will continue so. All the wholesalers and retailers seem hopeful for a good year and the indications are bright; none brighter than we wish them.

There was quite a commotion among the Twenty-eighth street florists on Friday afternoon. The whole of the metropolitan fire department seemed to have been rushed to the street. The cause of it all was the electric wires in

The employees of the well known firm of horticultural architects and builders, Messrs. Hitchings & Co., announce their third grand annual ball to be held in Columbia hall, 608 Ocean avenue, Jersey City, N. J., Tuesday evening, February 6, 1900.

At their meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing year, held December 4, 1899, the following officers were elected: President, Walter G. Gibbons; vice-president, John N. McArthur.

The committee on arrangements this year is an unusually active one, and promise that this ball will eclipse all their other attempts. No effort will be spared to make the evening an enjoyable one, and to their host of friends they extend a cordial invitation to be present and share in the enjoyment. Prof. Beggs' orchestra will furnish the music.

In the absence of President Cockburn, William Scott presided, and surrounding him were representatives of the local, metropolitan and horticultural papers, the newly elected officers and some prominent local citizens. The menu was good and Messrs. Gibson, Neubrand and Cooke deserve much credit for the general arrangement.

With the coffee and cigars came the vocal and instrumental music and short speeches. Mr. Taaffe, Jr., dispensed sweet sounds on the violin and cornet; John Whyte, S. Butterfield, W. E. Marshall, James Scott and others sang appropriate songs, and Judge Andrews, John Shore, F. R. Pierson, J. W. Withers, Wm. Anderson, J. I. Donlan and others spoke on timely topics.

The election of officers for 1900 which took place at a short business meeting held before the dinner, resulted as follows: President, William

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Looking Ahead.

In some greenhouse establishments there will by this time be a transformation scene. Christmas demands have cleared off benches, and stock wanted later will now receive attention. As I have often remarked, a florist must be a thinking man, at least more than in some callings, for if he is going to be successful he must be nearly always thinking and preparing a year or so ahead of time.

You will naturally want to perpetuate or prepare a good stock of those plants that were in most demand at the past holidays, and although your memory may be excellent, and you a veteran at the business, it is far safer to make a memorandum of the quantities you had and how they sold, as well as what you should have had. There is one broad fact: A man who keeps a store buys everything and is under no expense for growing. He makes a fair profit on all he handles. But the man who has a greenhouse and retails should endeavor to raise all he possibly can and have it in the best order when wanted. If he has to buy much he makes little profit, for he has had the expense of running the greenhouses, which will more than consume the profits on what he buys.

It is these considerations that compel us to see the great advantages of a division of labor. Growing or producing and retailing are entirely distinct businesses. If you found a man with the ability for both, it would be impossible for him to practice both. One would unfit him for the other. And although there are perhaps thousands trying to do this very thing, the sooner this grand division of the business occurs the better.

Azaleas.

Azaleas that have been used for decorating or where not well enough flowered to sell can either be put in a good warm house and encouraged to grow (in which case they will set their buds very early and can be flowered early in the fall), or they can be put in a cool house and can wait till after Easter, when you will have others to prune back and start growing.

While on Azaleas, let me remind you that your Easter plants should now be in a very cool house. That splendid old variety, Mme. van der Cruyssen, is always difficult to keep back, but remember that anything above freezing will do for the Indian azaleas that you want to retard.

BUFFALO.

The glory of New Year's as a flower day has departed. Yet there was a fair business done. Few plants were asked for, and it was roses, carnations and violets that changed hands. Incoming aldermen and city officials were the recipients of baskets and bunches of kets devoted to flowers, the universal use, and extremely low prices, etc., and then the correspondent asked why our prices were out of the reach of the masses. We happen to know one man in Belgium growing carnations for the Paris market, growing them in our style, and he gets quite as good a price for his product the year round as we do in this country. Covent Garden also gets quite as good prices for roses and carnations as the grower gets in New York, and I think if London and Paris had such Bridesmaids as New York offers, or the carnations from Dailledouze Bros., that they would bring a larger price than they bring here. Paris may and does get carloads of cheap rubbish from Italy which doubtless sells at a very low figure, and that is what the casual observer notices, and then spins a yarn about.

roses. The big charity ball came off in the evening and two buds emerged into society during the afternoon, and, altogether, there was an air of good feeling and good business. The real air was a few degrees above zero, with plenty of snow, with the sun shining, so from the native point of view it was an ideal New Year's. Prices ruled about the same as at Christmas, with a rather better opportunity for the retailer to come out whole.

All nature will feel the lengthening days, even if they be at present but a trifle longer, and we shall soon have more flowers, a cheaper price and more sales. It is pleasanter all round to sell to more people at a reasonable price than to the select few at what seems an extortionate price, although these holiday prices are no extortion, neither the grower nor the retailer getting more than a very moderate profit.

I read in one of our best dailies a few weeks ago an article on the flower markets of Paris, the number of mar-

If we had fuel for hauling, or at George Fancourt's price, intelligent slaves for help and a few other advantages, we might produce flowers at less cost. But with present conditions and prices the margin of profit is small, even in the best managed establishments. In sunny climes, where flowers spring from Mother Earth the year round, there are no florists; but where blizzards prevail and flowers are a luxury, florists exist, and till we can get flowers from Porto Rico or Mexico landed here as good as the home product (which they never can be), flowers will cost money when produced under glass and under such unfavorable conditions.

"W. S." received a terrible call-down from "W. N. R.," the sage of Mt. Greenwood, Ill. You would not think that placid, smooth and lovable man had so much venom or would attempt to crush a "poor worm," but we know him. Oh, yes, we know him. He is not angry at the writer, but hates the noble society which he founded to be called in question even in the slightest. We freely acknowledge the Ananias Society to be noble without any question, but were not so sure that outside of its membership it was considered so noble. We made a mistake and are sorry for it, and trust that with this apology the noble founder will not seek to deprive us of our offices and emoluments. W. S.

BOSTON.

Is it too late for a word about Christmas? Well, we had one. There is no doubt about that. The skies were blue and balmy, the gentlest of zephyrs wafted the odor of the growing grass, the birds twittered about their spring costumes, and only a very few days ago both pansies and dandelions were to be had for the seeking in their natural haunts.

Oh, it was Christmas all right. And trade went funny. There was an almost standstill, with even a droop in prices until Saturday morning, when it burst upon the timid salesmen like the attack of the Boers upon Buller's relief column. Never was there a more quick lunch made of a huge supply of all kinds of bloom. Prices doubled up like a jack-knife; roses 8 to 40 cents each in pink, white and in Meteors, and Beauties called for $1.50 each in best grades. Pinks started out bravely, but met with a slight rebuff, and the always accommodating dealers went down a peg on figures so that in the aggregate they did not go so well as the roses. And it was the same on violets. Starting at $2.50 and $3 per 100 in the morning, they were obliged to sell at less than half that before night. But both pinks and violets were scarce for a day or two afterwards and sold for better prices. Since Christmas, trade has been rather quiet, naturally, but we are still throwing open the boxes and looking around hopefully.

PHILADELPHIA.

Business has been good the past week, there being an old-time New Year's rush over the balls and parties given.

Hugh Graham had two large decorations and Julius Wolff, Jr., did the decorating for a wedding at the Mercantile Club, which required all his palms and an immense quantity of cut flowers.

Good Beauties, Brides and Maids are still very scarce. We notice a few daffies coming in, but not enough to make it worth while quoting.

Prices

Beauties, $3 to $9 per dozen; Brides and Maids, firsts $8 to $15, seconds $3 to $8; Kaiserins, Meteors, Morgans, Gontiers, Golden Gate, $3 to $15; La France and Perles, $4 to $8; Liberty $15 to $40 per 100. Cattleyas, $60; cypripediums, $15; carnations, ordinary, $1.50 to $3; fancy, $4 to $8; hyacinths, $2 to $3; valley, $3 to $5; narcissus, $3 to $4; mignonette, $4; violets, single, 50 to 75 cents; double, $1 to $1.50; asparagus, 50 cents; adiantum, $1; smilax, 15 cents.

Christmas Note.

Christmas, ninety-nine, proved ideal from a grower's standpoint. The weather for the first five days of the week before was clear and cool, Saturday and Sunday were cloudy, but not until Christmas day did a cold wave reach Philadelphia. The effect of this was that plants, especially plants in bloom, could be safely and expeditiously delivered; the blooms for cutting matured rapidly and colored nicely, and everything that could reasonably be expected in flower flowered in time. The result was that the growers and retailers had a splendid Christmas.

The wholesalers would perhaps have done better had stock been a trifle scarcer; many growers who retail their product did not require so much extra stock as usual from the wholesale houses. There was more stock to be had at the last moment than usual. Lower grade carnations were very plentiful; the street men had lots of them to sell at 25 cents a dozen.

Beauties and violets were scarce and, of course, all the choice grades of cut flowers.

The best Beauty roses were very fine and brought $15 a dozen; as far as known the effort to secure more for them in this city failed. A great many were sold at from $6 to $12 a dozen; smaller flowers at from $4 to $5 a dozen.

John Burton had about 400 nice Brunners. On being asked the price, his salesman airily replied, "Oh, we are making them pay a dollar."

For several seasons past the great Bridesmaid growers hereabouts have become almost accustomed to taking down in several senses of the term. Their chosen retailer will beckon them below stairs and there show a choice vase of Maids from some medium or small grower which has astonished them. First it was "Samuelson, of Hatboro," then Savage of Mt. Airy, Jennings of Olney, Knox of Fox Chase, Mortensen of Southampton; now it is Weiss of Hatboro. Such Maids! with deep, rich color, stems thick as Beauties, and not a few of them, either. The price for these and a few specials, $25 a hundred; choice stock, $20.

The feature of the plant trade, and it was very large, was the business done in bloomers. I do not mean to say blooming stock was more popular than foliage plants, for it was not; but the increase was much greater in proportion to the business done in former years, and the prices obtained were surprising. Azaleas were very evenly flowered and sold well; also heaths.

The crowning glory of this class were the new Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Our Thorley handled a large number of these plants. It was said he lay awake at night deciding the prices to be asked. His system, from which the growers can take a lesson, was something like this: "Now, this plant cost me $2; it must bring $4. Now, here is one from the Duc de Lorraine that cost $3; it is more than twice as good as that $2 one; we will make it $8. Now, getting $8 makes one consider the possibilities of $9; I must find a plant worth $9!"

Whether he did is not known, but $8 apiece for begonias is a pretty good price, anyway.

Among the foliage plants, Boston ferns and kentias were very good and very popular. Robert Craig & Son had a $5 sized Boston that was in great demand.

Now a word for the consumer. I think he has every reason to be satisfied with his Christmas purchases from the florists. Prices were high, but not for poor stock. As good, and in many cases better, value was given for the money than ever before. Fewer orders were refused and little delay or damage occurred in delivery.

GROWER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

New Year's trade, though nothing extraordinary, was fairly good, with choice stock very scarce and prices somewhat lower. The quality of stock that is coming in now is not very good. Shipping trade all through the season was above the average.

Beauties are a scarce article in this market and the few that come in bring top prices. Brides, Maid, Meteors and Perles bring from $6 to $15 per 100. Carnations are quite plentiful and in good demand. Scotts, Daybreak and all whites sell from $2 to $4; some fancy ones bring $5. Good reds are very scarce. Violets are scarce and California sells at $1.50 to $2; small singles, 50 cents. Good doubles very scarce. Valley is in fine demand at $4 and $5 per 100. Romans and paper whites are still a glut and are selling for about nothing. Harrisii not in yet. Callas bring $10 and $15. Mistletoe is in great demand, but very little to be had. Smilax sold well the past week at $12.50.

What the different florists say about Christmas trade:

Riessen Floral Co: Business great. Worked three nights all through before Christmas. Best we ever had.

John Kunz: Sold out clean; business better than ever before, with good prices.

Fred Foster: Had a big stock of fruit and flowers and got away with it all; biggest business yet.

Ellison & Tesson: Both of our stores did a big business; in fact, all we could handle, with plenty of fine stock of our own.

Miss T. Badaracco: We did finely; great improvement over last year.

C. Young & Sons Co.: Had plenty of stock, and trade great; everything sold well, about 50 per cent better than last year.

Ostertag Bros.: Our business was better than ever. Good prices were obtained for choice stock. Green goods sold better than ever before.

George Walbart, Mrs. Ayers, and Mary Ostertag, on Grand Avenue, say that they were worked to death on Christmas day; business much better than last year.

F. C. Weber, Chas. Cannon, and Miss Newman sold out early in the day. Business better than last year, yet with better prices.

C. C. Sanders was well pleased with the holiday trade; sold pretty well out of everything.

Gus Egging, Beyer, Schray, Fillmore, Diemer, and Juengel, on the south side, did great business in cut flowers and plants.

Oscar Heile, on South Broadway, did much better than last year.

The north side florists, Fred Meinhardt, Julius Koenig's Sons, Julius Koenig, Jr., Max Rotter, and Brix, claim that this Christmas was better than they expected, especially green stuff; they sold out clean before the day was over.

Death of H. W. Chandler.

Harry W. Chandler, who a few years ago was the head of the Chandler Floral Co., died Tuesday from appendicitis. Mr. Chandler was well known among the trade. It will be remembered that he took an active part in entertaining the members of the S. A. F. when the convention was held here in 1893. The funeral took place Thursday afternoon from the family residence. Quite a few florists were seen at the house during the funeral services.

Notes.

F. W. Ude, Sr., and his son Gus are building two new houses for carnations and violets at Kirkwood. His other sons—F. W., Jr., H. G., and Charlie—are all in the business close by. Two of them—F. W. and H. G.—grow violets and carnations, and Charlie grows California violets only. All are doing well and have quite extensive places. They grow for the trade only.

The club meeting on January 11 will be a very important one. All the florists in the city and suburbs should attend. A carnation exhibition and essays will be the attraction. President Ammann requests that every member attend, without fail, and make the first meeting of the new year a banner one.

Herzog will make his own cigars. That Charlie Juengel will have a clean shave. That George Walbart will go hunting and fishing again. That Everett Guy will own a railroad. That Dr. Halstedt will be mayor of Belleville. That Henry Ostertag will attend all the club meetings.

Things That Will Happen in 1900.

That The Review will be read by all the florists in the land. J. J. B.

Christmas trade was good and everybody was satisfied. Everything sold well with the exception of pot plants, only a few pots of maidenhair fern and Roman hyacinths being sold. A few of our retailers made quite a cute move in removing a large part of their

That Ed. Buechel will not attend one banquet. That Chart Sanders will grow a beard. That John Young will quit playing billiards. That Carl Beyer will attend every bowling night. That the club will hold a chrysanthemum show. That Max potted plants to the cellars, claiming they could be sold some other day, while Christmas flowers could not. The few who tried this plan found it successful, as it enabled them to sell their stock of cut flowers clean at good prices.

Choice American Beauties were scarce and brought $5 to $9 per dozen. Brides and Bridesmaids were of better quality and went at $2 per dozen; Perles $1.50, La France $1 to $1.50 per dozen, Cecil Brunners went at $1 per three dozen, Papa Gontiers $1 to $1.50 per dozen, Meteors $2 to $2.50. Poinsettias sold nicely, wholesale price being $2 to $3 per dozen, a good many customers preferring the poinsettia at $5 per dozen retail to the higher priced American Beauty. Carnations went freely and some nice flowers were to be seen. The Hanna Hobarts at Siever's store were grand and large, some being four inches across. Prices for carnations were: Hobarts, $1.25, $2 and $2.50 per dozen; Bradts $1, Gold Nugnearly four feet around the trunk and cost $500 in the ground at the California Nurseries, Niles, Cal. The cost of lifting and transportation to San Francisco and replanting amounted to several hundred dollars more. The plant weighs ten tons and required twelve horses and nearly a score of men to move it. A marble box is to be placed around the plant, which makes one more ornament to San Francisco's best hotel. J. N.

SAN JOSE SCALE.

A bulletin issued by the New Jersey Experiment Station announces that crude petroleum applied to dormant trees destroys all scales without injury to the trees. Kerosene emulsion is even better. The work must be thoroughly done, as the oil kills only by contact. It can be applied by either a brush or as a spray. If used in summer it should be applied to the trunk and branches only and not to the foliage.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

New Year's trade was fully equal to that of last year. It would probably have been better if the weather had not been so bitterly cold. However, nothing much is expected of New Year's any more except "a good Saturday business" on the day preceding. The supply was not very large and everything went except white, and we hear of a few thousand violets being left over.

Although the supply has increased a trifle during the past week there is not too much in colored stock to meet current demand at ruling rates, though the customary lull that always follows the holidays is now with us. Beauties still remain very scarce and prices are held up to Christmas rates. On other stock prices are generally easier. The price lists of two wholesalers will be found in their advs. in this issue.

McKellar & Winterson did an enormous business in Christmas greens this year. Holly was in better demand than ever. Immense quantities of green wreathing were called for, with fewer sales of the green in bulk. The winter berry has succumbed to the bitter cold weather and the last batch received was worthless. This firm is showing a fine line of prepared palms, and are able to meet the views of all sorts of buyers in palms.

The immense business now done in hardy ferns is shown by the fact that Kennicott Bros. Co. alone sold 104,000 of them in one week. They are also handling galax in very large quantities.

E. C. Amling is now installed in his handsome new quarters and they are so swell that a person involuntarily looks for a colored attendant at the door to take his coat and hat. The office enclosure is about ready to go into place and when really settled Mr. Amling will surely have a gem of a wholesale house. Mr. Heffron presides over a long line of solid oak tables and greets each comer with that inimitable Heffronic smile.

Peter Reinberg is now sole occupant of the former Reinberg Bros. place, and Mr. Spencer seems to find none too much space even then.

Geo. Reinberg is installed in the place formerly occupied by Mr. Amling, and Robert Northam is in charge.

Various Items.

A small blaze at the store of the Weiland-Risch Floral Co. in Evanston was caused by loose papers blowing in on to live coals.

We hear that Mr. W. N. Rudd had a very early caller on New Year's day—somewhere between 2 and 4 a. m.—who failed to leave his card but took with him a few souvenirs of his visit, including Mr. Rudd's valued diamond stud, a purse and his wife's watch. Mr. R. can go home at any time of the night now and tell Mrs. R. that it is just 9 o'clock, and she won't be the wiser.

The big drop in the price of glass has decided Wietor Bros. to go ahead with their intended building operations. The new glass will include ten houses for Beauties, ten for Brides and Maids, five for Meteors and the remainder for carnations. The total additions will require from 150,000 to 175,000 square feet of glass.

August Lange does things on a large scale and admits no light weights. A baby boy arrived at his house last Sunday and it tipped the scales at 15 pounds.

Some of the north side florists indulged in bowling on New Year's eve, and admit the following scores: W. Graft, 104; Sam Pearce, 110; R. Damm, 103; G. Damm, 81; F. Weber, 93; E. Weber, 83; E. Benthey, 182.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago is near at hand.

E. H. Hunt's new catalogue is about ready for the press.

WESTCHESTER, PA.

What is said to be the largest mushroom house in America is now being constructed by Mr. S. Rassmussen, superintendent of the John Wyeth farm at Westtown. The building is 88x116 feet, having four tiers of beds, giving about 40,000 square feet of planting area. The building is constructed with a driveway through the center, so the manure can be driven into the building and by means of a traveling derrick be conveyed to any part of the building, and after the upper beds are made up the driveway itself is utilized for bedding.

The house is to be heated with two Hitchings hot water boilers and piped with 4-inch cast iron pipe. It will require 625 tons of manure to make up the beds and 7,500 pounds of spawn to plant them.

In addition to this house, they now have in bearing three others, having a bedding area of 6,800 square feet, from which they are now shipping about 50 pounds of mushrooms daily to New York and Washington.

Mr. Rassmussen says they find the growing of mushrooms more profitable than many crops they grow, especially the forcing of grapes, which has been a leading feature with them for many years. Since the foreign grape has forced the price so low the home growers find no profit in it, and they as well as many others have taken up other specialties.

Mr. Howard Thompson, of Toughkenamon, who has for some months been confined to bed with a fractured leg, caused by the falling of a bench while making repairs in one of his carnation houses, is improving, and it is hoped will soon be able to resume his duties. Mr. Thompson was a heavy loser by the severe hail storm which visited this section last fall, and this misfortune so closely following calls for much sympathy.

Carnations in this section are exceptionally fine and the yield all that can be desired. The growers are quite jubilant over the great demand and say if the prices keep up they will come out on top this season. Violets are not so encouraging; the crop is off in this section, but those who have good ones are realizing big prices for them.

OUR GENERAL INTRODUCTION. No. 9.

CALLA LILIES.

"B. E." has trouble with his callas, but it is too long a communication to publish. He says they were potted in good soil, but the tops have rotted and in some cases the bulbs also. I have never seen anyone fail in growing these plants. In a low temperature they may not flower profitably, but they are the easiest possible thing to grow. Those two applications of nitrate of soda may have been too strong.

I would advise washing off every particle of soil and washing the corm and roots in the ammoniacal mixture and then repotting. They like a rather heavy soil with a 5th or 6th of decayed animal manure, and a night temperature of 60 degrees. The calla has almost disappeared in favor of the Harrisii lily, yet this winter we are frequently asked for them. What you don't have is sure to be in greatest demand.

TORONTO, ONT.

Christmas trade was all that could be desired. Everything was cleaned up. Roses, carnations and violets were A1, but there was not enough to fill orders, and a greater quantity could have been sold at Christmas prices. M. H. G.

ASHTABULA, O.—Local gardeners have formed the Ashtabula Lettuce Growers' Association, which is to be co-operative. A general agent will handle the product.

Cypress

Greenhouse Material.

We are the pioneers in Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material. We discovered that Cypress is better than any other wood for greenhouses from top of posts up and we introduced it, and fought for it against many prejudices, and finally succeeded in bringing it into general use.

Others have attempted to follow where we lead, others are trying to reap what we sowed, but we have the experience and are recognized as experts in greenhouse construction.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.

Christmas trade was much larger than last year. Jno. G. Heintz & Son report it as almost double. Palms, dracaenas and choice blooming plants sold better than ever.

Heintz & Son had the honor of furnishing all the decorations for the opening of the "New Oliver" Hotel at South Bend, Ind., Dec. 21st, on which occasion they used ten large cases of smilax, ten cases of holly, wreathing by the hundreds of yards, carnations, Gontier roses, narcissus and hyacinths galore. The local papers praised the work highly. Messrs. Heintz considered it quite an honor to be called 200 miles away to do decorative work so near Chicago.

A FLORIST'S COAL MINE.

Mr. Joseph Kranz, Muscatine, Ia., is a singularly fortunate florist. He has on his own grounds a coal mine containing an apparently inexhaustible supply of coal; and it is so situated that one digger can get out five to seven tons of coal a day.

No wonder Mr. Kranz can afford to build modern houses and keep extending his glass surface. He now has 30,000 square feet, having recently completed some new houses.

Happy man! Not only no fuel bills to pay, but no worry about the railroad failing to deliver a car on time and no hauling of coal through snow drifts when caught short.

THE well known seedsmen, Messrs. W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, offer quite a list of cash prizes in their annual catalogue for best specimens of vegetables grown from their seeds, and they have sent us a printed list of the awards for 1899. The prizes amount to $238.00 and the winners represent nearly every state in the Union in addition to several in Canada.

MARSHALLTOWN, IA.—J. H. Wright purchased the Marshalltown Floral Co., Nov. 27, and will continue the business. Mr. F. H. Fenner, who retires, has not yet decided upon a new location and is at present visiting relatives in Chicago.

CHESTNUT HILL, PHILA.

On Nov. 14th a preliminary meeting was called at Chestnut Hill, to consider the advisability of organizing a horticultural society. The movement met with much favor and the "Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society" was organized, officers were elected to serve until January 1, 1900, at which time the officers for 1900 will be elected. A committee on by-laws was appointed and reported at the meeting held Dec. 21st, at which time the by-laws were adopted.

At the December meeting a committee on schedule was appointed which will report at the January meeting.

CLEANING GLASS.

Replying to M. N.'s inquiry as to how to clean glass on the outside when it is covered with coal smoke, I have always used hot water and ammonia. Add enough ammonia to the water to have the desired effect and apply with a sponge wired to a pole of sufficient length.

There is an oily substance combined with coal smoke and you must use something to cut the oil. Lye or sal soda would do it, but it will also take off any paint that it comes in contact with. WM. H. THOMPSON.

All the florists report a good Christmas trade and plenty of flowers. Prices were good on all stock. Violets very scarce.

Joy & Son say business was considerably better than in former years, especially in potted plants. They had a fine stock of Beauties and a large crop of fine Brides and Maids.

IF YOU have any surplus stock to offer to the trade remember that you can sell it most quickly and cheaply through an offer in the Review's Classified Plant Advs.

FRANKLIN, PA.

Philip Heilig reports an excellent Christmas business. Though his cut was very large, the increasing demand caused a scarcity of stock. There was a notably increased call for fancy grades, especially in Beauties and carnations. Colored carnations in fancy sorts were in remarkable demand and sold at $1 to $2.50 a dozen. American Beauties went at $8, $10 and $15 a dozen. California violets, $1 a bunch. No bulbous stuff was offered.

Plants didn't move as well as expected, though good azaleas, cyclamen, primulas and poinsettias were offered. It was useless to talk flowering plants, palms or ferns to young men buyers. They wanted flowers, and mainly fancy carnations, and would have them or nothing.

Mr. Heilig happened to have a patch of smilax in blossom and the people took it as a novelty. It sold readily at 25 cents a yard or 75 cents a string. Late chrysanthemums did good service and several hundred were sold at $2 to $2.50 a dozen.

Large quantities of holly and other greens were sold. They were handled by all sorts of stores, which also had paper flowers and artificial palms. But this seemed to have no effect on the sales of natural flowers. People who buy this stuff wouldn't buy fresh flowers, anyway.

NEW TOMATO FOR 1900

LIVINGSTON'S MAGNUS.

This very distinct and most promising new variety, of the color of BEAUTY and ACME is the latest addition by Livingston to the Tomato family. It is thicker, heavier, and more solid than either of the above, making it easily the most handsome sort in cultivation. The form is perfect, uniform, large and attractive. Flesh very firm. It is a robust grower, with short joints, setting its fruit clusters closer together than most varieties, and is therefore a heavy cropper. It is especially adapted for shipping, and is remarkably fine for forcing indoors and out.

Per pkt. 20c; 3 pkts. 50c; 7 pkts. $1.00

NEW LIGHT PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Peerless in its class. The coming light pink. As a commercial variety it will score its greatest triumph. As an exhibition variety it will take care of itself. Its reputation is already made. We recommend it to you as being first-class in every way. It has won highest honors wherever exhibited. In a word it is the light pink par excellence. Better than Scott in its palmiest days. There will be no attempt to over-propagate it. First come, first served. Send for complete description.

$75.00 per 1000; $10.00 per 100; $2.00 per doz.

DELIVERY FEBRUARY 15.

Also Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson, Ethel Crocker, Olympia and the

ETHEL CROCKER.

Absolutely the best pink Carnation ever offered the trade. Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself, you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from Sept. to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. Herr's Pansies at $1.00 now, and a regular assortment of Carnations in a list ready Jan. 1st. ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

ROSES.

The grand new rose Liberty, most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size; never showing any deformed, black or bull heads either in winter or summer and far surpassing Meteor in freedom of bloom. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance. Prices are as follows for A1 stock: Own rooted plants in 2½-inch pots, 12 plants, 60c; 25 plants, 50c; 50 plants, 30c; 100 plants, 25c; 1000 plants, 20c each.

Grafted plants in 2½-inch pots: 12 plants, 75c; 25 plants, 60c; 50 plants, 50c; 100 plants, 40c; 1000 plants, 35c each. Satisfactory reference or deposit from all unknown correspondents. Orders coming in after this date can be filled only in April or later, as my stock for March delivery is all sold.

E. G. Asmus, West Hoboken, N. J.
Agents: J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, Ill.; J. N. May, Summit, N. J.; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

D. & C. roses are the cheapest because they are the best. We have in stock over 1000 varieties on own roots, including nearly 200 new roses not offered elsewhere, as well as all the old favorites, at prices that make it worth your while to send us your list for quotations before buying elsewhere. All sizes from 2½-in. pots up. Send for a copy of our New Guide to Rose Culture for 1900, a handsome book of 134 pages, illustrated with hundreds of half-tones and numerous colored plates. It is really a work of art and free for the asking. The Dingee & Conard Co., Rose Growers, West Grove, Pa.

GROVE CITY, PA.

J. E. Black built a new house 20x200 this fall and it is planted with carnations and sweet peas. He also built a boiler room 16x18, with work room above, and put in a new steam boiler to heat the new building. He expects to remove his old houses out of town next summer, so that all may be heated by one fire.

Butted glass was used on the new house, as in nearly all his houses, and it gives him much more satisfaction than the lapped glass.

Carnations are his main crop and the bulk of the cut goes to the Pittsburgh market.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Mr. B. J. Shaw, of St. James avenue, lost his range of two houses (each 20x100) by fire December 15. One was filled with carnations in full bud for Christmas and the other with roses. The fire is supposed to have been started by tramps. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Always mention the Florists' Review when writing advertisers.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Since Christmas the weather has been wild and blustering, the mercury dropping to 16 below, shortening up the crop so that the customary drop in prices did not materialize.

The death of a prominent railroad official, M. B. Rogers, called for a lavish use of flowers, affording the florists an opportunity to work off the remnants of their bulbous stock.

New Year's trade was brisk, yet tame compared to Christmas. Carnations still remain firm at 50 to 75 cents per dozen, with Irenes selling at 25 cents more than the best. Roses, $1.50 to $2; Romans and narcissus, 75 cents.

Saturday night fire destroyed the plant of Charles Chadwick, on Burton avenue. Ten houses with their entire contents were ruined. Cause of the fire unknown. Loss $6,000, with no insurance.

GEO. F. CRABB.

AMERICAN BEAUTY ROSE.

Can American Beauty roses be grown profitably in the same house with Brides and Maids?

What is the best yellow tea rose?
S. S. P.

American Beauty requires a higher temperature than Brides and Maids, and I do not believe it can be grown with profit in small numbers. Unless a house can be devoted to the Beauty, would advise that it be left alone. Temperature, 58 to 60 degrees at night.

There is no yellow tea rose that can equal Perle for forcing. A. O. T.

MIDDLETOWN, CONN.—Christmas trade was good here, yet there was enough of everything to go around in cut flowers, except carnations and paper whites. Roses sold for $2 and $2.25 a dozen; Roman hyacinths, 60 cents; carnations, 40 cents; violets, $2.50 and $3. Holly was good and sold well. All of the wreaths handled by the florists here are made by the farmers, with the exception of Beebe's. He makes his own, and they are by far the best and bring the higher price. Palms were in less demand this year than former years. Small ferns sold well, also Boston ferns, but not as well as anticipated. Flowering plants were in good demand, but they were not to be had. Business kept up good all day Christmas. Mr. Stedman, the florist, died on December 16. His death was caused by a cold contracted while out gathering Christmas greens. The business conducted by him will be discontinued after January 6.

F.

FAIRBURY, ILL.—There was a decided increase in Christmas trade and flowers sold for much higher prices than in former years. The principal call was for colored carnations. Our carnation crop was nearly at its best and we had a large cut for the holidays.

JNO. MILNE & SON.

LEHIGHTON, PA.—Paul Niehoff reports Christmas business as very satisfactory.

CLARKSVILLE, TENN. — James Morton reports a busy Christmas. Both plants and cut blooms sold at good prices.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—Fire did damage to the amount of $1,000 to the greenhouses of G. J. Reuter & Son, December 23.

TORONTO, ONT.—Mr. R. Mearns reports a good year and that business is improving. He has built a new house for palms, ferns, etc.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—Sophie Butler has discontinued her greenhouse business. The greenhouses have been sold and the material will be removed.

MAROA, ILL.—Mrs. E. A. Cooper reports good trade during the past year, double that of last year. Christmas business was all right and outlook for spring trade good.

WICHITA, KAN.—Charles P. Mueller has made numerous improvements of late and now has an exceedingly well appointed place as well as one of the largest in this section.

HACKENSACK, N. J.—The Red Towers Greenhouses report a fine Christmas business, more than double that of last year. Greens and plants sold well. Big demand for cut flowers.

BALTIMORE, MD. — Charles E. Smith & Co., of 101 North Liberty St., have opened a branch store at 902 South Charles St. Albert Fiedler, formerly in their Liberty street store, is in charge.

CLEMENTON, N. J.—E. Banyard & Son have completed another house, 12 x 75, for their new double pink petunia which will be sent out the coming spring, and which is one of the finest in habit and bloom.

QUINCY, ILL.—We never had a better demand for flowers than this year. C. F. W. Gentemann cut a fine lot of Maids that retailed at $2.00 a dozen, also Brides and Perles. Hyacinths and valley sold at 75 cents a dozen. Carnations were never better, Day-break, Hill and Triumph retailing at 75 cents a dozen. No violets at present.

ATLANTIC, IA.—C. G. Anderson & Co. report a fine Christmas trade, fully 25 per cent ahead of last year. During the past summer this firm rebuilt their entire establishment and built new office building, potting shed, boiler house, etc., and installed a new boiler. They now have a fine range of about 15,000 feet of glass. They do both a wholesale and retail business.

EMPLOYEES.

"Encourage your employees to study and thoroughly master the details of their work. It will make them more valuable employees as well as better men." This has been the advice of all thinking employers.

Now is a good time to act upon this advice. Present your employee with a copy of the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is not only a handsome volume that makes an attractive gift, but it contains the sort of matter that will make your employees better workmen. You will benefit yourself as well as showing your employee that you regard him as something more than a mere machine.

Flowering Shrubs.

There is nothing more beautiful at this time of the year than what are generally called "Spring blossoms," and considering how easily they are forced the wonder is that we don't see and use more of them. Anything out of season is attractive, and these flowers are very much appreciated in select circles.

There's nothing specially new in the material but there promises to be in decorations exclusively of them. Just suppose that instead of your avenue of palms or arbor of greens for a wedding decoration you had an avenue of peach trees all a mass of bloom, or a canopy of apple blossoms. Why of course you can have such things if you want to and prepare for it. Many flowering shrubs, such as Cydonia japonica, Forsythia viridissima, several varieties of lilac, double flowering cherry and almond, weigelas, deutzias, mock orange, spireas such as S. Van Houttei and S. prunifolia, etc., are yearly forced for the New York market and just now some of it, especially Japan quince and forsythia, makes a pretty and interesting window display.

Most of this kind of stock is easily forced. You can usually tell flowering wood by size of the bud. Cut the branches in good lengths, tie them compactly together at the bottom, put them in a deep jar or tub of water and put them in your greenhouse. They will soon come in flower, and always try a variety; they will pay you some way. People want such stock, it is a change from what is mauled about in the market. As to the uses such blossoms can be put to they are too numerous to mention. You can use them in all manner of decorations. Some of the prettiest tables we have even done or seen were decorated with high colored quince, but you must have a light blue, a milk white, pink or green vase for it, and very little or no green and that of a very graceful kind such as Asparagus tenuissimus. You must not arrange this kind of material stiffly or bunchy if you want good results; a studied—careless—falling-over appearance is best, and care should be taken to have it in water.

Suppose you are fixing up for a reception, ball, wedding or any festive occasion, nothing will give more satisfaction than a mass of such blossoms. but be careful, have the colors separate and a distance from each other and have them high up where dresses will not become entangled. It is an easy matter to fix up a natural looking arch of them and let the people walk under them, as almost everybody loves to think of spring and its myriads of smiling flowers.

You can get up a mighty good effect in flowering apple trees by getting a tree from the nursery, plant it in a green jardiniere, get a few Leucothoe branches, green the top as if they were growing, then tie on your forced Japan quince. You can make up a pretty tree of almost anything in this way and the tendency in decorative ideas will run that way, only we must be careful to copy nature as much as possible. If we wish to manufacture rose trees for instance we should get standard roses and use rose foliage;

there's nothing more beautiful than a well made up standard rose tree of Meteors, Morgans or some such rose. These things have often been attempted and have been mostly failures because we try to convince people that roses grow on bay trees, or that smilax is the right foliage, or some such weakness, shutting our eyes to the fact that if florists want to be artistic they must either imitate nature or improve her models.

There is more or less nonsense in the oft repeated assertions that we cannot improve what Nature teaches, for we have to do it every day in some elements, but all the same she's a good teacher and you won't go far wrong if you study her closely. A great deal of trouble arises in the case of flower and foreign foliage; truly there are many kinds of foliage we cannot use, but if we cannot, we ought to be more careful as to substitutes; bad or inappropriate foliage will cheapen, nay, entirely destroy the effect of the choicest flower, and it's generally safer to use very little or none at all where it is unavoidable.

But let us return to flowering shrubs just for a moment. We were just thinking that if a "Southern Lassie" were to come north to marry just now, it would be a pleasing and appropriate feature to have her wear or carry magnolia blooms. The tables could be decorated handsomely with them and altogether they could be made a beautiful adjunct to the spreading palms they usually demand to make them think of the "Sunny South." Imported Magnolias are easy to force; try a few for Easter anyhow.

Prepare for Easter.

And just now that we mention Easter let us tell you that it is not too

Entrance to Hodgson's.

Flowering Shrubs.

There is nothing more beautiful at this time of the year than what are generally called "Spring blossoms," and considering how easily they are forced the wonder is that we don't see and use more of them. Anything out of season is attractive, and these flowers are very much appreciated in select circles.

There's nothing specially new in the material but there promises to be in decorations exclusively of them. Just suppose that instead of your avenue of palms or arbor of greens for a wedding decoration you had an avenue of peach trees all a mass of bloom, or a canopy of apple blossoms. Why of course you can have such things if you want to and prepare for it. Many flowering shrubs, such as Cydonia japonica, Forsythia viridissima, several varieties of lilac, double flowering cherry and almond, weigelias, deutzias, mock orange, spireas such as S. Van Houttei and S. prunifolia, etc., are yearly forced for the New York market and just now some of it, especially Japan quince and forsythia, makes a pretty and interesting window display.

Most of this kind of stock is easily forced. You can usually tell flowering wood by size of the bud. Cut the branches in good lengths, tie them compactly together at the bottom, put them in a deep jar or tub of water and put them in your greenhouse. They will soon come in flower, and always try a variety; they will pay you some way. People want such stock, it is a change from what is mauled about in the market. As to the uses such blossoms can be put to they are too numerous to mention. You can use them in all manner of decorations. Some of the prettiest tables we have even done or seen were decorated with high colored quince, but you must have a light blue, a milk white, pink or green vase for it, and very little or no green and that of a very graceful kind such as Asparagus tenuissimus. You must not arrange this kind of material stiffly or bunchy if you want good results; a studied—careless—falling-over appearance is best, and care should be taken to have it in water.

Suppose you are fixing up for a reception, ball, wedding or any festive occasion, nothing will give more satisfaction than a mass of such blossoms, but be careful, have the colors separate and a distance from each other and have them high up where dresses will not become entangled. It is an easy matter to fix up a natural looking arch of them and let the people walk under them, as almost everybody loves to think of spring and its myriads of smiling flowers.

You can get up a mighty good effect in flowering apple trees by getting a tree from the nursery, plant it in a green jardiniere, get a few Leucothoe branches, green the top as if they were growing, then tie on your forced Japan quince. You can make up a pretty tree of almost anything in this way and the tendency in decorative ideas will run that way, only we must be careful to copy nature as much as possible. If we wish to manufacture rose trees for instance we should get standard roses and use rose foliage;

there's nothing more beautiful than a well made up standard rose tree of Meteors, Morgans or some such rose. These things have often been attempted and have been mostly failures because we try to convince people that roses grow on bay trees, or that smilax is the right foliage, or some such weakness, shutting our eyes to the fact that if florists want to be artistic they must either imitate nature or improve her models.

There is more or less nonsense in the oft repeated assertions that we cannot improve what Nature teaches, for we have to do it every day in some elements, but all the same she's a good teacher and you won't go far wrong if you study her closely. A great deal of trouble arises in the case of flower and foreign foliage; truly there are many kinds of foliage we cannot use, but if we cannot, we ought to be more careful as to substitutes; bad or inappropriate foliage will cheapen, nay, entirely destroy the effect of the choicest flower, and it's generally safer to use very little or none at all where it is unavoidable.

But let us return to flowering shrubs just for a moment. We were just thinking that if a "Southern Lassie" were to come north to marry just now, it would be a pleasing and appropriate feature to have her wear or carry magnolia blooms. The tables could be decorated handsomely with them and altogether they could be made a beautiful adjunct to the spreading palms they usually demand to make them think of the "Sunny South." Imported Magnolias are easy to force; try a few for Easter anyhow.

Prepare for Easter.

And just now that we mention Easter let us tell you that it is not too early to trim or train many of the plants intended for that event. Crimson Ramblers will stand more attention than has been given them; there is a vast number of ways you can train them; but let us have some in basket shape. Whatever you do don't put Easter plants in too big pots; they not only make your plants look poorer and smaller but they kill the chance of sale; don't economize on plant pots, it's poor policy.

Get some wire baskets, plant Asparagus Sprengeri on the bottom and sides and fill the top with Begonia Glory of Lorraine; they'll sell at Easter and the better they are the bigger the price.

Various Notes.

Chorizema ilicifolium is in bloom now and a beautiful thing it is. What a grand thing to go with Ma Capucine riages or cars, you must put them close to but not touching the glass and have some fairly high up. Some of the New York stores suspend a flat basket by ribbons and fill it with bunches of flowers; sometimes they are pretty; other times the combinations of ribbon and flower color are enough to make a negro turn white.

Some day the north and the east will be in closer touch with the west and south, and lots of the fine material growing out there will be used in decorative work. The California pepper referred to in a recent issue was used this Christmas in New York. It is very good for many kinds of basket work and will no doubt become popular, but we hope to see the day when olives, oranges, magnolias, etc., will be shipped on the branch and used extensively so.

We notice that among the promifour to six in a group at irregular lengths; get a 30-inch even width wreath and fill it full and round with green moss; if we can we get a lot of 2½-inch Adiantum cuneatum, cut the roots off one inch from the top, and work these in thickly so that they hide frame and moss and form a perfect wreath of fern; if we cannot do this then we solidly green the wreath back and front with Asparagus Sprengeri, then cover the front side with short-stemmed fern; having thus thoroughly mossed and greened the wreath, we start at one side with our flowers and arrange them so they will form a full half circle, that is to say, when the wreath is flat on the counter the flowers will touch it on both sides. We have some stemmed short so as to break regularity and yet the whole wreath must be uniform. We save a group of our longest stems for where we finish and with these we make a branched cluster, perhaps with ivy tips, to take the place of ribbon.

Many will say: "Oh, pshaw, that's nothing new; we can do that easily." Well, somehow we try to see all the grand wreaths at big funerals, but we tell you that you don't often care to own up to your work at these affairs; most of them are what we know as "pancakes," or they are thrown together with sphagnum moss protruding. It requires fine ability to arrange a wreath properly, and even with the smallest flowers, such as violets, it is decidedly wrong to have them all even heights and jabbed together.

The days of tinfoil are fast disappearing, and so they ought; for if there is any one thing outside noise to mar the effect or solemnity of a funeral it is the grotesque, nerve-racking glitter of tinfoil. To be sure, we need something to hide grey moss, but the ceremony of having a boy carefully measure and plaster this art destroying stuff on the backs of every design seems to be a sacred law. Well, to be up with the twentieth century you must change, do better work and use more of nature's products.

Orchids, with the exception of cypripediums and a few others which are seldom wanted, are scarce at present. A limited quantity of Cattleya Trianae are coming in and they are very grand; they retail at from 75 cents to $1.00. C. Percivaliana didn't seem to go so well this season; it wasn't because they're small, for the color is good; it's their peculiar odor. It's unfortunate the odd shape of the cypripedium flower will not permit it to be worn; the colors are very beautiful and will harmonize with any dress; try C. Harrisianum with valley or Meteors; even by itself the color is grand! We are sure that if a few more colors were introduced a vast quantity more of C. insigne could be sold.

rose! Painters can get their colors from paints but we have to be satisfied with what's on the market, more's the pity.

There are several varieties of narcissus and other bulbous stock coming in. The yellow trumpets always seem to herald spring and they are welcome in the stores, but so far they are poor in quality. It is well to have a good bunch of spring flowers such as freesias in a neat vase on the counter; many customers take a fancy to and purchase flowers if they are put where they can smell them. In several stores in New York, and for that matter in every city, whenever a good customer is seen nearing the store, some of the finest stock is hurriedly put out on the counter in order to attract a sale, and it is often a very successful ruse.

If you want your flowers in the window to show prominently at a distance, especially to people in car-rent private gardeners a great many flowers such as antirrhinums, Canterbury bells, wallflowers, etc., are being grown under glass for cut flowers. Many beautiful snapdragons are in bloom now; most of the seed was sown in August. Of course you might not get much on the market for this kind of stock, but all the same the wealthy would not have it grown if they did not want it, and nowadays they seem to take a pride in walking into your store and telling you of this and that they have growing in the country.

There are very few things prettier than a well made wreath of pansies, but you must either have them one color or group them to harmonize. Beaconsfield is far the best kind we can get here for funeral work, and it requires from 750 to 1,000 flowers to make a wreath properly. We do it this way: First put every flower on a No. 36 wire; then put them on sticks, store is imposingly beautiful; the trees outside are trimmed box with berried branches of Ilex verticillata stuck in between the branches; others are specimen hollies imported from Europe for Christmas. If you come to New York visit this store; it is at Fifty-sixth street and Fifth avenue.

Stumpp's is two blocks above. Scal-len's is at Thirty-first street, on Broadway; it is always attractive. Some of the finest flowers in New York are to be seen in these windows; the present picture shows trimmed baskets of flowering plants for Christmas trade.

Moulton's, formerly the Bridgeman Co., is a very pretty store near Thirty-fourth street, on Broadway. This shows but a section of the interior, with a group of made up baskets ready for delivery. Ice box is in the rear. Sears is near Forty-second street, on Sixth avenue. There is a greenhouse in the rear of this store; the ice box is shown on the left and a bench of flowering plants ready for Santa Claus is seen on the right.

The other is a side view of Fleischman's store at Twenty-fifth street, on Broadway. This is certainly one of the finest florists' stores of the world and is one of the sights on Broadway. Delivery wagons are shown and alongside the windows are stacks of tall silver birch sticks upon which are hung wreaths and mistletoe.

There are very many more stores in this city which we intend illustrating son's bloom. Of course those who do a wholesale business in rooted cuttings and plants will have started some three or four weeks earlier, but for those who do a moderate sized business in this, or grow only for their own planting, it is plenty early.

ROSE NOTES.

It is now time to prepare and propagate your rose stock for the next sea-

Be particular that the bench that is to be used for this purpose is thoroughly cleaned and give it a good washing of lime; don't use air slacked lime, but get it good and fresh and put it on as soon as it is well slacked. A bench the bottom of which is made will be no trouble in rooting any of the varieties now used for forcing.

Remember that in propagating this young stock you are laying the foundation of your next season's crop, and you cannot be too careful of the stock you select from. Never put in the sand any wood that is in any degree infested with any insect or any disease, and use only good, vigorous wood.

It matters little as to the size of cuttings, if they are carefully made. I prefer for Maids, Brides, Perles, Kaiserins, Meteors, etc., a cutting with three eyes long (if the joints are not too long), with the cut as smooth as a sharp knife, and a drawing motion of the same can make it, with two leaves at the other two eyes, only cutting off the end leaflet. Insert these in the sand to very near the lower leaf, the sand having been previously packed as hard as possible, and after the cuttings have been inserted press the sand as hard as possible about them and water thoroughly.

American Beauties should be made with two eyes, cutting near the lower one from which the leaves have been removed. The upper leaves should be cut one-third. In inserting these a line should be cut in the sand, holding the knife in such a position that the cut will be at an angle of 45 degrees. In this line insert the cuttings with the leaves standing straight up. This method of inserting Beauty cuttings has been in vogue several years on some of the best places in the east and has proved eminently successful with me.

Always give cuttings a thorough watering as soon as inserted, then syringe lightly each bright day, watching the sand carefully, and give a thorough watering when it is again needed, which will depend upon the weather and other conditions.

The pipes under the propagating bench should be so arranged as to afford a temperature of 68 to 70 degrees in the sand and an overhead temperature of 55 degrees.

Shading must be carefully looked after and this can be readily done by an inexpensive arrangement of cheese cloth near the glass which can be raised or lowered to suit weather conditions. Absolute cleanliness must be observed about the cutting bench or you will surely be troubled with fungus. All leaves that may drop after the cuttings have been in the sand awhile must be picked off the sand, but there will be few or none such if you are cautious in selecting only healthy wood and give proper care. A. O. T.

always raised from seed and now is the time to commence. Don't bother with C. candidissima; it is too unreliable.

It is also an excellent time to sow carnations, either your own saving or any other ne plus ultra collections "saved only from the finest varieties."

A good many now depend on raising verbenas from seed because these are free from disease and grow freely. The finest colors can now be depended on from seedlings. Your patrons like to see them in flower so by end of this month sow the seed.

For the great bulk of the so called hardy annuals, stocks, asters, etc., it is two months too early to begin.

Carnations.

It is a most excellent time now to put in your main lot of carnation cuttings. The conditions are just right; cool houses with not enough sun to need much shading, if any, and the cuttings have not been forced to an unnatural growth by artificial heat. Every florist ought to know the best kind of cuttings; neither the stout, stubby growth of the bottom nor the weak offshoot near the flower should be propagated for yourself. Neither do all varieties give you the same quantity or quality of cuttings, but with all varieties you can get some cuttings; near the base of the flowering stem you will get the ideal cuttings, and by the time the flower is developed the side growth will be stout and strong. Those who propagate hundreds of thousands of plants from a few thousand cannot of course be so particular, and sometimes you see all parts of the plants are distributed, not forgetting sections of the stems and the rust.

Some professor very recently made the statement that dipping the cuttings in any copper solution, either when they went in the sand or when they come out, was not advisable. I have forgotten the exact words but he frowned on the practice. With due respect for his research I shall continue to do it and believe it has helped us wonderfully in ridding our stock of the rust; and I am positive it does not do the young cuttings or plants the slightest harm. A dip for a moment in the ammoniacal solution costs neither time nor money and is a thorough bath, which spraying is not.

Twenty years ago carnations were invariably put in the ordinary cutting bed where the sand was about 65 to 70 degrees and the air 50 to 55 degrees and we grew fine plants of carnations in those days; but bottom heat is no longer favored. It is not a necessity; carnations will root without it, but if I grew carnation cuttings for sale my idea of a propagating bed would be where the sand was 60 degrees and the atmosphere was 50 degrees; that little bottom heat will save ten days in the time of rooting, and it would be absurd to say that the plant was enervated with that start.

Geraniums.

Our largest job just at present is

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Cannas.

The popularity of the canna is by no means on the wane or likely to be. You should look over your dormant roots and see that they are keeping alright, plump and green but not growing. Under a rose or carnation bench is the place if you have no special root house, but if there is much drip from the bench it will rot the tubers and if they are on damp ground they will start to grow, so both of these conditions should be avoided.

If you wish to sow seed of cannas do so at once. You can buy seed of most of the fine varieties and they come largely true from seed. Soak the seed in hot water for 24 hours and then slice off a small piece of the hard covering of the seed and sow in 2 inches of sand in a strong bottom heat. We usually place an inch of soil in the bottom of the flat and then one inch of sand and put the seeds into the sand half or three-quarters of an inch and keep moist, placing the flats on some hot water pipes. Your customers won't have cannas unless they are good, strong plants and it takes all their time from now till end of May to produce a plant from the seed. There is usually a scarcity of good yellow, so sow plenty of the Florence Vaughan type.

Lobelias.

Lobelias are best raised from cuttings from plants lifted in the fall, but where that has not been thought of and you depend on seed you should sow as early as possible. It takes a long time to make plants large enough for our baskets and vases. As a bedding plant the lobelia is no good to us; its flowers disappear in July and August and leave cast iron green where the beautiful blue is looked for.

Smilax.

We have done this year what we ought not to have done, and left undone those things which we ought to have done, and the offense is more grievous because we know better and preach to the contrary. We left in a bed of smilax last year instead of re-planting in July. It looked tempting to leave it in but it's a big mistake and we get no such strings as from a young bed. The profit of the bed depends on the quality and number of strings you cut in a season, and early in July a strong plant from a 3-inch pot should be planted, and to obtain that strong rooted plant which makes a salable string from the first growth, seed should be sown very soon.

Seeds.

A few other seeds that should be sown now are gloxinia, if you wish to raise your own bulbs; pansies, if you don't have enough in the frames. Pansies sown now and grown along light and cool make excellent bedding material.

You never can be wrong in sowing plenty of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. Plumosus has made the finest of plants for the fern dishes, outlasting any of the ferns, and there is a great demand for small plants in 3 and 4-inch pots because the public is aware of its being such a grand house plant, withstanding the gas, heat and gossip of the worst regulated families.

Centaurea gymnocarpa is little used as a bedding plant now but it has its uses and is free and hardy. They are shifting geraniums from 2 to 3-inch pots, in which they will remain till first of April. You can grow geraniums cheaper but we get a good price for them and our people expect a fine plant in a 4-inch pot with one or two blooms by bedding time, end of May. We don't pinch the geraniums now because by the middle of February most all of them will give us their top three inches for a cutting. We have seen lots of geraniums grown in other cities and our people would not accept them at any price, but doubtless there are many good ones grown.

To produce a short, stout growth and freedom of flower a geranium wants a rather heavy soil, only moderately manured and firmly potted. The latter is important. A light house, plenty of ventilation and a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees according to how fast you want them to grow.

The bronze, tricolor and silver leaf sections, which are grown exclusively for their foliage, want more manure, a lighter soil and 5 to 10 degrees more heat.

The ivy leaf section is now a very important one with us, not only for use in vases and baskets but thousands selling singly. If you have any hanging shelves there is no plant more suited to them than the ivy geranium. The variety that was sent out a few temperature must I keep my Easter lilies? Some are just starting, some are 6 inches and some 12 inches above the 5 and 6-inch pots. All are left in a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees."

Presumably this gentleman's Easter lilies are meant for Easter and what he wants to know is how to bring them in all in good shape for that important time. There is a wide difference between 40 and 50 degrees; perhaps he means that they are all in one house where the temperature varies between 40 and 50 degrees.

If you have several houses where you can keep the temperature from 45 to 65 or 70 degrees, you might be able to bring in most of the lilies at the desired time; without these facilities you can only favor those that you think are best adapted for flowering at Easter. Those only just starting should not have more than a night temperature of 50 degrees, and it would be hard work getting them in flower by Easter, however much of an oven you had, while those a foot high should come along very well in about 50 degrees. The last four or five weeks it would be easier to keep a higher temperature, which will suit them better.

As has been often remarked in these columns, and as was remarked to the writer by that shrewd, observant and clever man, Mr. W. K. Harflowers. But I did not do that by writing or talking; I did it by hard work, and many of the plants were moved 20 times in the last two months.

MY FIRST YEAR'S EXPERIENCE IN HYBRIDIZING CARNATIONS.

By JACOB SCHULZ.

[Read before the Kentucky Society of Florists, at Louisville.]

You must not expect me to tell you in this paper anything new in the art of hybridizing this grand flower, the carnation. The trade papers have so often published articles on this subject that anything I say will only be repeating an old story. If you intend hybridizing carnations, you must not expect to make a fortune from your seedlings, for there are only a few who are fortunate enough to get a Lawson among their seedlings. There will be hardly any financial returns, but the pleasure derived in watching "The Babies," as you will soon call the seedlings, as they develop and bloom, will amply repay you for your trouble.

The first thing necessary in hybridizing carnations is the selection of parents, and here you must use your best judgment. I always try to select two parents that combine freedom of bloom, good stem and growth, years ago, "Pere Crozy," is a jewel. It is a distinct cross between the ivy leaf and the zonal, and partakes of both types. It is covered with its bright red flowers just when you need them, and last spring sold at sight.

Fleischmann's store and delivery wagons.

I cannot once more speak too highly of the beautiful semi-double pink zonal "Frances Perkins." It has completely sent the old Emile de Gerardin, Mme. Thibaut and the rest of the pinks to Sheol, which in Greek was a dump pile but in translation got tangled up with a place where they fry and frizzle for everlasting, a sort of natural gas furnace.

WM. SCOTT.

EASTER LILIES.

A subscriber asks for information about his lilies and says: "At what ris, of Philadelphia, as we walked up Cocanut street, or some other nutty street of that beautiful city, "the Easter lily is not so profitable a plant as it appears, for there is a great amount of labor entailed if you are going to get a large percentage in flower just when you want them."

And any long distance instruction is useless. It is easy to grow a good lily; most any one can do that, but to get 95 per cent in the right condition about the Thursday before Easter requires gardening genius highly developed and actively exercised.

Without boasting, with the closest personal attention, some eight or nine years ago I succeeded in bringing in about 1,200, and there were not 20 plants that had not one or more open good color, and large size. I select the flower which is to be the seed bearer, or mother, first, and I always see that the flower is as near a perfect specimen of the variety I select as possible. I cut away the petals from around the pistils, leaving them exposed until they are ready to receive the pollen, which will take several days. You can tell when the pistils are ready to receive the pollen by their turning downward and outward. When this happens you must select the pollen parent, or father. If I have selected a mother that has some defect, I try to get a pollen parent that is without this defect, or if the color is not as good as I think it should be, I select a pollen parent that has the color I desire. Even with this careful selection you must not expect to get what you want, for often the opposite color or growth is the result.

The best time to put the pollen on is early in the day. I hybridize altogether by hand; going to the pollen plant, I carefully cut out the stamens containing the pollen and carry it to the variety I have selected to cross, and there I carefully brush the pollen against the pistils. As soon as I select the mother plant, I put a tag to the flower, and on this the name of the seed parent, and as soon as I fertilize the pistils I put the name of the pollen parent under the other name, and the date they were crossed. Tagging must be done carefully if we want to know the parents of our seedlings.

In a few days after fertilizing the pistils you will notice the seed pod beginning to form, and in seven or eight weeks this will have ripened, and then you take it off and sow it at once, always being careful to get the right label on the pot. In three or four weeks the seedlings will appear, and then they must be handled very carefully, for they damp off very easily and the snails are very fond of the young plants. When they are large enough I transplant into flats or thumb pots, and then handle them as I would young carnations, only that after I plant them in the field I do not cut them back, for it is desirable to have them bloom in the field, as this will save the trouble of housing a few hundred absolutely worthless varieties. I like to cross my varieties as early as possible, so that I can have the young seedlings ready early in the spring to plant out doors.

As soon as the plants begin to form buds the seedling grower will become anxious, and he can hardly keep himself from breaking open the calyx of some of the most promising appearing buds, so as to see what color they are. Many times have I been disappointed, for the most promising buds have the ugliest colors.

Those seedlings that I think worthy of another trial I label by numbers, putting this number in a book kept for that purpose and beside the number I put the parent variety's name and a brief description of its color and any other distinguishing feature. From the labeled varieties I take cuttings, always being very careful about the labels. These cuttings I handle the same as those of old varieties of carnations.

I believe all seedlings should be tried three years before the grower makes any claim of superiority over existing varieties, and as I have only tried my seedlings for one year, I cannot brag on any of my varieties. As every father thinks his children the best, it is the same with seedling growers, and I have two varieties, one a white and one a red, which, if they prove to be good growers and free bloomers and always have the same flowers as the first was, I believe that I, too, will have a "world beater."

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The program and schedule of premiums for the 9th annual meeting of the above society has been issued. The meeting and exhibition is to be held in Morgan Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 15th and 16th next.

An attractive program for the meeting has been arranged, and the exhibition will be on a larger scale than ever before. In addition to the awards for new varieties, and these include many valuable specials, there is a generous list of cash prizes for well grown blooms of standard sorts. In Class A first prizes of $12.00 and second prizes of $6.00 each are offered for vases of 100 blooms in white, light pink, dark pink, scarlet, crimson, yellow variegated, white variegated, and any other color. In Class B prizes of $6.00 and $3.00 are offered for vases of 50 blooms in similar divisions of color. In class C introductions of 1899 are called for and 25 blooms each are named with prizes of $3.00 and $1.50.

The Lawson gold medal, valued at $60.00, will be awarded for the best 100 blooms, any variety and any color.

Copies of the program and schedule may be had by addressing Albert M. Herr, Sec'y, Lancaster, Pa.

Registration.

Mr. James Allen, gardener to A. C. Lambert, Paterson, N. J., registers—"Belle Vista," a cross between Scott and Daybreak, in color, a light pink, petals large and broad, a clean, strong grower; habit and growth resembles Scott, and it is a very free bloomer.

J. E. Sibley, registered by Philip Hellig, should be J. C. Sibley.

THE FAKIR AND OTHERS.

My dear friend Charley's Uncle: I read your kind remarks in the Florists' Review and meant to have long ago sent in some comments on them. I note your general dislike for the (Greek) fakir. One would know that you have never done business in a city like Chicago, where there are a million or more flowers to be sold each day. As I have said in my notes, you could not run a commission business here without the fakirs.

As a matter of fact there should be a time set for that class of trade known as the street men, but the Greek with the corner stand often handles better flowers than a great many retail florists and pays more for them. As a commission man, I for one must say that we only represent the stock, and it cuts no ice with us who buys it so long as he pays the price, and I will repeat that I have often seen stock sold to fakirs at 10 to 20 per cent more than a florist was willing to pay for the same grade, and the florist could use but a hundred or two, while there was more than that many thousands to be disposed of.

Have you ever seen a buyer in the retail trade that was not always complaining about the price? If so, you have seen more than I, and I have been in the commission business a few days at that.

You were right in regard to the grading of stock and the proof of it is that you see those that do grade have big places and live up-to-date, whereas those that don't grade have a struggle to get along.

In regard to our line not being in the commercial world, I will again have to differ with you. The fakir again. He sells cheap flowers, nevertheless he makes flower lovers. The cheap florist sells the medium class, and he makes lovers of flowers. The aristocratic florist (as you call him) sells the swell trade, and he makes flower buyers. Now with that you have made the flower a thing of value to the people, and anything of value is commercial.

CHARLEY'S AUNT.

CHRYSANTHEMUM TIMOTHY EATON.

The wonderful white chrysanthemum illustrated herewith is called "Timothy Eaton." A dozen flowers were sent to me about December the first. The same flowers had been at two exhibitions and had been packed and unpacked several times and had been cut fourteen days. With the exception of a slight discoloring of the bottom petals they were perfect and were the largest, finest and heaviest chrysanthemum flowers I have ever seen. After arrival in our city they were in good order for another week. So much for their keeping qualities, which I should think are hardly equaled in any variety.

The foliage is fine, something like Jerome Jones, and close up to the flower. The stem is the stoutest I have ever seen, and as the photograph will show as stiff as the proverbial poker. In fact in leaf, stem, substance and keeping qualities I am not aware of its equal.

The flowers were of uniform size, but the average of several measured was 21 inches over from stem to stem and 23 inches in circumference; but these measurements give you little idea of its immense size and substance; by the side of fairly good Niveus and Jones they made the latter look like carnations.

The picture will show better than I can describe the style of flower. It is full, but not crowded; no vestige of an eye but a round, deep, beautifully symmetrical flower, and pure white.

Timothy Eaton took the first prize at Toronto for best six white, a special as the best blooms in the show, a silver cup for merit and a first class certificate, and it would, I feel sure, have done all this at any show on the continent.

In justice to Mr. Miller, Sr., I must repeat what he told me about their culture, which was that these wonderful flowers were cut from plants that were put on the bench the second week in July in five inches of garden soil, without a particle of animal or artificial manure.

They were grown and exhibited by E. Miller & Sons, Bracondale, Toronto, Ont., who own the stock and who have, I venture to say, the greatest white chrysanthemum ever raised.

WM. SCOTT.

AMONG CHICAGO GROWERS.

Bassett & Washburn.

The great range of glass at Hinsdale is always interesting and among the most attractive features are the two immense carnation houses, one 54x600 and the other 30x600. They are literally carnation fields under glass, and a view down that 600 feet of bloom and foliage is one to be remembered.

Crane and America show up prominently among the reds and both are very satisfactory. Mr. Bassett likes the color of Crane a little the best and things he gets a few more flowers than from America, but the difference is slight. Both are more profitable than Jubilee and that variety will be dropped from the list after this year. Mr. Washburn thinks that America takes in the market a trifle better than Crane. But the differences are all debatable and there is no question but what both are very desirable kinds.

In color Crane is almost exactly the same shade as Jubilee. America is a trifle lighter.

White Cloud and Flora Hill are both much in evidence. White Cloud has rather a better flower and stem than Hill, but it is more of a cropper and produces a few less flowers during a season. Last year they had a good deal of trouble with Hill, losing fully 10 per cent. of the plants from stem rot after they were housed, not to mention losses in the field, but this year the variety is almost entirely free from disease. Both sorts are highly regarded here.

Mrs. Bradt is still the leader in fancy sorts and is a very steady producer, though Mr. Bassett holds that the flowers must bring 25 per cent. more than others in order to be profitable.

Red Bradt produces as freely as the type, with same size, stem and habit. It is undoubtedly the largest red carnation we have, and must bring the same price as Bradt to be profitable. In the bench devoted to this sort there were very few reversions to the type, and even if more numerous there would be no waste, as the type is of equal value.

They still value Mary Wood highly as a white. It is not quite so profitable as White Cloud and Flora Hill, but possesses good qualities that make it very desirable. They have a white seedling the flowers of which are enormous in size. The form is not the very best when closely examined, but the general effect is good and the size is such as to at once attract attention, and it produces well and steadily.

Gold Nugget is their best yellow, but Mr. Bassett says it should bring double the price of others in order to be profitable. Pingree has been dropped. Mr. Bassett says the flowers should bring 25 cents each to make the variety a paying one.

Leslie Paul, the pink California variety, has made a favorable impression here and it is thought will be useful. It does not bloom freely early in the season, but comes later and is a magnificent flower.

Painted Lady has been an enormous producer here, but in midwinter the blooms burst badly. From Jan. 1 till along in April hardly one perfect flower is secured, though some are as large as paeonies. Nevertheless the variety has paid well.

Frances Joost produces very freely here, but not so freely as White Cloud or Hill. It is considered a good profitable pink sort, though there has been some complaint that the flowers slumber early.

They like the color of Cerise Queen, but have not been successful in getting a good stem.

Triumph has done splendidly this season. When producing during fall and December it was the freest of any they had. It is off crop now, but they expect a big cut again in early spring. It is of no value in summer.

Armazindy is no good with them. It doesn't produce and buyers don't seem to want the flowers when they get them.

Psyche produces lots of flowers, but they are small and nobody wants them. By the way, we recall a grower who labeled this variety "Physic" and said, "I am going to 'throw Physic to the dogs.'"

Scott, Daybreak and McBurney will also be dropped from the list here.

Mr. Bassett believes in early propagation of carnations and starts propagating the latter part of November, keeping it up steadily thereafter. When rooted the cuttings are planted out about three inches apart in benches of soil where they grow on into very fair sized plants by planting out time. More than half of these will have been pinched back once while in the bench.

He plants out in the field as early as possible and likes to bench inside again early in July if possible and not later than August. The idea is to get the full value of two months' good spring growing weather outside and to have inside (where they will be under better control) during the mid-summer months. The field culture in spring gives a vigor and substance that cannot be had under glass at the same period, and the glass is valuable for other purposes, too. By planting in as early as July he believes he gets the advantages of both the outdoor and indoor systems and has the plants even better established by fall.

In passing through the houses we noted an immense number of carnation cuttings in extra fine condition, and benches of cuttings already in soil were the picture of health and vigor. "You must have the best possible foundation to build on" says Mr. Bassett, and we heartily agree with him.

He does not consider the carnation any more profitable than the rose and the bulk of the glass is still devoted to the Queen of Flowers. House after house of Beauties, Brides, Maids, Meteors, etc., are a feast for appreciative eyes.

Harrisii and longiflorum lilies were not so good as usual. One big batch they bought for Harrisii was largely mixed with longiflorum and results were very uneven, and there was more disease than they have had heretofore. A later batch of Harrisii that was all true to name is much better.

A house of Asparagus plumosus was looking finely and has paid well. A bench of Sprengeri is built in divisions with openings for the sprays to droop in, but the boxes are lengthwise of the bench instead of across. There are three boxes each 15 inches wide and with a space of 9 inches between on a 6-foot bench.

als in the city were of material assistance to the market in this respect of late. Prices have been somewhat easier, but there are indications of a slight stiffening. The supply will no doubt shorten still further if the dark, rainy weather of Tuesday continues. On that day local trade was fair until the rain came, but after that the local trade seemed to have crawled into a hole and pulled the hole in after itself.

Archie Spencer, manager for Peter Reinberg, is showing some extra grade stock with pardonable pride. The Meteors are of the very highest grade and the Brides and Maids would be hard to match. His Beauties are also showing marked improvement, though the cut is still short.

E. C. Amling is gradually getting settled in his new place and is providing ample ice-box room for some of those extra specials that bring fancy prices.

Kennicott Bros. Co. have a letter from Ernst Asmus expressing satisfaction with the returns from their sales of his valley and saying that they average better than the returns he has had in the New York market. Mr. Pleser says there has been a good in the evening, so it may be seen by the suburban growers who find it difficult to be present at night. The judging will be done by 1 p. m., and the exhibition will then be open for inspection.

Efforts will be made to have every one of the newer carnations on exhibition as well as finely grown blooms of the older sorts. The carnation is right in President Hartshorne's line and he is working with much enthusiasm to make this carnation display an eye-opener. A meeting for discussion of the new varieties and of carnation culture will be held in the evening.

Flowers for display at the exhibition should be addressed to McKellar & Winterson, 47 Wabash ave., Chicago (marked "for exhibition") and should reach the city the morning of Jan. 19. The exhibits will be judged by a committee, consisting of W. N. Rudd, E. Buettner and A. McAdams.

In addition to arranging for the above, two new members were elected. Two seedling carnations from the Chicago Carnation Co. were on exhibition. No. 16, a fine pink, scored 86 points by the American Carnation Society scale. No. 48, a good white, scored 76 points. They are both very promising varieties.

A committee was appointed to revise the by-laws and to submit same to the next meeting for action.

Hort. Society Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, held at the Sherman House last Tuesday afternoon, President W. H. Chadwick and Vice-Presidents E. G. Uihlein, H. G. Selfridge and E. Wienhoeber were re-elected. Secretary W. C. Egan begged so hard to be allowed to retire that he was reluctantly permitted to do so, and Mr. W. N. Rudd was elected both secretary and treasurer. Mr. Egan was retained in the executive committee by election, and P. J. Hauswirth and Edgar Sanders were re-elected members of the committee. Frank Lowden and John J. Mitchell were added to the board of directors, Messrs. Walsh and Schneider retiring.

The report of Treasurer Rudd showed that the expenses of the last exhibition amounted to $8,722.65; that the total receipts fell short of it by $1,043.84, leaving this amount to be covered by dues of members, etc. Nevertheless, the society still has total cash resources of $818.46, and was not obliged to call upon the guarantee fund in connection with the last show. The total box office receipts were $4,637. Premiums donated footed up to $2,491.26, and there was income from other sources.

Mr. Edgar Sanders reported the result of the efforts of the Florists' Club to insure a greater number of exhibitors at subsequent exhibitions, and the names of those who had pledged themselves to exhibit at the next show were received with much satisfaction. A resolution authorizing the exe-

Tile Bottomed Bench at Bassett & Washburn's.

The tile bench shown in the accompanying engraving is now used throughout the entire establishment and Mr. Bassett would not think of using any other style. Absolutely perfect drainage is assured, the benches are very lasting, and they cost less than 50 per cent. more than board bottom benches. He finds them not only better but considerably cheaper in the long run. Benches that have been up four years are apparently just exactly as good as the day they were erected.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Trade continues very satisfactory for the season of the year. There seems less demand than last week in general, but the supply is not excessive and there is little surplus except in white at times. Several large funer-demand for really first class valley, though second grade stuff has suffered at times. It indicates the importance of grading and sorting, for Mr. Asmus doesn't have all first class spikes any more than any one else, though his average may be higher. The writer took note during a visit to Mr. Asmus' place that a number of employes were busy sorting valley, removing imperfect bells, etc., and some of it was several degrees away from gilt edged. But he was wise enough not to let any of it go out as his best.

Carnation Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club it was decided to hold the annual carnation meeting and exhibition on Friday, January 19. The large room No. 204 Masonic Temple has been secured for this special occasion and it has been arranged to have the display in position ready for examination during the afternoon as well as cutive committee to hold the next exhibition was adopted.

An amendment to increase the elective members of the executive committee from six to eight, and making five a quorum, was presented and will be acted upon at the next meeting. By resolution the secretary was allowed the sum of $150 per annum for clerk hire.

Various Items.

We hear a report that F. Calvert & Son, of Lake Forest, recently lost the contents of a range of houses by the disablement of the heating apparatus.

L. H. Read, Grand Rapids, Wis., passed through the city last week on his way to Alabama.

Geo. M. Garland is meeting with very gratifying success in introducing his iron greenhouse gutter. It interests every one who is tired of rebuilding his greenhouses every once in a while. Those who have already adopted it are very much pleased with it.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kreitling will celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage on Saturday, January 20th, and have issued cards for a party at Kindergarten Hall, 10-12 Van Buren street, in the evening. Walter will conduct the kindergarten in his own inimitable style and every one must have his lesson.

Mr. O. P. Bassett is now settled in his handsome new residence in Hinsdale. It is in the colonial style, and reflects the greatest credit upon the designer, for it is undoubtedly the finest residence in this suburb, noted for its beautiful homes.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

A well attended and enthusiastic meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held on Monday evening, Jan. 8. Ex-President Plumb, in taking the chair, spoke very feelingly of the kindness and encouragement he had received from the members during his two years' term of office, and he assured them that he would continue to work with a view of making this the strongest club in the trade. He then in a few happy words introduced the new president of the club, Mr. P. O'Mara; the vice-president, Mr. Arthur Herrington; Treasurer Charles B. Weathered, and Secretary John Young, each of whom responded in ways to excite more interest in and fidelity to the requisites of floriculture.

Mr. O'Mara then gave an outline of what the policy and workings of the club would be for the eventful year before them. The most important of the committees required to perfect arrangements for the convention of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists had been appointed at a meeting of officers held that afternoon, and he hoped everyone would assist in making this one of the greatest conventions ever held in the interests of the trade.

The club had decided to hold a horticultural show, and 10,000 square feet in the center of the main hall would be offered to private gardeners; there would be 40,000 square feet surrounding this for the trade exhibits. The convention and exhibition will both be held in the Grand Central Palace, and additional space is obtainable if required. The following were appointed to attend to the workings of the club: House and Entertainment Committee—Messrs. F. L. Atkins, John P. Cleary and Wm. Marshall; Committee on Awards—W. I. Brower, A. L. Miller, C. H. Allen, John E. Lager and H. Dailledouze. The committees appointed to arrange for the S. A. F. convention will meet in the club rooms on Monday evening, Jan. 22, for the purpose of organizing and getting the machinery in working order.

Mr. Weathered, on behalf of the annual dinner committee, reported that the club's annual dinner would be held at the St. Denis, Eleventh street and Broadway, at 7 p. m., Jan. 17th; tickets, $5.00. He urged those present and others desiring to attend to purchase their tickets as soon as possible. A full muster was expected, because the event was not only their annual dinner, but also to be a reception to the executive committee of the S. A. F., which body would meet in this city on the 16th. Flowers in abundance and of the very finest were wanted to decorate the tables on that occasion, and they should be sent to W. F. Sheridan, 39 West Twenty-eighth street, by noon of the 17th. Consignments should be made to the club, care of above, and the flowers named for identification.

Several new members were nominated and elected. Invitations were received and accepted to attend the annual dinner and smoker of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, and the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club. Treasurer Weathered read his annual financial report, showing the club to be in sound monetary condition; there are 169 members on the books at present.

There were two varieties of new carnations on exhibition at the meeting. One, a light pink, after the color of Melba, called Genevieve Lord, was from H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md. It was awarded the club's certificate of merit. The other was also a light pink, named Roslyn, a three-year-old seedling which promises well; this was shown by Chris Besold, Mineola, L. I.; it was awarded honorable mention.

There was quite a lengthy discussion on the system of awards, and the whole matter was referred to the new committee, with the request that they revise or amend the present rules if they find them faulty. Other matters of interest were talked over, and before the meeting adjourned all considered they had a certain amount of the club's work to do and were willing to tackle it.

There's nothing like expecting visitors, and the press is like the window in Thrums.

Bowling.

The bowlers were busy in the afternoon. It was one of the best times they ever had up there. Last week John H. Taylor's bowling with a crutch was the novelty; this time it was the east and west movements of Julius Lang and the low scores of many experts. The crowd was in two teams and excitement ran very high till the last. Following are the scores:

ORANGE, N. J.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society had a red letter night January 3. It was the installation of officers and their annual dinner. Both affairs took place in the society's pretty rooms, 240 Main street, Orange. Malcolm McRorie acted as master of ceremonies at the installation, and the introductions and responses were sufficient to inspire the utmost enthusiasm. With Peter Duff as president; Joseph B. Davis, vice-president; George Smith, secretary, and Malcolm McRorie, treasurer, it is safe to say the society will be heard from to the benefit of horticulture.

The secretary reported 116 members in good standing, and the treasurer that several hundred dollars were in the bank. The several working committees were appointed and the meeting adjourned to partake of the dinner.

The table was prettily decorated with flowers donated by Messrs. Smith, Von Qualen, Rose, and May. The latter contributed a vase of his new carnation, Olympia, which was very much admired. Some half hundred members and friends were seated at the tables, and the menu, which was exceedingly good and plentiful, being duly attended to, the machinery of oratory and music was started by President Duff, who in a few happy words welcomed the guests and hoped they would enjoy themselves. Messrs. Taylor and Bennett rendered solos on the cornet and violin, and then came the toasts. Dr. Ward, for the "State Horticulturists"; W. J. Stewart, "The Society of American Florists"; William Duckham, "The Private Gardener"; J. N. May, "The Commercial Florists"; J. B. Davis, "The Ladies"; G. Bird, "Old Time Florists"; J. W. Withers, "The Horticultural Press"; Dr. Kitchen, "Horticulture," etc., etc. Geo. Smith sang "The Tinker's Wedding" as only George can, and S. Butterfield, who is becoming quite a singer, sang "She Wore a Wreath of Roses."

It was altogether a most enjoyable affair, a reunion of old-timers; here and there were groups of men who had endured many hardships and enjoyed the sunrises of prosperity together in this and other countries; some who had wandered from other professions to, in many cases, the Hy-Brasilic one of floriculture, and the old and the young student who are forever learning from each other. Yes, it was a party where one could hear and learn much, whether from jovial John Hayes or Joseph Cypridium Manda, Dan McRorie, or the doctors and professors that abounded there; they were all worth catching.

The newspaper men had to leave on the last train, and consequently lost much of the fun, but they carried with them a pleasant memory. There was a full muster of the press there: S. Butterfield, of the Florists' Exchange; W. J. Stewart, American Florist; J. I. Donlan, Florists' Review; and J. W. Withers, American Gardening. They, with Commissioner Julius Lang, went up from New York on invitation of the society. D.

ETHEL CROCKER.

The Introducer Says it is Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation Ever Offered to the trade.

With ordinary culture they will average three to three and one-half inches in diameter, are well formed with extra heavy petals—coming nearer attaining exhibition and commercial perfection in one and the same flower than any other known variety.

PRICES:

Per 25, $2.50; per 100, $10.00; per 250, $18.75; per 1000, $75.00

Rooted Rose Cuttings.

Get new blood in your Roses and secure what you want from grafted stock. Our Cuttings this year are made from grafted plants and none but the best wood will be used.

Our prices the same as others. BRIDES, BRIDESMAIDS, METEORS, $1.50 per 100.

THE GRAND NEW ROSE LIBERTY!

WON HIGHEST HONORS WHEREVER SHOWN.

THE FINEST CRIMSON FORCING ROSE OF THE CENTURY.

Most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size and freedom of bloom, never showing any deformed, black or bull heads, either in winter or summer. A remarkable keeper, when cut keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance.

ST. LOUIS.

Trade Conditions.

Business the past week has been very quiet and the prices on stock considerably lower. Receipts of flowers of all kinds have been heavy. The weather has been fine and warm, and should it keep up, all kinds of flowers will be a glut and prices low.

The commission men are complaining of having too much stuff left over and that even the usual shipping trade was lost sight of the past week. The roses that are coming in now are much better than those for the holidays, and no doubt will be from now on. First choice Meteors, Brides, and Maids are sold at $5 and $8; seconds, $3 and $4. Beauties are coming better and quite a good shipment of them came in, and some of them went to waste; the choice ones sold well and at fair prices.

Carnations are very plentiful and are selling slowly and at very low prices. Good long fancy Jubilee, Scott, Daybreak, and Flora Hill bring $3; others sell all the way from $1 to $2 and $8 in 1,000 lots. Violets have been picked very closely the past week and consequently the supply was a little short; still, enough came in to supply the demand; $1 per 100 for Californias; small singles are down to 25 cents. A few Harrisii are in and bring $15. Callas, $10, and plenty of them. Smilax and asparagus are plentiful, but the demand light.

Notes.

Richard Frow, the Natural Bridge Road florist, met with a very serious accident a few weeks ago. He was thrown from a street car. Dick, as he is called by his friends, is getting along nicely, but it will take a week or two before he will be out.

Visitors in town the past week were: Mrs. W. J. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind., and Arnold Ringier, of Chicago, who passed through here on a flying trip to Little Rock, Ark. Mr. E. W. Guy, of Belleville, also spent a day with us.

Frank Buckshadt, formerly in business here, is now with Ellison & Teson at their West End store.

Joe North, at 915 Olive street, reports plenty of funeral work, but other orders are slow. Holiday trade good; better than ever before.

Charlie Kuehn, who a few weeks ago had the misfortune to drop one of the largest bowling balls on his foot, has recovered and will be able to bowl again on Monday night. He says he will leave his crutches at home.

Chas. Schoenle, on Washington avenue, had several large decorations the past week and a few more in sight for this month. Orders for other kind of work slow. Holiday business was the best in years.

Mrs. Pepper, on Easton avenue, and Grimm & Gorly, on Cass avenue, also report good business for the holidays, but since that time the trade has been rather slow.

Chrysanthemum "Little Chris"

Bloomed with us continuously from March until January.

Plant dwarf, flowers small, white.

Valuable as a pot plant, for funeral work or cut sprays.

Sold well at Easter and Decoration Day.

Cut back plants, with young growth from bottom, from 4 and 5-inch pots, 25c and 35c each; four and three for $1.00. Plants from 2-inch pots later.

The St. Louis Florists' Bowling Club started the New Year by rolling three games on Monday night. C. C. Sanders made the first strike, Carl Beyer the first spare, and Frank Fillmore the first poodle. The rolling was not as good as it should have been, but as we intend to roll every Monday night from now on, an improvement may be looked for. The scores were as follows.

BOSTON.

The situation here is not worth talking about. Trade surely never was so quiet at this time of year, consequently all our predictions for a good winter are flat so far. There is no such thing as a market price for anything this morning (Jan. 8), and hardly has been for a week. The difficulty is not so much an oversupply as an under-demand.

The snow storm of my last chapter proved a dainty affair of six or eight inches, which has largely been removed by sunny weather since.

Minor changes in the retail establishments of the city are in vogue. Mr. Phon, on Boylston street, closing his doors; the Calder Floral Co. moving a few numbers on the same street; and Mrs. Rogers giving up her old stand under the Adams House, on Washington street, and looking for a new location elsewhere.

Better keep your eye on A. Roper's new carnation, built on improved Daybreak lines. B. T.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Christmas trade was very good, better than in past years. All the stores sold out clean of holly and green. There were good sales of blooming plants, palms and ferns. Prices were a little higher than last year. Violets and carnations were short in supply, and there was an over-abundance of Romans and paper whites.

At the last meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists the installation of officers took place. Mr. Jacob Schulz read a paper on hybridizing carnations. He was very successful last year and raised some 800 plants from the seed he hybridized. Some of them are blooming now and it is believed will prove very satisfactory.

Mr. Kunzman's carnations are looking well. He has cut as many as 40 flowers from one plant.

Mr. Wm. Mann's carnations and other stock look fine.

Messrs. Wood & Stubbs, our seedsmen, are sending out their new catalogue, and it is a beauty.

Trade is very quiet after the holidays, and weather very cold since Christmas. KY.

GALESBURG, ILL.—Christmas trade was very good, a little better than last year. There was nearly enough home grown flowers to meet the demand.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Mr. W. W. Harnden, the seedsman, is the representative of the tenth ward in the lower house of the city council.

LEADVILLE, COLO.—Florist Stockdoff reports an excellent business and looks for an unusually prosperous time during 1900.

PUEBLO, COLO.—Victor Johnson has enlarged his glass to the point where he has to buy but little from outside points and is a strong advocate of home grown flowers.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Fire did about $200 damage to the greenhouse of Wm. Sims, in the rear of 1900 Lincoln Av., northwest, the night of Jan. 1.

PHILADELPHIA.

The florists in this city reported a general rush for New Year's day. Some of them were obliged to break the Sabbath by working all day; they had a great many orders for early delivery on New Year's day, there being quite a number of dinner parties given in honor of the New Year.

The boys had quite a "big time" at the Florists' Club room New Year's afternoon; the evening was spent in playing various games.

Prices.

Prices are as follows: Beauties, $1 to $5 per doz.; Brides, Maids, Meteors, K. A. Victoria, $2 to $8; extra, $10 to $12; Gontiers, $4 to $5; Morgan and Perle, $2 to $8; Liberty, $2 to $3; extra, $4 per doz.; Golden Gate, $2 to $8; extra, $10 to $12. OCEANIC, N. J.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society it was decided to have a "smoker" at the time of the lecture by Prof. Byron D. Halsted, of the New Jersey Experimental Station, which takes place Jan. 19 at 7:30 p. m.

The Morris County Florists' and Gardeners' Association invited the officers of the Mo. Co. Hort. Society to their installation of officers and "smoker."

RICHMOND, VA.

Mr. W. A. Hammond reports an excellent holiday business, with bright prospects for the new year.

He celebrated the season by a distribution of a barrel of turkeys amongst the married men employed in his extensive establishment. The gift was highly appreciated and creates an excellent precedent, which he hopes to follow up.

PAEONIES IN THE SOUTH.

Will some southern reader of The Review tell me how far south paeonies do well? Would also like to know how far south the lily of the valley is successfully grown. R.

NEW TOMATO FOR 1900

LIVINGSTON'S MAGNUS.

This very distinct and most promising new variety, of the color of BEAUTY and ACME is the latest addition by Livingston to the Tomato family. It is thicker, heavier, and more solid than either of the above, making it easily the most handsome sort in cultivation. The form is perfect, uniform, large and attractive. Flesh very firm. It is a robust grower, with short joints, setting its fruit clusters closer together than most varieties, and is therefore a heavy cropper. It is especially adapted for shipping, and is remarkably fine for forcing indoors and out.

Per pkt. 20c; 3 pkts. 50c; 7 pkts. $1.00

COLUMBUS, O.

The year 1900 opened disastrously for Mr. E. T. Affleck, whose place was almost totally destroyed by fire. Three greenhouses are a total wreck, while the contents of the fourth were lost through the disabling of the heating apparatus. The fire also destroyed a well filled barn.

The loss is estimated at $6,000 to $7,000, with insurance of only $500 on the barn and none on greenhouses and contents. Mr. Affleck intends to rebuild as soon as possible.

The fire originated near the boiler in some unknown manner and had got a good start before it was discovered by the night fireman.

PITTSBURG.

The 40th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Horticultural Association will be held in Old City Hall, this city, Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 16 and 17. An interesting program has been prepared and there will be an exhibition of fruits and flowers.

Further information may be had by addressing the secretary of the association, Mr. E. H. Engle, Waynesboro, Pa., or the secretary of the local committee of arrangements, Mr. J. E. Haudenschild, Green Tree, Pa.

Gustav & J. W. Ludwig, of Allegheny, have issued a very handsomely illustrated catalogue of floral arrangements.

OWOSSO, MICH.

John S. Schleider, proprietor of the Sunnyside greenhouses, has completed his store and conservatory on West Main street. The store is a neat two-story brick building, 22x60, and a handsome show window extends clear across the front on the first floor. The conservatory is at the side of the store and is 22x40. The store is finished in white, with tinted walls.

The greenhouse plant at the north end of Hickory street consists of six modern houses, each 24x100, making a total of 15,000 square feet of glass.

MERRILL, WIS.—N. Greivelding has a calla lily with two blooms on one stem and now a third has started out between the two.

WAUSAU, WIS.—Mr. C. Lund is building a 50-foot house. He now has about 5,000 feet. Mr. M. Phillips built a hundred-foot house last summer and put in raised benches in his other house in place of solid beds. He now has 4,000 feet of glass.

MACOMB, ILL.—Geo. N. Philcox, who has been with I. L. Pillsbury in Galesburg for some time, has just taken charge of the Macomb Greenhouses here, and will continue the business as G. N. Philcox & Co. We wish him every success. F. R. Thornton has been there for the past year.

NEW LIGHT PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Peerless in its class. The coming light pink. As a commercial variety it will score its greatest triumph. As an exhibition variety it will take care of itself. Its reputation is already made. We recommend it to you as being first-class in every way. It has won highest honors wherever exhibited. In a word it is the light pink par excellence. Better than Scott in its palmiest days. There will be no attempt to over-propagate it. First come, first served. Send for complete description.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

PITTSBURG.

Cut flower trade keeps up pretty well since Christmas, though prices are down some, especially on carnations. They don't sell out as clean as they should, $10 to $20 per 1,000 for standards, up to $4 per 100 for fancies, are the prices. But the carnation seems to have lost beauty since Christmas; whether it is that they were forced some, or because we cannot get Christmas prices for them now.

Roses are not overplentiful, especially good Beauties. Harrisli are coming more freely, but the disease has shown itself more and more the last six weeks.

Burki is sending in lots of free-sias and some fine Meteors. Romans and paper whites are still not wanted.

An Elaborate Decoration.

The heads of the Carnegie Steel Co. had a dinner at the Schenley Hotel, Saturday, for which Messrs. Randolph & McClements put up a very swell decoration. Peach trees in bloom screened the musicians, orange and pear trees in fruit, a bed of 2,000 red tulips, a bed of 500 Harrisli, with a large palm in the center, were some of the features of the decoration. Everything appeared natural and represented a Japanese garden illuminated with Japanese lanterns; no other lights were used. Forty cases of southern smilax were used. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. supplied the decorators with the material.

Randolph & McClements certainly seem to have the facilities for handling swell decorations—the stock, the experience, and the men. Passing their store, which they rebuilt last summer, you can see their vans and rubber tired wagons lined up to receive their loads, everything in the best of style.

We have had quite a cold spell lately, and with the trust making the price of coal, the pile seems to disappear twice as fast as usual. Have heard that one of our florists had to get water into his boiler with the watering can, one day lately, on account of city water works being partly shut down. When will the florist learn to forestall such vexations.

BAER.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

Trade on New Year's day might be compared with a good Saturday's business. However, everybody was so well satisfied with their Christmas sales that no complaint could be heard anywhere. Potted plants were in better demand than on Christmas day, quite a lot of lily of the valley and Roman hyacinths in pots being sold. Roses and carnations are coming in to the market in better shape and are expected to improve right along as season advances. Violets are also improving in quality and quantity and sell at the old prices of $1 per doz. for Princess of Wales and 75 cents for California; Swanley white and Marie Louise, 75 cents and $1 per dozen bunches. Lily of the Valley is becoming more plentiful and is nicely grown. Roman hyacinths are of good quality and bring 20 and 25 cents per dozen. White chrysanthemums are still being brought in by the Chinamen and a supply of them can be seen at most all the stores.

Notes.

The window display at Pellicano's on Kearney street, was extra fine on New Year's day. One window given over to Siever's carnations in variety and banked with poinsettias made a fine show of the divine flower. The other window had a bank of roses; among them were some extra fine Bridesmaids and Carnots, edged with Lily of the Valley. Altogether, both windows were catchy and extremely pretty in appearance.

Some nice Primula Forbesi in 4-inch pots is on sale at a few stores, but goes slowly. Buyers admire its dainty little flowers, but stop when 50 or 75 cents is asked for a plant in a 4-inch pot. In a cut state it fares in the same way. The ladies expect to get as much of it for 10 or 15 cents as they would violets. It will never do for this market. What a pity! J. N.

PEORIA, ILL.—Charles Loveridge did a big Christmas business and had a fine cut of good stock from his own houses in North Peoria. He has a city store at 321 Main st.

BUFFALO.

Directly after New Year's business came down with that horrible soft thud that has left us flabby and mushy. It is quite down to the normal, and in fact almost the abnormal on the wrong side, so it is no use going into any description of business. The supply is on the increase and prices are reasonable. We expect very soon that there will be a flood of violets. Since New Year's day the market has been what anyone but an Esquimaux would call ideal weather, charming for the plants under glass, to the poor man minus an overcoat, or the coal bin. Even Mr. Zimmerman's turkey seems to enjoy it, for his cypress tail is taking on a more amorous color.

Mr. Zimmerman's place has been so well advertised of late, both in the trade and daily journals, that the public fully expect Mr. Zimmerman to mount his turkey and parade the streets on Washington's birthday. The motive power that inspires this wonderful advertising will be fully capable of imparting locomotion to this extraordinary ornithological monstrosity.

Mr. Joseph Rebstock was the only one who had to resort to an annex during the holidays and possibly Joseph would not have bothered about it but there happened to be a vacant store within twenty feet of his own.

Mr. S. A. Anderson has put in a very fine floral refrigerator; you cannot any longer call these elaborate and beautiful receptacles for flowers "ice boxes." Savie tells me that this costly adornment to his store is not so much the result of profits of his business as his savings by stopping home nights during the nine or ten months of his married life.

Palmer's store is particularly bright these days. Few stores in the country have a brighter or more attractive appearance. There is something clean, bright, novel and catchy every succeeding day. It is not the mass or wealth of flowers that produces this effect, but the genius of "the way in which it's done."

Schwert & Bernart of Checktawaga, are sending in some very fine primulas these days and there is a lot at Cold Springs also of more than ordinary merit. They are an inexpensive plant, but they suit the public well, and large quantities are sold. Plants will soon begin to be asked for by a large number of people, not for presents, but for the sake of having them in their homes.

Buffalo has taken a sad drop in sports and it looks at this writing as though we would not even have a team of bowlers in New York, which will be the greatest tournament in the history of the society. They are a poor lot of sports here and little of the fraternal feeling. The defeat at Detroit last summer broke their heart; but that is not all—it drove one into politics, a much worse game to combine with business. Another elongated youth gets disgusted with the play of his team. An older man is afraid he is only good for a friendly game on the alleys he knows, and suffers with stage fright at John Westcott's peculiar rooting tactics. Another bald head finds the weight of the pen more congenial to his declining muscle. And a large number of young men who could hold up the credit of our club are either so keenly following the scent of the dollar or the admiration of their young wives that not any hour can be spared for a game of bowls. Chicago is bowling mad, not the florists particularly, but all classes; thirty or forty leagues, three or four hundred alleys and ten thousand bowlers. For once Buffalo was ahead of Chicago, for we had the epidemic four years ago. Every corner had a bowling alley, but never in such fast numbers as Chicago, because, as the man said who stuttered worse in New York than he did in Washington, it's a la-la-lar-larger place.

OTAHEITE ORANGES.

S. S. P. asks: By what method can these plants be grown into good shapely plants for Christmas trade?"

If you have any plants left over that lost their fruit or did not sell, keep them cool till middle of March, then shorten back the shoots and start growing in a warm house and give them plenty of syringing. They will make a growth and flower. You can withhold syringing while in bloom. After the fruit is set they can be plunged out of doors, but look out for prolonged rains. A safer place would be a light house where they could be shaded from the hottest suns and be given the fullest ventilation.

These are now imported at very low cost from Belgium, but there is a great likelihood of the fruit dropping. They seem to have also lost their hold on public favor and are one of the things that did not go at Christmas like the famous "hot cakes."

W. S.

"CHRISTMAS TREE ASTER."

This is the name given to a novelty in asters offered by F. C. Heinemann, Erfurt, Germany, in his latest trade offer of novelties. The name is given "on account of the branching habit, much resembling the regular arrangement of the twigs on a fir tree." And a half tone engraving from a photograph of a pot plant bears out the description.

How much more confidence a half tone from a photograph gives one than the average catalogue drawing or wood cut! And we will say for Mr. Heinemann that the colored plate which is mailed with his list is a fair reproduction of the photograph so far as habit and freedom of bloom is concerned.

But the point we wish to now make particularly is that novelties should be illustrated by half tone engravings from photographs, and not from drawings that may or may not improve (?) on nature. We have been told that very often this is impossible because the grower has not yet any specimen in condition to do the novelty justice, and to do it justice an artist must be employed to show "what it will be like when fully developed." There is only one answer to this, and it is that there is no excuse for the dissemination of a novelty of which the originator has not yet secured a perfect specimen. We can afford to wait; and it will be better for the reputation of the originator if he would do likewise. We do not care to share his dreams until they are fully realized.

But we must be cautious in accepting all half tone engravings as being made from photographs of the objects. We have noted during the last year or so a number of illustrations of plant novelties that were in half tone but which were made from wash drawings instead of from photographs, and in some of these the "artist" had allowed his imagination to riot as exuberantly as in the old line drawing or wood cut.

There is a marked difference though between a plate from a photograph and that from a wash drawing when they are closely examined. A sharp scrutiny will quickly show that in the wash drawing there is a regularity of form in the flowers, a positiveness about the strong lines in the foliage and a general stiffness that is not to be seen in the plate from a photograph. The hand of man is not cunning enough to accurately depict all the little natural peculiarities of foliage especially, and herein lies the safeguard against being misled by a wash drawing, though at first glance one might think a photograph had been used.

THE WINTER BERRY.

Referring to the Black Alder, or Winter Berry, I notice the following item in your Florists' Review:

We understand, though, that the berries are of little value after severe winter weather sets in and that the large supply in the market this year is due to the remarkably mild winter up to this time. Could not this difficulty be overcome by cutting the branches after the first frost and storing away in a cool but frost-proof cellar or root house? We would be pleased to know whether this has been tried.

Yes. Gather the berries by breaking off branches as soon as the leaves fall, and put stems in water in a cool, damp place. They keep a long time.

W. F. HEATH.

Jaffrey, N. H., Jan. 2, 1900.

PRICES OF GLASS.

A subscriber writes: "Give us a little light on the prices of glass in your paper. Am sure I am not the only one who would be interested."

We can readily understand that "light" would be desirable, but the situation is one that is difficult to describe in a way that will stand good by the time it is put into type.

Dealers will not make definite quotations because they are at the mercy of the combination and the price to the dealer may change before he can be sure of the glass with which to fill orders. And dealers report very little glass of the greenhouse sizes in the market.

The recent big cut in the price of glass was evidently made for the sole purpose of forcing into the combine the manufacturers that were still outside. It was purely a "war measure," and was not intended to increase sales.

The nearest approach to a quotation that we could secure last Monday was: 16x24 AA, $4.56 per box; same size A, $4.20; same size B, $3.92. These figures were not definite, but were given as "about the present market." Dealers say they have been unable to accept recent large orders offered them because they were unable to place them with the manufacturers on a satisfactory basis. They attribute present conditions to the labor situation as regards glass workers, but we think this statement can be taken with a rather large grain of salt.

What the outcome will be none can foresee. Dealers seem to generally believe that prices will soon advance. It will evidently depend upon how stubborn the independent manufacturers prove to be. Even lower prices may result before the war is over, but they are more likely to be higher than lower unless the combine should meet its Waterloo.

WASHINGTON.

There has been no business in the florists' line since the holidays. This, and a glut on the market, caused prices to drop out of sight the latter part of the week. Carnations were offered as low as $10 per 1,000. The finest grade roses brought $8; seconds and poor quality could not be sold at all. Romans and narcissus more slowly at 1 and 1½ cents each. Violets, 50 to 75 cents per 100. Good plants of any kind sell quite well.

From the announcements of many large state dinners and teas, the prospect for a good season is bright.

Visitors this week were: Mr. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and Mr. Dreyer, of A. Herrmann, New York.

F. H. KRAMER.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The program of meetings for discussion during the winter season of the Worcester County Hort. Society has been issued. The meetings will be held each Thursday from Jan. 4 to March 15, inclusive. The list of subjects includes the following: "The Progress of Horticulture," "Why People Grow Flowers," "Arbor Day," "Budding and Grafting," "Home Grounds," "Relation of Good Roads to Horticulture," "Horticulture and Education."

Copies of the program may be obtained by addressing A. A. Hixon, Sec'y, this city.

MALTA, O.

W. C. Scovell reports a steadily increasing business since he commenced eight years ago. The past season trade has increased about 12 per cent, notwithstanding that most of his stock was sold at half price on account of his having to move the first of last April. He has built a very convenient house and uses gas for fuel. The gas costs him nothing, as he has a gas well on his land.

IF YOU don't find what you want in our classified ads. let us know about it. We will find it for you if it is to be had.

PLEASE SEND US a correct list of the names and addresses of the florists who receive their mail at your postoffice and thereby oblige.

Criticism.

Once in a while and in a roundabout way we hear from a few who imagine themselves hurt by some criticisms in this department. We usually don't stop to notice such things, but in these particular cases we wish to express our sympathy for their illusions and ask them to look at things in the right light. This section of The Review was started to assist an immense part of the trade, and in particular to encourage higher standards in the finest of fine arts.

You will certainly agree that any art, no matter what section it belongs to, has come to its present state of perfection mainly by the prods of criticism. If you read the great dailies or magazines, you will find that names are mentioned and things are torn to pieces by critics, and you, in many cases, agree with them, especially as to the drama. But the critics in all ages have been a dreaded set, mainly because the vast majority of humanity can only smile in the sunray of praise. Florists as a rule are susceptible to praise; they anticipate it for almost everything they grow or arrange. We find no pleasure in disturbing their equanimity, but in some cases we look upon it rather as a duty. Friendship can never influence our pen. We feel that all are capable of doing better than they have yet done, and in order to spur them on, we shall not fail to condemn the bad and praise the good.

As an answer to our critique on "Art at Flower Shows," we have received assurances that many societies will provide for a better representation of floral arrangement at the shows this year; this is what is badly wanted, for the greatest crowd will always be found where decorative art is displayed; let us hope it will not be of any ordinary quality, such as one would hastily get up on an order.

Window Displays.

We regret to state that there is so much deserving criticism that we cannot find space enough for it—but here's a little more: Last week in a Broadway florist's window we noticed a large vase filled with artificial peach blossoms; they were finely manufactured, and might deceive at a distance poor folks such as live down in the tenements where flowers are rarely seen. Now, would you want us to praise that window decoration? Well, we could not; we prefer to denounce every attempt to degrade our art, and we think the worst form of degradation is in trying to substitute artificial for natural flowers.

On the same day we walked up Fifth avenue and came to a florist's window displaying a sign, "Latest in Mantel Decoration." Well, although the mantel was almost entirely hidden with foliage, it would have been pretty only for the ugly, long looped bow of terrible colored printed millinery ribbon that hung at one side. If that is the "latest" in decoration, we wonder what will be "last." Ribbons of any kind are out of place on a mantel, especially as an adjunct to floral decoration.

You've seen the little "Lord Fauntleroy" boy with the broad sash bow hiding his face, or the ribbon-mad girl's house where it's on everything, even to the coal scuttle; well, they supply the models for some florists' designs. If the ribbon was self-colored it might pass in many cases, but it's the kind milliners refused to buy two years ago. But to return to this Fifth avenue window: it is prettily tiled in green (if the grey moss and violet boxes were hid 'twould be better), and there are some very attractive things often seen there.

Fleischman draws a crowd 'round his window. On a bed of smilax and ferns he has sixteen white doves; they are attached to a violet decorated chariot in which stands a pretty doll holding baby white ribbons that are tied to the doves; a concealed electric fan shakes the ribbons and gives a natural touch to the design. If the chariot were filled with blossoms and the doves were not so formally arranged it would be prettier. Small's showed a very handsome basket of cattleyas, and Thorley—the always beautiful—a vase of fine American Beauties.

Never were there so many fine carnations seen in the New York stores as there are at present; they form the principal portion of most of the florists' window flowers. We will deal with them exclusively next week.

American Flowers Abroad.

We notice that our old and esteemed Chicago friend, Ess, sends a communication to the Florists' Exchange on American flowers in Europe. There is nothing very new in that; twelve years ago we frequently sent boxes of roses over to parties in London and Paris, and they were worn in fine condition there. They were slower boats at that time, too. We remember having a special zinc-lined box made for one young lady who visited Europe every year and insisted on having American grown roses to wear every day whilst crossing the ocean and the week after landing. We filled the box with Marechal Niels, Niphetos and Cusins, put the box in the ship's ice box, and the steward gave our customer fresh roses each morning. Flowers are now very often taken by passengers from New York to Liverpool and Southampton.

With the present quick steamer service it is a very easy matter to ship many kinds of flowers; arrangements can be made with stewards to have them cared for; and we look forward to the time when we will not only send exhibits of cut flowers over for European shows, but that we will at least supply traveling Americans with whatever flowers they may need, and that we shall also send flowers to European markets. Our American Beauties and extra grade carnations would sell well over there in winter. We may even yet open an American florists' store in London, and if it were run right there could be no doubt as to its success. You must know that they cannot grow fine roses in England during winter on account of fog, etc.; what they get now are mostly from the south of France, and we have often thought that if some grower would adopt the American system of culture, say on the Isle of Wight, to supply the London market, he might do better than in the close competition here.

Flowers in Market.

If you were to ask us what were the finest flowers obtainable in New York at present, we would say Cattleya Trianae. Thomas Young, Jr., sells those grown by Arthur Herrington, and Lager & Murrell have a fine crop coming in. These flowers are the gems of the market at present. Cattleyas and Farleyense may not be new, but they are very hard to beat for bouquets or table decoration. The darkest shades in cattleyas are the most popular with New York ladies.

We are afraid that the clumsy, heavy bridal bouquet has resulted in the death of that very important part of our trade. As in many other sections, it has been overdone, and the florist is mostly to blame. There is just a chance to succeed in reviving the custom, and we ought to study it. Of course, the finest bridal bouquet that you can make is that of white orchids, and they are rather scarce just now.

There are a few Dendrobium formosums still on the market, a very limited quantity of Laelia albida, possibly a little Coelogyne cristata, Odontoglossum crispum and Phalaenopsis amabilis.

When making up your bouquet, it is best to have variety, for one kind of orchid is apt to arrange awkwardly and be less handsome than one with a cluster of orange blossoms, valley, or some other choice white flower. You know the sectional bouquet in which a ring was tied to foretell the receiver's wedding is seldom made nowadays, because it caused too much jealousy and quarrelling as to who should get the lucky section. Gardenias are getting to be more plentiful and are fine for bouquet, corsage spray or button-holds.

We regret to see that the phalaenopsis is becoming rarer every year and that they are seldom seen even in private orchid collections, never in the cut flower market. Growers tell us they are too difficult to grow, others that some form of disease has almost wiped them out; whatever the cause, their non-appearance on the market is to be deeply deplored. Of all the choicest of flowers in cultivation we consider many of the varieties of phalaenopsis the most beautiful; they are by far the finest material for spray bouquets and numerous forms of decoration. We would appeal to retail florists to give a good price for them whenever it is possible to purchase them, in order that some encouragement may be given for their more extensive cultivation.

The retail cut flower trade is badly in need of a larger white rose than the Bride or Kaiserin. We remember years ago that the "Puritan" promised to supply this want; whenever it could be got in good condition high prices were obtained for it. A preponderance of bullheads was given as a reason for discarding it; may not this fault be a result of poor cultivation? We remember how American Beauty in its early days was kicked about and ignored, and this rose even today is as far from being understood as it is from the zenith of its glory. We look back with fond recollections to the days when Cornelia Cooks were grown to perfection by Littlejohn, of Chatham. There never was, nor has there since been, a white rose to compare with it; we can never forget how grand they were, especially when with sprays of foliage, and often we got as high as $6.00 and $9.00 per dozen for them through the winter season; we believe it could be repeated today were they grown so finely.

We have arrived at a most peculiar, nay, critical stage in floriculture; the greenhouse is put on a level with the machine furnished factory. We seem to say to a plant, "Now, rascal, produce just so many blooms, or we'll disown and despise you." The gardener of today is but an engineer whose oil-can is filled with physic. The trend of higher cultivation seems to lower our standard of appreciation. The broader our views the narrower our selection. Under the veil of business people perpetrate many crimes, and there are none so blind as those who see and yet ignore the inevitable. 'Tis quite true that those who excel in growing certain grades of stock are making money, those who attempt to follow and fail had better be working for others or go into some other line of trade.

If you wish to study the present condition of the cut flower market read the trade reports in the papers, or stay, go out to Madison, N. J., and investigate the rose question of today as we have done. You will find that of the one million square feet of glass devoted to commercial floriculture in this township alone, not 5,000 square feet is given to the cultivation of any rose other than Beauty, Bride, Mald and Meteor. Our business cannot exist much longer on this plan of everyone growing the same variety of flowers, simply because they can produce so many of that particular kind, because the market conditions of the future will be far worse than they are today, and only a greater variety of flowers will prevent a stunted state of trade.

The average grower of today is too slow to recognize this, and the only relief we see is to get successful retailers to have certain novelties and lines of stock specially grown for them. To be able to control the sale of a house, or even a bench of some beautiful rose of a variety which cannot be got on the market means a great deal to any florist with a large trade. We look for this in the near future, and with it not only the advent of numerous new flowers, but a reappearance of many of the gems of fifty years ago. IVERA.

THE COUNTRY FLORIST AT CHRISTMAS.

Mr. Editor: I note in your paper that the plant trade at Christmas time is growing all over the country, and some claim that it is on account of the high prices asked for cut flowers.

I will endeavor to show you how the country florist does it at that particular time. The florist in a small town will have from 5,000 to 10,000 feet of glass. He will have about 500 tea roses on the bench, about the same of carnations, and the rest of his houses in general stock. Of course he has to depend on the city for his cut flowers, but as there are no nabobs in our small towns with "money to burn," it is an uphill business to sell cut flowers at three prices.

This is the way it works in a small place: A lady steps into your place and says: "Good morning, Mr. S." "Good morning, lady." "Give me a dozen carnations." "Yes, ma'am." I wrap them up and hand them to the lady. She says, "How much?" "$1.50." "What! Why, I paid you only 50 cents last week for the same carnations."

"Yes; but this is Christmas." "Oh! Well, it don't cost any more to grow them now than it did last week." "But, you know, there are not enough cut flowers to go around for Christmas." "Well, I'll not take them at that price." "Well, then, why not buy this azalea at $1.50? The price is just the same as last week." "Well, I'll take that." "All right."

Next customer: "Got any roses?" "Yes, ma'am." "How much are they?" You answer, $2, $2.50, or $3, as the case may be. "Oh, they are so much higher than you charged me last week." "Yes; but this is Christmas. Do you want something for a present for a friend?" "Yes, sir." "Why not buy this nice incarnata begonia at $1? It will outlast the roses." "I'll take it." With the next customer it will be about the same way.

To the country florist I would say: Work up your plants and have them ready for Christmas. Have your primroses, cyclamen, Boston ferns, begonias (incarnata is the best I know of—Lorraine is a dandy if you can grow it), your palms, araucarias, etc., in shape, and see how well you will get through Christmas time without making your customers mad, and you certainly want them another day.

I do not say that cut flowers should not be higher at Christmas, but I think all will agree with me that it is better for the country florist to please his customers, and this, I find, is the way to do it. But he must have the cut flowers, too, as about one in ten that comes in will buy them even at prices asked, and he must please that customer as well as the others.

A great point in favor of plants is that if you don't sell them they will last till another day. And of the amount you receive for them you don't have to send the bulk of it away, as you do when you buy cut flowers. S.

BENCH OF POINSETTIAS.

The bench of these gay plants contained some 800 pots, mostly 5-inch. A few hundred 4-inch pots, as well as several dozen 10-inch pans, in which were six dwarf plants, do not show in photograph, being too near the camera. Those shown were a very even lot of plants, averaging 18 to 24 inches in height. The bracts were from 15 to 18 inches across, and as the pots were stood closer than that a view of them was just a sheet of scarlet. I have never succeeded better in keeping their foliage perfect to the pot. There was scarcely a yellow leaf to be seen in the whole lot.

You can grow larger flowers by planting them out in 5 or 6 inches of soil in a light, warm house, but as a cut flower they are not a success. They will wilt. Ninety per cent of these plants sold in pots, and of the pans many more could have been sold. It is just about 28 years ago since I first grew them in this city and looked for a market in New York, but there seemed very little demand for them. We have continued to grow them yearly as a Christmas plant, but it seems that in many cities they are grown in very limited quantities. At last we believe they are coming to the front and next year will see everybody wanting to grow some.

They are with us the ideal Christmas plant and there is nothing in the whole field that harmonizes so well with the scarlet berries of the holly. We tried 5 or 6 plants in large baskets with Boston fern, nothing else to mar the effects of the scarlet and green except a ribbon the same shade as the poinsettias, and although they were more in the style of a Thorley or Galvin article they outsold anything we had. The poinsettia (properly Euphorbia pulcherrima) is very easy to grow after you know how.

The bench of plants shown in the photograph were under the exclusive care of W. Belsey Scott, which goes to show that proficiency at bowling is compatible with faithful attendance to your work. A remarkable instance of this mingling innocent recreation with business is the extraordinary skill of Edwin Lonsdale with the fowling piece—but there is nothing foul on his American Beauties.

Poinsettias are too often seen with long, bare stalks. In this shape they are by no means attractive, but when dwarf with finely developed bracts and perfect foliage they are the ideal Christmas plant. In a warm house you cannot fail to get something that bears the name of poinsettia, but to have such a lot as those illustrated there are a good many points to observe. I think a rather explicit account of their culture will be found in Scott's "Florists' Manual." W. S.

ROSE NOTES.

The days are beginning to lengthen and the roses will need feeding. For this season of the year manure water applied with the hose is by far the best method. Place your tank for manure in a position where the temperature can be kept at 55 degrees, fill with manure and run water on, allowing it to stand until it ferments; then draw off the liquid into a catch tank, from which it is to be pumped into the pipes, and then temper it as to strength by adding clear water if it is found to be too strong. It is much the better for the plants to apply this fertilizer weak and often than in strong doses.

Be careful not to get the ground soggy, as we are likely to have a continuation of the present cloudy weather for some time yet, and if too wet the foliage will surely assume that yellowish appearance that indicates the plant is not in perfect health.

Keep close watch of the propagating bed, and if there is a spot of fungus shows, get rid of it at once. I have frequently watered sand with the ammonia and copper solutions with excellent results. Also have sprinkled the cuttings after they were inserted, without any harm being done to the foliage. Fungus is not likely to appear, however, if ventilation is properly attended to and the sand kept at the proper temperature.

Now that other work connected with the coming spring business may crowd upon you, don't neglect the roses if you expect to continue cutting blooms from them. Be just as careful to keep benches clean and stems tied up as you did early in the season; hire more help if necessary, but don't neglect that from which you expect to derive revenue. A. O. T.

FOUR KINDS IN ONE HOUSE.

I want to know what four sorts of roses would grow best in one house; colors, white, red, pink, and yellow. SUBSCRIBER.

The four varieties of these colors which are usually forced now are Bride, Meteor, Maid and Perle.

Bride and Maid require precisely the same treatment, while Perle should have a few degrees more heat (63 degrees), and Meteor should have 70 degrees at night, so "Subscriber" can see that the available roses of colors named are not likely to attain their full protection in same house.

I would advise him to run a partition across his house and plant Maid and Bride in one division, and Perle and Meteor in the one which may more easily have enough pipe added to raise it to the right temperature for Meteor, and plant the Perles with them, as they will suffer less from the high temperature than Meteor will from a lower one.

The new rose Liberty is said to do well in a low temperature. When it is disseminated, "Subscriber" may find in it a rose that will suit his available conditions.

A. O. T.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Cyclamen.

This is not the time of year that cyclamens are usually neglected. It is later when the rush of spring is on. Just now if they are early they will be in 2-inch pots, and if later some perhaps in flats. Remember that they should be kept growing along in a warmer temperature than you would give the flowering plants; about 60 degrees at night is right, with full light and regular fumigating. Never let them get parched for want of water, and the soil should be a good loam with at least one-third of leaf-mould.

Chrysanthemums.

You too often see the stock plants of chrysanthemums stood down beneath a bench and allowed to make a weak, spindling growth. If you don't want to begin propagating yet, the plants, if they are expected to make good cuttings, should be given a light, cool corner somewhere on the place.

If short of any good variety begin to propagate at once. Cuttings rooted now and grown on with liberal treatment will give you several cuttings between now and June, and if there is any standard variety that you have to buy do so at once and then you can much increase your stock. Above all, don't discard any variety that has done well with you and paid you simply because you have seen finer flowers of other varieties at some show. If Mrs. Bergman, Ivory, Yellow Queen, Golden Wedding, Jerome Jones, Maud Dean, or any other good one, is easily grown by you, stick to it and try new varieties in limited quantities.

Coleus, etc.

Coleus and achyranthes are easily and quickly propagated. In fact, nothing so easy, providing you have the heat for the coleus, but you cannot propagate them all in the month of April, so you should begin to put in batches of cuttings whenever you have them. That splendid variety that is invaluable to our foliage beds, Golden Bedder, has been struck with a disease in my locality, and it is ruination to them. I don't know yet what it is and have made no attempt at a cure. The shoots and midribs of the leaf are attacked with a rust and the plant dwindles away. Whole beds were destroyed by it last summer, and plants that showed no sign of it last fall have developed it in the greenhouse. Misery loves company, perhaps, but I hope this is quite local.

Don't bother with coleus cuttings that are either diseased or infested with mealy bug; it is too cheap a plant. Buy a clean stock of some cutting specialist.

Acalyphas.

It is a good time now to cut down the old plants of acalypha that you lifted in the fall. These, like the coleus, are tropical plants and must have a warm sand if you want a quick growth; and after the acalyphas are rooted they should have a warm, light house, a rich soil and plenty of syringing. When well and quickly grown the acalypha is a most ornamental plant, but when starved and runts they are anything but attractive.

Santolina.

If you lifted any santolina (a most useful carpet bedding plant) and sheared off the tops, they will now give you any amount of cuttings, which root in any cool sand. It is time to propagate, as they take some time to make useful sized plants. It is worth adding here that when April comes there is no place equal to the hotbed for the santolina. A month in there, as with the echeveria, is worth four months in the greenhouse, although they are a widely different plant.

Lophospermum.

I meant last week to mention the lophospermum. If you put in cuttings in the fall you are all right and can keep on increasing, but if you did not you should sow seed, as it takes a long time to make a plant that will be effective in a vase or veranda box. There are few of our summer climbers that are so effective and free growing as the lophospermum. The species that is known as maurandya is only useful for baskets and can be sown a month later; it is always raised from seed.

Petunias.

By the end of the month it will be time to sow petunias. There is always a good demand for these showy plants and with a yearly increased supply we always run short. Remember that for a bed the single is quite as fine as the double and much freer to flower. Buy the best strain you can and if you buy that sold as double you will get 60 per cent. single, and some strains even more. People like to see them in flower even if they are buying a hundred plants for one bed.

As the petunia is a cold-blooded plant at all times they should be grown cool. This is a plant I do not approve of putting in a hotbed; it produces a rank, soft growth; a cool, light house is what they want.

Any particular fine double variety that you are propagating by cuttings should be increased now and grown right along. Fine double varieties make nice pot plants in 4-inch pots and many are sold in our markets at 10 and 15 cents each, but I am more interested in the sturdy little plants that we sell in May at $6 or $7 per hundred for bedding.

Fuchsias.

This month is the latest that you can propagate the beautiful old fuchsia and make a good plant. Time was when we had varieties that we allowed to run straight up and they made shapely plants, but most all varieties are now best with one pinch of the leader so that they make several leads and are more compact. About 50 to 55 degrees at night grows fuchsias well, and at this time of year a light bench and syringing on fine days.

A fuchsia must be grown quickly or it is not worth growing at all, and the soil should be rich; two parts loam and one part leaf mould or well decayed refuse hops. The latter suits fuchsias admirably, and if the loam is not of the best and freshest add some bone flour to the compost.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

By H. B. McKnight, Jersey City, N. J.: Sir Thomas Lipton, color same as Scott, flowers measuring from three and one-half to three and three-quarter inches across, and with a calyx that does not burst in any temperature, stems 18 to 20 inches long. A cross between Scott and Tidal Wave, resembling the latter in growth but taller.

By M. E. Kraus, New Haven, Conn.: "Elm City," color white, flowers large, finely shaped and with strong fragrance, petals heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed; calyx strong and never bursting; stem strong, holding the flowers erect. Plant a good grower, not making unnecessary grass, and now in its fifth year.

THE LAWSON CARNATION.

Mr. Thomas F. Galvin, the Boston florist, reports that orders have been received for over 315,000 rooted cuttings of the famous $30,000 Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson carnation. Considering the fact that it is barely three months since the announcement was made that the cuttings of this famous pink would be placed upon the market, the amount of the orders received to date is phenomenal. The plants will be ready for delivery after February 1st and it is advisable that those desiring the same, no matter how small their order may be, should forward the same to Thomas F. Galvin, 124 Tremont st., Boston, Mass., as soon as possible.

A LATE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

On January 12th we received from Mr. Ant. C. Zvolanek, West Hoboken, N. J., a bloom of his new pink chrysanthemum Miss Florence E. Denzer. Mr. Zvolanek says it is the last bloom of the season, and it certainly is late enough. The main crop was cut for Christmas, we understand, and a bloom of good size and color, such as this, is certainly a very desirable thing to have at that time. The bloom sent is over five inches in diameter, has a good form and the color is a very satisfactory pink. Of course its great value is in increasing the supply of bloom at the holidays. There is most decidedly a place for it on account of its season of blooming.

Mr. Zvolanek also sends us some blooms of several varieties of sweet peas that originated with him and that have proved especially desirable for forcing. One labeled "Christmas" was particularly attractive. It is similar to Blanche Ferry—in fact much like that variety when unusually well done—the shade of pink being very rich.

A white one, a seedling from Emily Henderson, was also extra good, and there were several variegated forms, desirable in their classes.

We have never before seen sweet peas so good as these at this season of the year, and we congratulate Mr. Zvolanek on his success.

SANDWICH, MASS.—Wm. C. Chipman is dead at the age of 75 years. He was the introducer of the well known pink pond lily.

ST. LOUIS.

Carnation Meeting.

The first meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club in the year 1900 was held Thursday, the 11th, and it was the largest in attendance for some time. The attraction was our annual carnation meeting and the carnations on exhibition were the best we have ever had. The exhibit was staged in the center of the room as early as 2 o'clock. Though the meeting was called for 3 o'clock, the members began to arrive at 2, and when President Ammann called the meeting to order, 25 members were present.

The exhibition committee of the late show made a report and asked for more time to make collections; at the next meeting of the club they will be able to make their final report. The euchre committee made a report and was given full power to act, and the entertainment will take place some time next month.

Jos. Dickman sent in his resignation as a member of the club. Chas. Cannon, Sr., was elected a life member. Four new applications were received, as follows: J. W. Dunford, Central, Mo.; Henry Emundt, Belleville, Ills.; Prof. H. C. Irish, of Mo. Botanical Garden, and Henry Blixen, Edwardsville, Ill.

A communication from the Chicago Florists' Club was read announcing their annual carnation meeting for January 19, inviting St. Louis florists to make an exhibition.

A recess was called to inspect the carnations on exhibition. The president appointed a committee of three to act as judges. They were: E. W. Guy, of Belleville; F. W. Ude, Jr., of Kirkwood, and John W. Kunz, St. Louis.

The following well known firms from outside of the city made exhibitions: Richard Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, Ohio, staged Enquirer, a fine pink, Opal, shell pink, Estella, a good red, Rosamund, also a deep pink, and Elinore, a good white.

Fred Dorner & Sons, La Fayette, Ind., showed Morning Glory, light pink, which made a good impression; Mrs. Bradt, G. H. Crane and White Cloud.

Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., had the largest display on exhibition and showed the following varieties: Genevieve Lord, G. H. Crane, Chicago (Red Bradt), Gen. Maceo, Gold Nugget and White Cloud. This display was admired by all.

E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., had on exhibition a fine large red called Indiana; James Whitcomb Riley, on order of Armazindy, but much better; and Ethel Crocker, one of the finest pinks.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., showed their famous Genevieve Lord, very fine; also seedlings, No. 110 of 96, good white, No. 115 of 97, fine pink, and No. 30 of 96, another good pink.

Among the home growers some fine and well grown carnations were shown. Cannon Floral Co., Webster Grove, Mo., had Flora Hill, Red Jacket, America, Victor and Triumph.

A. Jablonsky, Wellston, showed some well grown Alaskas.

Henry Emundt, Belleville, staged White Cloud and Daybreak; both were well grown.

Frank Fillmore had a mixed vase of Flora Hill, Daybreak and Albertini.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, showed a large vase of mixed and well known varieties that were very fine.

After a recess of thirty minutes the meeting was called to order and the judges made the following report:

On the exhibit of R. Witterstaetter: Enquirer, a certificate of merit; Estella, Elinore and Rosamund, worthy of mention.

E. G. Hill's exhibit: Indiana, a certificate of merit; Crocker, the best of pink, and James Whitcomb Riley, worthy of mention.

Fred Dorner's exhibit: Morning Glory, fine pink, Bradt, G. H. Crane and White Cloud, well grown.

H. Weber & Son's exhibit: Genevieve Lord, good pink; Seedlings, Nos. 30, 110, and 115, worthy of mention.

Chicago Carnation Co.: The largest display of well grown Genevieve Lord, G. H. Crane, Chicago, Mrs. Bradt, Gen. Maceo, Gold Nugget, and White Cloud; all worthy of mention.

Among the home growers, all varieties shown by them were well grown and made a fine display, and all were worthy of mention.

Mr. C. A. Kuehn was elected by the club as their purchasing agent for rooted cuttings and plants for the growers. The question of "Will we hold another Flower Show this year" will come up for discussion at the next regular meeting of the club, which will be held Thursday afternoon, February 8, at 3 p. m. The meeting then adjourned.

The Market.

The weather for the past week has been mild, cloudy and dark, with very little sunshine. Trade is a little better than the last report. Flowers are not plentiful, yet the demand is such that enough is on hand to go around. The rose stock is not overplentiful and the prices have gone down a little. Beauties sell at from $25 to $40 for the best. Brides, Maids, Meteors and Perles bring $3 to $6; few extras bring $8. First class stock of these flowers is very scarce; the greater part of them are of the second choice order. Carnations were very plentiful the early part of the week and sold as low as $8 per 1,000, but by the end of the week the price went up again to $15. Daybreak, Scott, Flora Hill and Eldorado are selling from $1.50 to $2; some extra fine ones brought $3 and $4. Violets are coming better, and California sells at $1; small single, scarce at 50 cents; good double brings $1.50. Valley is quite plentiful at $4. Romans and narcissus are not a glut now and sell well at $2 and $3. The demand for adiantum, asparagus and smilax is good.

Notes.

We have a Scott, a name that is well known and liked—one Robt. W. G. Scott has a new place at Shreve and Anderson avenues, and will grow for the trade only. Mr. Scott attended our carnation meeting and was introduced to the members. All wished him well in his new venture and hoped that he would rise to the equal of his namesake at Buffalo. Mr. Scott reads only The Review, as he likes that the best.

Willie Sanders, who has for a long time been with H. G. Berning, is now with Chas. C. Connon, at 4228 Olive street. Willie got his first schooling with Mr. Connon some ten years ago.

Meeting of the Shaw Garden Trustees.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden was held January 10, 1900. The annual report of the officers of the board shows the financial affairs of the trust to be in first class condition, with an increase of $2,881.13 in the rentals, over those of 1898. A still larger revenue is anticipated during the coming year.

The application to sell certain residence property was granted the trustees by the Supreme Court, on June 30, from a tract on Flora avenue and one between Shaw and McKee. The trustees expect to realize at least $1,500,000. Additions amounting to $3,017 have been made to the library, and $4,938.50 to the herbarium. After expending $33,147.90 upon the garden, and paying for repairs, taxes, insurance, office expenses, and bequests, a surplus of $15,246.09 has been declared out of the year's receipts.

The officers of the board are R. J. Lockland, president; Henry Hitchcock, vice-president; A. D. Cunningham, secretary; professor William Trelease, director of the garden. The report of Director Trelease, in charge of the garden, shows that the collection of living plants now numbers 9,127. The record of attendance shows that 54,429 persons visited the garden on week days, 7,755 on the open Sunday in June, and 8,837 on the open Sunday in September, making a total of 71,021.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The dark weather during the past week has greatly shortened the supply of roses and prices are considerably stiffer. At date $8 per 100 is not high for good teas, and the best have brought as high as $10. Beauties are as scarce as ever. That "crop" is still "coming." It looks now as though it wouldn't arrive till along toward Easter—certainly not if the present dark weather continues.

Carnations are in good supply. The medium and extra grades go well, but the poorest move slowly. We hear of sales of Choice Cranes, Americas and Red Bradts at $6 per 100, though $4 will probably be closer to the figure on many lots. White Cloud, Mary Wood and Mrs. Bradt move well at $4. Good Joost, Triumph and Cerise Queen bring $3; Hill, Daybreak and Armazindy, $2. In mixture, good ordinary run from $1.50 to $2, while we hear of sales of the poorest at $10 per 1,000.

Carnation Meeting.

The exhibition at the carnation meeting of the Florists' Club, to be held to-morrow (Friday) in room 204 Masonic Temple (second floor), promises to be an excellent one. Word has been received from many introducers of new varieties that they will send flowers for exhibition, and the display will be very interesting.

The exhibition will be open all afternoon and evening, and the meeting for discussion will be held in the exhibition hall (instead of the regular club room) at 8 p. m.

Various Items.

Peter Reinberg has arranged to build a range of additional houses on a new location a little west of his main plant. There will be twelve houses each 265x25. In this range he will use the Garland iron gutter throughout. The glass will be 16x24, and he has placed an order with the Henion & Hubbell Co. for several boilers and 30,000 feet of 4-inch cast iron pipe.

E. C. Amling has his new ice box in position, and in style it is in harmony with the attractive surroundings.

Mr. and Mrs. Bassett leave Saturday by the Pennsylvania limited for New York.

The florists' bowling team played another league game last Monday night. The opposing team was from the Woodlawn Club, and the "posies" were planted firmly and securely in that "lawn"—upside down. Three straight games! The boys are wearing crape now, and in mercy to them we withhold names and scores.

Let Philadelphia beware: We have some men here that can handle a gun. When we can induce them to attend a convention, both they and their guns will give a good report of themselves. There was a match last week at Bowmanville, with Peter Reinberg and Billy Irvin on one side, and Henry Zender and B. F. Weber on the other. The shy and fleet winged clay pigeon was the bird employed. Reinberg and Irvin won by five birds, and Peter Reinberg hit 45 out of a possible 50, which is good enough shooting to interest Geo. Anderson and John Burton of the Quaker City, if we are not mistaken.

McKellar & Winterson have just received two fresh carloads of sphagnum moss.

J. B. Deamud has been handling quite a few orchids, and says that there is an increasing sale for cypripediums. One splendid quality of the cypripedium is that if it don't go today, its smile is just as bright the next day—or the next week.

Flint Kennicott has been home nursing a case of rheumatism.

Mr. Geo. Wittbold reports the largest season's business in his long experience.

Phil Hauswirth says Chauncey Depew is all right. During a recent visit to Washington on some fraternal society business, Phil did Chauncey the honor to call on him, and after enjoying a sample of the genial Chauncey's hospitality, he admits that he couldn't have done it better himself.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The carcass of trade has given a kick or two this past week, but not strong enough to keep the spectre of rent away from the retail dealer, or the spook of the coal bill from haunting the grower. Conditions are surely not in line. Everything is altogether too plentiful but red roses, which sell quite readily at 4 to 8 cents for shorter-legged Meteors and up to $2.50 per doz. for the kind that wear stilts, with Beauties and Liberties selling correspondingly.

The Liberty is in good reputation, enough so that several will give it a trial next year, but now no one seems to have it but Wood's men and Welch Brothers, who show a good line, together with their usual full list of first-class stock.

But carnations seem to have gone by the mark of greatest quantity, have moved up a bit in figure, and it is predicted will wholesale better next week.

Notes.

Salesman John Chapman falls on the ice and breaks an ankle to give us an item of news. As he is a loyal sympathizer with the land of the uncertain "H" in its Transvaal difficulties, perhaps South African papers better copy.

An agent for "Scott's Manual" has left a copy at the Co-Operative Market, where it may be seen by the kindness of Mr. Walsh. It is not so large a work as many expected, but size is obsolete as a measure of value, and the quality of Mr. Scott's pen is well known.

Geo. Seaverns, lately returned from the Klondike, is showing his floral friends a large number of first-class photos taken by a comrade far north of the Arctic circle. Besides being very interesting, they are of course highly instructive about that far away home of the frost king. A feature of them is that they prove the spruce tree growth of that region unsurpassed for lumber by that of any other part of the world. Tall, straight as an arrow, and from one to two and a half feet in diameter, according to Florist-miner Seaverns.

Mr. Arthur Kidder, of Kidder Bros., Lincoln, while loosening the cap from a pipe full of steam, received the discharge up his sleeve. He carries a bandage from wrist to elbow to remember the incident. B. T.

NEW YORK.

Annual Banquet.

The annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club, held in the banquet hall of the St. Denis Hotel, Eleventh street and Broadway, Wednesday evening, Jan. 17, was an event long to be remembered. The members of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists were guests of the club, and there were about ninety at table.

Among the guests were E. M. Wood, Robt. Craig, W. N. Rudd, H. B. Beatty, John Westcott, Benj. Durfee, W. K. Harris, John Burton, Edwin Lonsdale, J. F. Cowell, A. B. Cartledge, Peter Duff, Geo. A. Rackham, J. F. Sullivan, J. D. Carmody, W. W. Coles, F. R. Newbold, Wm. Bartholomae, W. J. Palmer, E. H. Cushman, Wm. Duckham, Wm. Turner.

The dinner was the best the club has ever enjoyed and the fun was immense, with an abundance of songs and music.

The toasts were as follows: E. M. Wood, "S. A. F."; J. F. Sullivan, "River and Prairie Horticulture"; W. K. Harris, "Horticulture of the Quaker City"; Robt. Craig, "American Rose Society"; Prof. Cowell, "Pan-American Horticulture"; J. D. Carmody, "Saints and Sinners"; W. N. Rudd, "Prairie City Horticulture"; John Westcott, "Horticultural Sports"; Sam'l Henshaw, "International Horticulture"; C. W. Ward, "American Carnation Society"; Benjamin Durfee, "The Future of the Florists' Business"; A. B. Cartledge, "Floriculture from a Retail Standpoint"; Wm. J. Stewart, "Horticulture on the Beantown Kopjes"; W. Duckham, "Ornamental Horticulturists"; Jos. Forsyth Johnson, "Suburban Horticulture."

Fuller details next week.

The New York Gardeners' Society.

The New York Gardeners' Society met at the Grand Central Palace on Saturday last, and decided to hereafter meet quarterly instead of monthly. The reasons for this change are that most of the local horticultural societies have been organized from this one society; it is proposed that the New York society will be more of a national character; that a show will be held every three months, and that all the surrounding clubs and organizations will be asked to take an active part at these exhibitions.

The society will hold a carnation show at its next meeting in March, possibly in connection with the American Rose Society's show at the Eden Musee. Arrangements were left in the hands of the executive committee, consisting of Messrs. Withers, Taaffe, Shore, Angus, Anderson, Scott, Harvey and Donlan. Mr. C. W. Ward has generously offered a silver cup to be competed for at the March show; particulars will be sent out with the schedule of prizes later. It is possible a convention will be held at this meeting to consider horticultural matters in general.

Wm. Anderson exhibited a vase of beautiful antirrhinums; they were grown from seed sown July 20th, first grown in pots, then planted in boxes and treated similar to chrysanthemums; they have been grown in a temperature of 50 degrees at night during the winter. Many of these spikes had forty flowers on and the strain can be said to be Mr. Anderson's own, for he has been saving the best of it for years. The society awarded them a certificate of merit. The president and secretary were asked to represent the society at the Dutchess County Horticultural Society's dinner to be given at Poughkeepsie, February 7th.

The Eastern New York Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting at the Berkeley Lyceum, this city, February 7th and 8th. The American Institute will hold a flower, fruit and vegetable show at the same time and place.

Bowling.

There was lots of enthusiasm at the bowling alleys Monday night. Mr. John H. Taylor, though suffering from the effects of his recent accident, was able to beat one or two of the experts.

President of the S. A. F., E. M. Wood, visited the alleys and enjoyed the fun. Following are the scores:

Stiebrecht	158	159	158
Burns	143	168	176
Traendly	116	152	128
Hafner	125	137	115
Lang	175	188	157
Shaw	121	114	100
Bartholomae	133	109	116
Taylor		97	119
Moody	150	150	153
Larscher	114	137	126
Donlan	121	128	194
Steffins		105	162
Stewart			119

The scores at the Flatbush alleys, January 11th, were:

E. Dailedouze	147	157	204
L. Schmutz	167	147	135
C. Woerner	144	146	125
Papa Zeller	105	84	113
A. Shaw	113	137	133
J. Donlan	135	138	130

Mr. P. Riley, of the Flatbush Club, has been very ill for some time, and everybody hopes for his speedy recovery. J. I. D.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its annual election of officers and reunion in the form of a "smoker" in the Masonic Hall, Madison, January 10th. There was quite a large gathering of members and invited friends. The annual reports showed the club to be in a very prosperous condition, it having seventy-five energetic members and $466 in bank. Wm. Duckham was elected president; C. H. Totty, vice-president; Wm. Charlton, treasurer, and C. H. Atkins, secretary. General committee: J. Jones, D. Shannon and F. Weber. It was decided to hereafter elect the officers in December instead of January.

The entertainment which followed was a most enjoyable one. President Duckham, in welcoming the visitors, stated that they had decided on having a "smoker" in preference to a set dinner, because there was more enjoyment in it, and before the affair was over everybody agreed with him. There was an abundance of good music which not alone gave pleasure in renditions of popular airs, but took the form of a band contest between a quartette of Morristown darkies and Herrington's "Florham Orchestra," in which the latter came out with flying colors. Three members of this band, Messrs. Sam McCullom, George Coombs and John Downey, deserve to be better known among the trade. Mr. McCullom has a splendid voice and sang several songs to the delight of his audience. (Mr. Herrington could not do better than have these organize a band composed entirely of florists for the S. A. F. convention.)

If John P. Cleary were in any way a Jew his recital of "Fagin's death cell soliloquy" would have been terrible, as it was he was so nearly realistic that Austie Shaw, Willie Stewart, Sam Butterfield and Billy Prosser trembled. One pleasant feature was the absence of orations. Mr. Duckham gave the few who spoke two minutes to spout. Mr. O'Mara spoke on the need of a National Horticultural Society, and hoped the horticultural show in connection with the S. A. F. convention would be the means of a confederation of all the local societies into one grand body.

One never knows what to expect when J. Austin Shaw gets up to speak. On this occasion he read his own parody on Longfellow's "Excelsior," in which he gave the writer the distinguished honor of being "Irish." After many more good things the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" ended the affair in the hall, but the visitors adjourned to the "smoker" of the last train to New York and continued the fun all the way down. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS

The Executive Committee of the Society of American Florists held its annual meeting at the Murray Hill hotel, New York, Tuesday and Wednesday this week. The program for the annual convention of the society, to be held in New York next August, was formulated so far as possible and much detail work attended to.

THE annual catalogue of probably the oldest established seed firm in America is before us. The seed business of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, was established in that city in 1802 and for nearly a century it has kept step with the remarkable expansion of American industries. Their catalogue for 1900 proves them to be still in the front rank, and it should be consulted by every one interested in seeds and gardeners' supplies.

George C. Stedman, the florist, died Dec. 17, after a five days illness with pneumonia, aged 44 years.

He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., from which place the family came here after the death of his father.

Mr. Stedman, at the age of 17 years, started in the florist's business, at first for health, and then when most of the money held in trust for the widowed mother and the children was lost by the trustee, Geo. C. Stedman manfully supported the family and faithfully and untiringly kept on at his beloved trade. He would not give up in spite of many discouragements. He had gained health and loved his work.

The funeral services took place from his late residence Dec. 19.

The business will pass from the family, as the surviving members are not in a position to care for it.

Wm. Freeman Eaton, a member of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, died very suddenly on Tuesday afternoon, January 9th, of Bright's disease, aged 35 years. Mr. Freeman was born in Canada in 1865; came to Philadelphia in 1875 and began his work as a florist with F. Lucking, at Fifth street and Fairmount avenue, where he remained for ten years. After leaving Mr. Lucking he worked two years for Wm. Wagner and then bought out the retail store of C. Bell, and launching out for himself built up a nice little business by his energy and perseverance. The Florists' Club attended the funeral to testify to the respect and esteem in which he was held. "Subject to Change Without Notice."

That is a line you see on every price-list, also in every wholesale adv. This line, so simple, still with so much meaning, and with all it is like the weather man, a future forecast, for no dealer or grower of flowers can see tomorrow.

This subject is forced on us in a strange way. Last week Mr. Grant, of The Review, and Mr. Howard, of The Florist, and Mr. Sanders, of the Exchange, came to our store, as we suppose they go to all others, and asked our view of the week's trade just past and what we thought the price would be for the week to come.

Our answer was, see our adv. Now that goes to show what we thought at the time, and said so.

But so far as our guess was, it only lasted the remaining part of the week, and we did not think at the time that the different papers did not appear to the reader till the end of the week; and unless Uncle Sam was prompt, some did not get their paper till Monday, and by Monday all had changed, for Saturday afternoon local trade got brisk and cleaned up the market and the dull weather made stock very scarce on short notice, and we, in this case, had to fall back on the opening line.

With these few remarks we want to say that this proves what we have ALWAYS CLAIMED, give the COUNTRY BUYER the CHICAGO MARKET PRICE at time of shipment. If WE can't fill your order it is not to be had.

Yours Respectfully,

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held last Saturday evening. The attendance was poor and no business of importance was transacted. A committee was appointed to secure rates for the carnation convention to be held next month in Buffalo. All those intending to go will kindly notify R. Witterstaetter, Albert Sunderbruch, or F. W. Ball. Out-of-town florists who wish to join our party can obtain full particulars by addressing any member of the above committee.

Among the exhibition of cut flowers during the afternoon and evening was a special display of violets, $20 in prizes being offered for this modest flower. From the number of blooms on exhibition, one would hardly think that violets were so scarce in this market. Corbett & Wilson took first prize with a fine display of several varieties. Crabb & Hunter, of Grand Rapids, were awarded second prize, and J. R. Goldman, of Middletown, O., came in third.

George & Allan took everything in sight on roses, getting first on Maids, Brides, Meteors, and Perles; they also had a fine display of carnations and valley.

The carnations attracted their usual share of attention and admiration. Quite a number of the craft made a display for exhibition only, as prizes were offered for only commercial varieties. W. K. Partridge, of Lockland, was awarded first, on Jubilee and Flora Hill. A. Sunderbruch's Sons took first on Melba and Bradt. Crabb & Hunter's new pink carnation Irene scored 85 points and received a certificate of the society; it is a beautiful flower and will, no doubt, find a place among the many new pinks now on the market. Witterstaetter's new white, Elinore, scored 85 2-3 points, and also received a certificate; this is a beautiful carnation, and will be heard from later. Another good white, shown as 550A, Estella and Enquirer, were among Dick's best.

Prominent among W. K. Partridge's display was a vase of each, America and G. H. Crane. Both were well done, but, as with most growers in this vicinity, America showed up best of the two carnations. Wm. Murphy had a creditable display of carnations, all standard varieties. The exhibition was a howling success, with but one exception—Judge Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, was not present. We fear that his dignity has been trampled upon, for he has resolved to comply with the scriptural injunction and judge not.

BIG RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. Blair, so well known as a successful florist here, has leased her greenhouses to H. M. Larsen, a young gentleman formerly in her employ, who will continue the business.

NEW LIGHT PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Peerless in its class. The coming light pink. As a commercial variety it will score its greatest triumph. As an exhibition variety it will take care of itself. Its reputation is already made. We recommend it to you as being first-class in every way. It has won highest honors wherever exhibited. In a word it is the light pink par excellence. Better than Scott in its palmiest days. There will be no attempt to over-propagate it. First come, first served. Send for complete description.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants at 75c per 100; $1.00 per 1000.

INDIANAPOLIS.

State Florists' Association.

The State Florists' Association, at their annual meeting held here at the state house on January 9, decided on having a show in November. I say show, but what kind will be decided upon later, as it was decided not to give it that old name "chrysanthemum show" again, that being a chestnut. There has been appointed an attraction committee, and if they find a suitable attraction that will attract it will be given a suitable name and our flowers will be a side issue. This thing of holding a chrysanthemum show is a thing of the past.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

J. A. E. Haugh, Anderson, Ind., president; W. Langstaff, Indianapolis, first vice-president; W. W. Coles, Kokomo, second vice-president; R. McKeand, Indianapolis, secretary; J. T. Huntington, Indianapolis, treasurer.

Executive committee: John Bertermann, H. Rieman, J. T. Huntington, W. W. Coles, Fred Dorner.

Premium committee: J. Hartje, J. Bertermann, H. Rieman, H. Junge.

Attraction committee: H. Junge, J. Heidenreich, A. Nelson.

In connection with the meeting there was a small show and the following awards were made: Bertermann Floral Co., honorable mention for general plant display. H. W. Rieman, same for plants and a vase of mixed carnations. Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, for seedling carnation Avondale, a very good pink, and White Cloud. J. W. Bernard, Marion, Ind., for carnations, Triumph and Crane. Smith-Young Co., for violets.

Pres. E. G. Hill made a neat address, in which he cautioned all of the florists to be up to date and not stick to certain things simply because our great-grandfathers used to grow them.

We are sorry to hear that our brother, Mr. Stuart of Anderson, is ill, and hope for an early recovery.

At the close of the meeting Mr. Hill invited the Indianapolis florists to visit his place on Saturday, February 10. A communication was also read from the Cincinnati Florists' Club inviting us to visit them. If proper arrangements can be made, we shall visit both places on February 10. After the meeting we retired, as usual, to a bowling alley and rolled a few games. I am sorry I cannot send the scores, but the losing side protested, their scores not being up to the average. FRED.

SUMMIT, N. J.

The greenhouses conducted here for many years by W. H. De Forest were almost totally destroyed by fire the night of January 9th. The establishment was a large one, the houses covering several acres. On the night of the fire many of the hydrants in the neighborhood were frozen and this seriously hindered effective work by the firemen.

It is believed that the fire was of incendiary origin, as it started in a place remote from where fires were kept. It is stated that in all probability the houses will not be rebuilt.

Roses were largely grown, and in addition there was a large collection of ferns and palms.

The loss on buildings is estimated at $50,000, with insurance of $20,000, and on plants at $75,000, with no insurance.

DENVER, COLO.

Following are the scores rolled up by the Denver Florists' Bowling Club, January 9:

Pot Grown LILACS for FORCING

WE can still supply a fine lot of pot grown Lilacs, bushy, well budded dwarf plants.
This is always good stock for the retailer to handle, either as cut blooms or to sell as pot plants. A night temperature of 60 to 70 degrees will develop their flowers in three weeks' time and a continual supply of fine flowers can be had from now until Easter at but small expense and labor.

The varieties we offer are:

CHARLES X. Red. $6.00 per dozen;
$45.00 per 100.

MARIE LEGRAYE. White. $6.00 per dozen; $45.00 per 100.

Mme. LEMOINE. Double White. $6.00 per dozen; $45.00 per 100.

AZALEA MOLLIS.

This hardy Azalea is used extensively in all European cities for early forcing; they are great favorites on account of their varied and brilliant coloring.

We offer a fine lot of bushy plants, 12 to 15 inches high, well covered with buds, at $6.00 per dozen.

ACACIA ARMATA.

A pretty Spring flowering variety which produces its flowers in globular heads from the axils of the foliage in such a manner as to completely envelope the plant in a pleasing light yellow; an excellent plant for Easter forcing, succeeding under the same culture as the Azalea.

A nice lot of bushy plants; 12 to 15 inches high; 5-inch pots, 50 cents each; $5.00 per dozen.

The Lilacs and Azalea Mollis can be shipped by freight without injury in any kind of weather.

Carnations.

If you have been many years in the flower business (we mean, of course, if you were in it when flowers were poor and scarce), perhaps there's nothing connected with it that interests you more than the rapid advancement of the divine flower.

The cultivation of the carnation as a commercial cut flower in America can only be traced back to thirty-six years ago. The first variety was sent out by Wilson in 1863; it was named "Astoria," and was a small yellow flower with red stripes; to compare that wee, insignificant flower to the Dailedouze carnation "666" would be like comparing the United States of today to what they were in '63. And yet the men who struggled to introduce and advance carnation culture in those early days deserve more credit than is given them; and mind you, although we are undoubtedly now getting finer flowers than ever, there are times in the retail store even now when we yearn for one or two of the old favorites of long years ago.

It is only our province here to review the carnation from a retail point of view. From 1863 to 1900 there have been nearly five hundred named varieties of carnations introduced to the American market, and out of that vast army scarcely fifty kinds can be found in cultivation throughout this continent at the present time. To study the history of this beautiful race of flowers is to acquaint oneself with the life—its joys and sorrows—of American floriculture. From the time when Zeller imported the first batch of seedlings from France, all along the road there have been carnations that have almost rivaled the rose in beauty and in popularity. The La Purite of '66, the President Degraw of '67, the Chas. Sumner and Louis Lenoirs of '68—yes, certainly, we will admit, were not sold over marble counters, because the one or two shabby little florists' stores were only just open then; but they brought far higher prices in comparison than the carnations you sell now, and they were more appreciated.

Let's see; it required few flowers in those days to make a wreath or basket. Seldom, if ever, were designs or bouquets made exclusively of them, and there was no way to get the flowers but to go to the growers for them. (Ask any of the few grey heads in the business about their midnight tramps into the country thirty years ago in search of flowers. They'll astonish you.) It was next to impossible to induce the grower of those days to pick carnations with a stem. There was no disbudding; you had to be satisfied with your flowers picked off at the calyx, and the price varied from 5 to 10 cents each. Foreign stems, such as privet and wire, had to be put on them when used in baskets or bouquets. Even under all these disadvantages they constituted no small portion of the flower trade, and their beauty and fragrance lent many charms to the floral art of that period.

You will find that in every decade since then there has been a new race of carnations springing into existence, and with them higher development and greater refinement in the art of arrangement. In the early '70s carnations were picked, but only in special cases, with stems ranging from 6 to 10 inches in length; then it was that these flowers became popular in exclusive designs—corsage and ball bouquets or carnations were items of the highest fashion. In 1875 that grand old scarlet Lady Emma gave us color we could only get from geraniums, or poinsettias; the same year gave us the sweet white La Purite; '76 sent us the old Crimson King, the best of its color up to that time. Hinsdale, perhaps the sweetest and in many other ways the best carnation up to 1890, appeared in the same year. In '78 came the beautiful old yellow Buttercup, and in '79 Hinze's White.

Now, the last named six varieties of this glorious race of flowers were of the utmost importance to the ensuing histories of both carnation culture and decorative art. It may be truly said they were not the ideals, but they represented the perfection of cultivation at that time, and they not only furnished the artist with material hitherto unobtainable, but they gave an immeasurable impetus to fashion and our trade and brought wealth to grower and retailer alike. In those days, if Jacqueminot roses were out of season or not to be had, as was mostly the case, and it was impossible to get any crimson rose, Crimson King carnation was nearly always a welcome substitute. Very set and formal floral designs were all the style then and this particular color and flower was very much in demand about that time.

Also, there were a few artists in the trade whose works have never yet been excelled; these men were continually demanding finer grades of stock and the price was seldom considered; the growers in many instances were offered high premiums to produce finer flowers. The finer grade of trade became more exacting; people became dissatisfied with designs containing immortelles and other dried stuff. Art at this period was lifted up to a higher standard. Wreaths were made more graceful and the choicer ones were made entirely of white carnations; loose bunches and baskets of them were often seen. Buttercup carnation was one of the choicest flowers a man could put in his window then, and many a good trick is remembered and laughed over about how one would try to get them away from the other. Hinsdale was the first pink carnation that came to the market in great quantity, and for many years it was the best of all for table decorations and bouquets. We like to remember this variety; how lovely it could be arranged with its plentiful buds and foliage. Yes, most of the millionaires' tables of those days were decorated with a centerpiece of Catherine Mermets or Bon Silene roses, and coasters of Hinsdale carnations, and they made a better effect than many of the things we see today.

But few varieties introduced in the '80s amounted to anything. Anna Webb scarcely succeeded in replacing Crimson King; Portia was good, but there was Lady Emma; Garfield became a favorite with some; Grace flowers have gradually risen to such a state of perfect idealism as to place them in a different class altogether. American hybridizers and growers have simply surpassed—yes, far exceeded—the rest of the world's expectations or dreams concerning this flower. A perusal of some of the leading catalogues issued in Europe at the present time will show you that the old, old varieties are still listed, and a comparison of their methods and products with ours would be to look down from the Pike's Peak of our advanced science to their tortoiseshell of self-satisfaction below.

There are some who believe that if many of the discarded carnations were properly introduced and cared for, far better results would have been obtained from them. Then again, facts seem to prove that varieties deteriorate. This seems to be one of nature's makes the carnation so popular today is not quality of flower alone, but rather the extensive variety of them; this makes them adaptable for all purposes, and though one kind or color may pay better than the other, it is absolutely necessary to the future of this flower that there shall always be many tones and colors to choose from. Once let it become like the rose and the same result will surely follow. Never were there so many new carnations as there are offered this year, and it looks as if there will be even more in the first of the next century. These claimants to fame are all beautiful, and it is with much regret we think that many of them must meet the fate of others that have gone before.

There are many ways to look at the subject before us. The introducers of new varieties seem to have one ambition nowadays: get a certificate and sell rooted cuttings. That is, of course, commendable. Some growers aim to produce top grade flowers only; that is also good; but we should remember that there always was and always will be a place for average good flowers, which in these ultra high fed days we are apt to sneer at. There are many sorts of highly reputed gems offered now which would be useless only that they produce the largest flowers; it requires special houses, special treatment in general, to produce the ideal carnation of today in a remunerative way; you cannot afford to sell them cheaply, and oh! my friends, there are millions we wish to sell to who cannot afford to pay the price. Let them do without, some will say; but that is a selfish and ignorant view to take. When we have calculated on how much we can get for our stock, we should look down the other side and figure out how cheaply can we produce them without hiring slaves or eating dry bread. We believe there is and will always be room for the two classes of carnations—the fair sized and free flowering, and the extra fine ones.

You must know that there has been many a good thing that never was awarded any recognition until it was compulsory, and there are numerous carnations today to our knowledge which would be ignored by society judges, and yet from a retail standpoint they are far superior to those laden with awards. You, yourself, are capable of being the best judge; if results are satisfactory, that is all you need; don't discard a good thing because it fails to be approved of by another, for variety is really the spice of life in this case. One of the objects of the American Carnation Society reads, "to increase its use as a decorative flower." It would appear that their idea of doing this is to produce fine flowers, for out of the large amount of money offered as prizes by that society not a dollar—no, not even a paltry certificate—has ever been offered to encourage the use of carnations as a decorative flower. And what has made that flower so popular?

Anton Then's display at the Chicago Club Meeting.

Wilder, introduced in 1881, got to be the most popular carnation until the advent of Wm. Scott. Grace Wilder at one time was all the rage; it was looked upon as a marvel in color. This one flower alone succeeded in revolutionizing the color tones in decorations; it created the fad of pink luncheons and teas; dresses were specially imported from Paris to match its beautiful flush; debutantes and reigning belles demanded it for bouquets at receptions; houses of it were specially grown to order. We remember the Patriarchs' balls at old Delmonico's. We used to have wire frames made in the shape of curtains on the windows; these frames were mossed very lightly, then covered with smilax; over that short carnation foliage, and then the whole was made a mass of Grace Wilder carnations. Often as many as ten thousand of these flowers were thus used for one of these memorable events. It seems such a short time ago, and yet one of our dear friends keeps telling us we have two grey hairs.

Well, most of those in the business today are familiar with the carnations of the past decade. Since 1890 these laws applicable and in force through every sphere of creation. Plant life is but a parallel of human life and we must sooner or later recognize it as such. Intelligent growers will not continue to grow from their own stock year after year, until exhausted vitality induces them to condemn the victim and not their shortsightedness.

Lizzie McGowan, sent out in '90, was the largest carnation of that time. The large boutonniere originated with this variety and it was in many other ways responsible for the demand for larger flowers. All will agree that there has been more money made out of Wm. Scott, introduced in '93, than of any other variety, and though it is fast losing quality, we fear it will be some time yet before one will appear to equal it in every way.

A great deal of the credit for the advancement in excellence and popularity of the carnation must be given to the American Carnation Society; their success goes to prove that all special lines of commercial flowers need a protecting and encouraging hand to advance them. The rose has fallen into disfavor because growers can only offer a few varieties. What Yes, 'tis true there is a great carnation show and meeting held every year; fine blooms are exhibited in jars, but art is not even invited there. How very narrow are the real aims and workings of some associations. Your flowers may be fine, but let a novice take them into the homes of the rich and put them on the table and they are not satisfactory; the man who by his ability arranges your flowers and extracts a good price for them is deserving of some recognition as well as you, Mr. Grower; he is the pilot of your boat.

The carnations of 1900 are magnificent in size of bloom and length of stem; they leave little to be desired; but no flower is natural, no flower is perfect, stripped of its foliage. We certainly cannot compare these grand flowers of today to those of thirty years ago, but those comparably poor little blooms when accompanied with their own leaves were often capable of producing finer artistic effects than the loud, naked hussies of the present. We venture to assert that out of the hundreds of thousands of carnations coming into the markets daily, not a bud nor a sprig of foliage can be found. Now, every artist knows the value of these, and the day is coming when they will be demanded.

Carnations are now being used in every form of decoration and the possibilities are unlimited. They are rivaling the rose in every quarter. Wreaths of white or delicate colored carnations can be made up to equal any flower, but it is wrong to imagine that smilax, asparagus or ferns are son, Gold Nugget for yellow, Mrs. Bradt for striped. We cannot yet do without Scott, and Flora Hill has paid many better than any other white. We find that carnations, like many other flowers, are subject to climatic influences, and some kinds do better than others in certain localities. We must leave them now for another time.

Carnation Exhibition.

The Florists' Club's exhibition of carnations last Friday was a most excellent one and brought out a large attendance, the hall being crowded all Cresco, Ia.; W. T. Symonds, Decorah, Ia.; J. J. Van Leuwen, Detroit, Mich.; J. M. Smeley, Aurora, Ill., and many others from nearby points.

Among the new carnations displayed there was a remarkable lot from R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O., one of which, Enquirer, a splendid pink, scored 100 points by the scale of the American Carnation Society, the judges being Messrs. E. Buettner, A. McAdams, and F. F. Benthey. It certainly is a magnificent flower and worthy of all praise. The whole set was exceedingly good. Estelle, a scarlet, scoring 97 points; Opal, shell pink, 93 points; Elinora, white, 93 points; Rosamond, pink, 91 points.

the proper embellishments to use. We have often been asked for opinions of the kinds growing today. Of course, everybody will have the great Lawson—that's a certainty. White Cloud is the finest white, Crane the grandest scarlet, Mrs. James Dean the most beautiful light pink, Joost a mighty good dark pink, Maceo the best crimson, Gold Nugget for yellow, Mrs. Bradt for striped. We cannot yet do without Scott, and Flora Hill has paid many better than any other white. We find that carnations, like many other flowers, are subject to climatic influences, and some kinds do better than others in certain localities. We must leave them now for another time.

Mr. Witterstaetter has a remarkably fine set of new sorts that will surely be heard from later. Each variety received the club's certificate.

E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., also showed some striking new ones, Mary Hill, pink, scoring 95 points; Indiana, red, scoring 90 points; Ethel Crocker, pink, scoring 88 points; J. Whitcomb Riley, white variegated, scoring 86 points; and California Gold, yellow streaked red, scoring 85 points. Each was awarded the club's certificate of merit.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., displayed a large collection of seedlings. One of these, No. 55, pink, scored 85 points and won a certificate. They also won a certificate with Weber's Genevieve Lord, pink, which also scored 85 points. Of their other seedlings, No. 48, white, scored 80 points; No. 64, pink, 77 points; Mrs. J. J. Mitchell, red, 80 points; Mrs. Potter Palmer, red, 60 points; Chicot, white, 80 points; No. 32, red, 60 points; No. 99, pink, 80 points; No. 106, red, 80 points.

There was a great variety of seedlings from F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., but they seemed to have traveled poorly, which made it difficult to judge them fairly. Special mention was given the variety Morning Glory, and honorable mention to the collection which in the opinion of the judges contained many good varieties which would be heard from later. One flower was a pleasing shade of pure yellow, and there were several new shades of color. It was a very interesting lot.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., received honorable mention for Genevieve Lord, and certificates for two fine seedlings, No. 30, pink, scoring 88 points, and No. 110, white, scoring 87 points.

A handsome vase of the new pink carnation Irene, from Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., was a striking feature. The variety scored 92 points and received the club's certificate.

Several pink sports from Armazindy were shown, two large vases of their sport, displayed by Wietor Bros., Chicago, attracting special attention. The flower scored 90 points and received the club's certificate.

The sport shown by Mr. Becker, Chicago, was apparently identical with the above, and scored the same, as did also another sport shown by the gardener of the Guardian Angel's Orphan's Home, Chicago. Both received certificates.

Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind., displayed Avondale, pink, which scored 90 also and was certificated.

Olympia, a white variegated of large size, sent by J. N. May, Summit, N. J., scored 85 points and received a certificate.

In standard sorts, the finest display was made by Anton Then, city, who showed some superb specimens of White Cloud, Bratt, Daybreak, Jubilee, Triumph, Scott, Tidal Wave, McGowan, Evelina, Argyle, Flora Hill, and Red Bratt. He received honorable mention for this display, also for a collection of finely bloomed Baby primroses and Primula obconica.

A very prominent feature was the display of roses and carnations from J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia., containing 16 vases. A vase of superb Beauties were better than a 250 bowling score, and the Brides, Maids, Meteors, and Golden Gates were all extra good. He also displayed standard varieties of carnations and was given honorable mention for his display.

The Omaha Florists' Club sent a vase of seedling carnations which received honorable mention, which honor was also accorded to Miller & Sons, Bracondale, Toronto, Ont., for their new carnation Lady Minto, white variegated, and Lady Van Horne, dark pink; to J. B. Goetz, Saginaw, Mich., for red seedling; to Lake Geneva Floral Co., Lake Geneva, Wis., for Catbird, an improved Tidal Wave; to Brown & Canfield, Springfield, Ill., for Albertini; to H. D. Rohrer, Lancaster, Pa., for Albertini, New York, and Lily Dean; to J. C. Murray, Peoria, Ill., for display of standard varieties of carnations and Princess of Wales violets; to Philip Hellig, Franklin, Pa., for six seedling carnations; to Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, for seedling No. 1, white, which scored 80 points; to Bohemian Cemetery Co., for red seedling; to Logan Avenue Greenhouses, Danville, Ill., for white sport from Rose Queen; to E. T. Graves, Richmond, Ind., for vase of fine White Cloud; to Ernst Asmus, West Hoboken, N. J., for vase of new crimson rose Liberty; to H. N. Bruns, Chicago, for display of fine lily of the valley; to A. McAdams, city, for Cattleyas, both cut and on the plant; to Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., for double and single violets; to John Felke, Wilmette, Ill., for four vases of carnations and a bunch of sweet peas; to Schramm Bros., Arlington Heights, Ill., for double violets; to J. C. Vaughan, city, for vase of seedlings.

Club Meeting.

At the club meeting in the evening, which was held in the exhibition hall, there was a large attendance. The report of the judges was accepted and ordered spread on the records.

President Hartshorne called for comments on the display and on the progress shown in the carnation since the last exhibition.

Mr. J. G. Hancock noted a very great improvement over former displays, and expressed much gratification at the progress made. Mr. J. S. Wilson said he thought a great deal of Enquirer, and was pleased to note that his opinion was indorsed by that of the judges. He had seen Mr. Witterstaetter's new varieties growing and found that his notes made as to Estelle were that it was a dwarf grower, stems about 18 inches long, Portia color, early, free, and clean. He believed it would prove a fine commercial sort.

Mr. Geo. F. Crabb was pleased to note the steady advance in the value of the novelties. He was sure the new sorts were needed to take the places of old ones that seemed to be wearing out.

Mr. E. G. Hill missed his old friend Aug. Dresel, who crossed swords with him at a previous carnation meeting. He congratulated the club on the grand display which he believed was the best ever seen with the exception of those at the annual meetings of the American Carnation Society. He was pleased to note the uniform excellence of the blooms on exhibition. He urged all to attend the coming meeting of the American Carnation Society at Buffalo next month.

Mr. F. F. Benthey spoke of the old time carnation and said that the old sorts must go in response to the steadily increasing demand for high grade blooms.

Mr. F. Dorner, Jr., noted a great difference in the carnations grown around Chicago now as compared with those seen here only a few years ago. He predicted that Scott has seen its day, and that there was a bright future for such sorts as Mary Hill, Ethel Crocker, The Marquis, Genevieve Lord, Enquirer, Estelle, Elinora, and others. He said that growers of new varieties can now more easily determine whether a seedling has the qualities necessary to make it a useful commercial sort, as this was foreshadowed by the habit of growth as well as freedom of bloom.

Mr. Anton Then regretted that more Chicago growers had not brought some of their flowers to the exhibition. He preached a pointed sermon on the importance of every one doing his part for the general good.

Mr. Edgar Sanders was proud that the club had got together such a fine display and that it had drawn out such a large gathering of the craft. He told of the very early days when carnations were grown in pots for cut flowers and when a dozen blooms was considered a good sized cut.

Mr. W. S. Heffron, speaking for the wholesalers, found that blooms of the new varieties sold better the second year than the first and attributed it to the fact that the growers then understood the care of the variety better. He had noted a great difference in the keeping qualities of the blooms. Some went quickly to sleep and others were even better the second day. He thought it was a matter worthy of study. He felt it would be a mistake to grow all fancy sorts, as there would always be a call for commons, which could be more cheaply produced and offered at lower rates than the fancy sorts.

President Hartshorne being called for, said he would not care to grow the common sorts for the market today, as there was no money in it. And as to productiveness, he could get twice as many flowers from G. H. Crane as from the old Garfield.

Mr. Luke Collins, foreman for Wietor Bros., said Armazindy and its pink sport had produced as many flowers as any old sort, not excepting Scott.

Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., said the fancy grades of flowers would always bring a price proportionately higher than others, and that the demand for the best grades was continually expanding. This was also the opinion of Mr. J. B. Deamud.

Mr. P. J. Hauswirth, speaking for the retailers, said the people were now willing to pay an adequate price for really high-grade blooms, and this was indorsed by Mr. I. C. Silliman, and Mr. E. Enders.

Mr. Geo. Collins, foreman for Peter Reinberg, and Mr. N. H. Gano also took part in the discussion.

The thanks of the club were extended to the exhibitors by a unanimous vote and the meeting adjourned.

The Market.

Roses are even scarcer than last week and prices are very firmly maintained. Carnations are in good supply and all tastes and purses can be suited. In these there is no change in figures from last week. Harrisii is more frequently seen in the market and the blooms are selling well at good figures. Other bulbous stuff moves very slowly.

Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says it was a Christmas on Monday and a Fourth of July on Tuesday, the slow trade of the last named day being due to the exceedingly short supply of roses.

E. H. Hunt is receiving the first lilac of the season.

Last Saturday was the fifteenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kreitling and in the evening they received the congratulations of their friends at a dancing party in Kindergarten Hall. The program was interspersed with recitations by Prof. Carnes and his daughter and refreshments were served. A large bunch of the new pink carnation, Irene, decorated the table. Quite a large number was present and all enjoyed themselves heartily. A feature of the refreshments was a little blind pig that Walter had prepared all by himself. It was done to a turn.

There were several presidents of singing societies present, but alas! apropos of a superabundance of talent wouldn't it be well to make it a day and night affair?

Most of the local horticultural societies were represented by their presidents, but none spoke; it was an affair of big guns and blank cartridges.

The improvised press table was O. K., but the seats were duly paid for. If the club can afford to invite as many as it did, the courtesy might also be extended to the press. Some very fine flowers were arranged on the table by W. I. Brower. They were donated by the following: W. A. Manda, collection of rare cypripediums; H. A. Siebrecht, vase of orchids and anthuriums; J. G. Esler, seedling carnation; David Gindra, bignonias; Lager & Hurrell, vases of cattleyas, labiata, Tranae and Choensis; Dailedouze Bros., bunches of their new carnations, "666" and James Whitcomb Riley; W. H. Siebrecht, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. There was quite a display of mignonette, Rudolph Asmus, Robert McMillan, J. N. May and C. H. Allen each sending samples of their special strains. J. N. May also sent a batch of his new carnation Olympia; Ernst Asmus, some splendid Liberty roses; A. Herrington, vases of Cattleya Trianae and Cypripedium nitens; C. W. Ward, some of his beautiful white lilac; A. Schultheis, azaleas and ericas; J. H. Taylor, Scott carnations; W. Sheridan and John Young, smilax; H. Bunyard, galax and leucothoe. The decorations were confined to the table.

Trade Conditions.

What constitutes the horticultural business of New York is so varied and extensive that it would require a journal of itself to depict. Bulb men and seedsmen tell us prospects are glowing; nurserymen seldom had a better season; growers of good cut flowers are satisfied with returns; plantmen are exultant. Wholesale cut flower dealers are mostly always in hot water; one day it is bad, another good, but the average is better than last year. Retailers, though given to grumbling, too, are nevertheless happy with the prospects. Horticultural builders are all busy; supply men are pleased. Yes, it may be up and down, one day with the other, with each line of business, but, take it all in all, there's a prosperous appearance on every side, and—well, yes, that's true; some folks must growl to live.

Visitors.

This city has been honored by many distinguished visitors during the past week, and they, in a sensible way, organized themselves into parties to see the sights. We venture to say there isn't much of any account around N. Y. C. that they haven't seen and sized up. The new carnations and roses received special attention as a matter of business, of course.

The Coming Convention.

The several committees appointed to handle convention matters met in the club's rooms on Monday night, January 22. Nothing beyond organization and preliminary work was considered, but the assemblage was far larger and more business-like than is usually seen at club meetings. It would seem as if the boys of New York are determined to eclipse anything ever attempted in connection with an S. A. F. convention before, and there is no excuse for failure.

The committee on horticultural exhibit (N. Butterbach, Oceanic, N. J., chairman; Jos. Manda, South Orange, N. J., secretary) will meet at the Grand Central Palace at 1 p. m. Monday, January 29. The committee on sports have called a meeting of the captains of all the florists' bowling clubs in and adjacent to the city to arrange for a tournament in order that more enthusiasm may be infused into the August storage battery. This meeting will be held at 33 West Twenty-eighth street at 6 p. m. Monday, January 29. Every committee has started out to work in like manner, and they deserve all the encouragement you can give them. Manager John P. Cleary is already being questioned as to spaces, etc., and hopes to be shortly able to supply diagrams and all particulars.

So far there has been no ladies' committee appointed; perhaps it is intended that all the old bachelors, with President O'Mara as chairman, will attend to the lady visitors. If so, then the lady florists of New York, who have never yet been given a chance to display their ability, should be organized, at least as a guard to the numerous bald heads who are sure to attend the president's reception.

With seven days of cloudy and rainy weather, business has been fairly good. Roses of all kinds are pale in color and weak in the stem. Carnations seem to be a glut everywhere; here and there cards can be seen 15 and 25 cents per dozen. Harrisii are now coming in, but the percentage of diseased ones runs greater than in former years. The opinion of most of the growers is that after this season they will grow only longiflorum.

Theodore Dietrich, who makes a specialty of growing violets, has a new house 150 by 25, planted with Lady Hume Campbell and Faulkner, which would do a person good to see. This is the most successful season he has ever had. His entire crop for several years has been bought by J. H. Small & Son at a fine figure.

The prices for the past week have been as follows: Kaiserins, Brides, Meteors and Maids, 6 to 8 cents; Perles and Golden Gates, 6 to 10 cents; La France, extra, 10 to 15 cents; carnations, 1 to 1½ cents; valley, 4 to 6 cents; Romans, your own price; narcissus, 1½ to 3 cents; tulips, 3 cents; violets, 50 to 75 cents; mignonette, 2 to 4 cents; adiantum, 1 cent; asparagus, 50 cents and very scarce; smilax, 12½ to 20 cents. BALTIMORE.

The Florists' Exchange of this city, the one clearing or commission house here facilitating sales of cut flowers by growers to retail dealers, held its annual meeting on the 8th. The report of its operations for the business year showed an aggregate of about $30,000—a wholesome growth for the year. The house, which was a very modest venture at the start, has made steady and encouraging advances.

Begun without intent to serve as a money-maker, it has proved an efficient agency for distribution of the products of the flower growers of this vicinity, and includes among its regular patrons about forty producers and practically all the retailers of this city, besides others at distant points. It is a noteworthy fact that in this city of over half a million population, and where nearly four hundred firms or individuals do a retail business, there is no other wholesale florist or commission house.

The success of this institution is largely due to its manager, Mr. Alexander Scott, who combines correct business principles, suavity of manner and an inflexible integrity which is known and recognized by all men. He is a brother of your well known contributor, William Scott, and the physical resemblance between them is marked.

Apropos of the distinguished Bufalonian, it may be in place to record that the ire evoked in Baltimore a year or less ago by his critical, not to say caustic, comments in the Review on trade conditions in this city, all disappeared as the dew before the rising sun when his genial and charming personality was projected into our circle at the annual dinner during the chrysanthemum show, and that he left the Monumental City not only forgiven for past sins, but beloved for his very faults—if he has any.

In the trade about this center the White Maman Cochet rose has made a mark for itself and is being largely grown—so largely, indeed, that it has in a great measure superseded the Kaiserin grown under glass for summer use. Like its pink type, it seems to revel in hot weather, has a fine form, abundant substance, and stands up much better in making up than roses grown in the house.

A curious incident is related of the discovery of this sport from the pink Cochet by Mr. John Cook, of this city, which is deserving of being put on record. Visiting one of his houses where he had on a bench about four hundred Maman Cochets in 4-inch pots, Mr. Cook saw from the head of the path that amongst them was a white flower. His mental suggestion was that a Kaiserin had gotten into the batch by some mistake; but shortly afterwards he saw that it was a sport. From the shoot which gave the white flower he secured four cuttings, and of these the upper two gave white flowers and the lower two pink ones.

Of Mr. Cook it may be said that, whilst he cannot be classed any longer among the young men, he is yet alert, active and enterprising, and no member of the trade keeps more fully up to the requirements of the day, or has any more thorough respect for his fellow men of all professions. His work of producing new varieties of roses goes on unremittingly, and, indeed, is followed more almost by habit, or for recreation, than as a matter of business; but doubtless he finds ample commercial rewards when he produces such sorts as his seedling roses Souvenir de Wootton, Mrs. Robert Garrett and Baltimore. He is now giving attention to carnations, and for many years has been hybridizing fruits of several families.

Mr. Cook worked first in this city for the late Robert Halliday, whose grandsons are still in the front rank of florists of this city, and later was gardener for J. Howard McHenry, one of the amateurs of an era when the highest skill was demanded in his service and who appreciated the products of the gardener's genius and toil. Entering business for himself, Mr. Cook has gained steadily in every way—in reputation, in material prosperity and in the esteem of the community. He is one of the few men in this vicinity who keeps thoroughly in touch with gardening in Europe, receiving all the horticultural periodicals of the Continent and keeping standing orders with the rosarians of Germany and France for all the new sorts that are sent out. His glass houses exceed in extent, we believe, any commercial place near Baltimore.

Messrs. William and Charles E. Feast, members of the well known florists' firm here, have withdrawn from membership in the Gardeners' Club of this city, much to the regret of the members thereof.

An unusual attendance of members was in evidence at the meeting of the Gardeners' Club January 22. Some superb carnations were on the exhibition table, including Halliday Bros.' Matthew Richmond, the sport from Tidal Wave, with deep color, fine stems and peerless form; a rich shining pink seedling, a cross of Scott and Day-break, and another, a white, of Silver Spray blood, from Erdman Bros., and an assortment of Charles M. Wagner's white, pink and red, all good.

It was determined by the club to hold a carnation show on February 26 from 2 to 10 p. m. Prizes and certificates will be offered and producers of the newer sorts will be given an opportunity to display them.

The discussion of topics propounded through the question box was more than usually interesting. The figure at which it is profitable to grow carnations was referred for a detailed answer to Messrs. Peter C. Erdman and Isaac H. Moss, who will report at the next meeting. The relative advantages of steam and hot water heating for a plant of 17,000 square feet of glass was luminously discussed by Messrs. Moss, Richard Vincent and Wm. Paul Binder, and a number of other points pertaining to greenhouse construction received ventilation from members of experience. The meetings of the club on the second and fourth Mondays of each month are growing in attraction, interest and profit.

The Park Board of this city has received bids from growers for supplying 200,000 bedding plants for the public squares, but so far the award has not been publicly announced. RIX.

ALONG THE HUDSON.

Sing Sing, to most people, is but a place to be abhorred—a penal colony, as it were; certainly a state prison is located there, but 'tis down in a hole along the river, and despised, along with its location and surroundings. The town, which is located up on a high hill, is a very thriving and popular one; it contains much of historic interest, and, withal, some of the most beautiful bits of scenery to be found in any hilly country.

There are several commercial florists and nurserymen located here, who generally can sell all they can grow at retail. Geo. Classman is one of the old time florists. His place is alongside the cemetery, which, by the way, is one of the most picturesque in the country, and George does quite a business in the way of landscape work, in addition to his cut flower trade. Close by is C. F. Pilat's place, where roses, carnations, and a general stock is grown. Mr. Pilat has opened a store in Spring street (this is the only florists' store in town), and does quite a good retail business. J. Bradshaw has the most extensive range of glass here. He grows roses, mostly for the New York market, and had a reputation for good stock many years ago.

There's but one small greenhouse, (and it's alongside the death chamber) down at the prison; out of the 1,400 prisoners there, I was told not one was a professional gardener, but no plants were ever more loved or tenderly cared for than the plants and flowers in that wee house—ah, what flowers have inspired fonder thoughts? Some day there will be a flower show held within these gloomy walls, and never will one be remembered more.

Scarborough is just a mile or two below. There is neither village nor town here; 'tis a pretty place, dotted with fine homesteads, and poor ones, too, but Scarborough is famous floriculturally, and P. M. and F. R. Pierson are responsible. Here, of course, as many of you know, there is one of the finest ranges of rose houses in the country, and I am told it will soon be enlarged. Something like 25,000 American Beauties are growing luxuriantly with all that study can give them. Mr. Paul Pierson, who manages this place, has been supplying the New York market with much of its finest stock of Beauties this winter, and they have been so satisfactory he says he will grow nothing else. We saw the best house of Asparagus Sprengeri here we've seen so far.

And up on the hill, surrounded by a fine collection of nursery stock, there is another range of plant houses, chiefly devoted to the extensive catalogue trade of the F. R. Pierson Co. John Whyte presides over these houses and his carnation house is a picture. Several new chrysanthemums, including Col. D. Appleton, are being propagated by the Whyte system of machinery, and spring trade is turning in like a flood.

Tarrytown needs no introduction, for it's the home of the Standard Oil kings, yes, and bright minds in horticulture. Try in your travels to visit Mr. Rockefeller's gardens. Wm. Turner will show you something. No man in these parts will dispute his title to expert on indoor fruits and vegetables. Mr. Rockefeller loves both, and then there are roses, carnations and general plant houses, all in the best condition.

John Egan & Sons have been located in this town many years. They have seven greenhouses in which are grown a general collection of plants and flowers suitable for retailing; two houses are devoted to carnations, and of the six varieties grown, Mr. Egan says Albertini has paid him best. John is popular hereabouts, and does quite a business in nursery stock.

Francis Gibson—to be sure, he of the flowing whiskers and generous heart—is the leading light in the local horticultural society, a walking encyclopedia of Tarrytown.

The F. R. Pierson Co.'s extensive plant is at present filled with a fine stock of young palms, ferns, and general decorative material, all in prime condition. It's a pleasure to meet Mr. Pierson, Sr., whom we consider one of the best judges of cannas in the country; he has originated some of the best varieties we know.

There are very few in this section of the country who don't know Bob Angus, and none regret it. His violets are always fine, and Robert is always in the first class with many things at the shows. He was for several years treasurer of the New York Gardeners' Society.

A year ago Cooke & McCord opened the only florist's store in town, and have since acquired greenhouses and nurseries on the White Plains Road. They report a fine Christmas trade and are more than pleased with the past year's business; they see bright prospects for the future. They do a general seed, bulb, plant and cut flower trade.

Wm. Scott, superintendent for Mrs. E. T. Eastman, makes a specialty of chrysanthemums, and generally manages to come out on top at the local shows; he also grows about the largest bunches of grapes we see around New York.

Wm. Stevenson, gardener for Mr. Chas. Graef, is very popular with rich and poor here; he is the kind of man to send on a prize money hunt for shows, for he has a way of facing rich people and interesting them in horticulture. His beautiful gardens are well worth a visit.

There are too many pretty places and clever men to mention this time, and we must pass on to Irvington. This is where the great horticultural builders, Lord & Burnham Co., have their factories and foundries—a huge bee-hive of business, piles of timbers in sash and bars and iron work always on the move to every part of the country.

A little way off, and you'll find Andrew Taaffe in the gardens of F. O. Mathiessen. It's hard to beat Andrew on roses and carnations, and he does not need coaxing to exhibit them; more of his kind is badly wanted.

Let us finish with a visit to Miss Helen M. Gould's grand place, where the genial Ferdinand Mangold is superintendent. It's a treat to be here, 'neath gigantic palms and rare plants, the likes of which you may see nowhere else, and then, too, everything is legibly labeled. In some of the paths 'neath the great palm arched dome, you can readily imagine yourself far out in the tropics.

We shall leave further description until another time. Mr. Mangold has raised several beautiful crotons, nepenthes, and other varieties of plants which are to be seen nowhere else but here. This is the kind of stock we would like to show in New York next August, and it is safe to say Mr. Mangold will exhibit if a real good show is arranged for. D.

ST. LOUIS.

Market Conditions.

Trade is quiet, particularly so the city trade. Shipping trade is quite brisk and if there was an active demand there would not be nearly enough flowers to go around, as most of our growers are off crop and the cloudy weather the past week has been most discouraging.

Roses in particular are short. Brides and Bridesmaids are selling at $5 and $6 per 100, some very select stock going as high as $8; Meteors the same; Perles and Woottons, $4 and $5; Beauties are poor in quality and scarce; price away up. Carnations also suffered from the cloudy weather and became scarce, up in price and active in demand. From $1.50 to $4 was asked for fair stock; some fancies brought $5. Bulb stock became scarce and best Romans sold at $3; paper whites, same for the best; second choice from $1.50 to $2; valley sold well at $4; freesias not in yet; callas, $10; Harrisii, $12.50; violets are plentiful and sell from 40 to 60 cents per 100 for the best Californias; smilax is plentiful and very little demand for it.

Floral Euchre.

The floral euchre will be given on Friday night, February 23, at Concordia hall, 1441 Chouteau avenue. The committee, consisting of Fred Weber, John Kunz and J. J. Beneke, have made all arrangements. The tickets and show cards are out and can be obtained from any of the trustees, who are C. C. Sanders, Dr. A. S. Halstedt and H. G. Ude; also from any of the arrangement committee and at Kuehn's and Berning's. Every florist in town should try to sell all the tickets possible and donations of plants, etc., should be sent to the hall on the day of the euchre.

Notes.

Our old friend, John Zeck, with J. A. Budlong, Chicago, was a visitor this week; also Mr. Canaga, of Shelbyville, Ill. Mr. Canaga, who has sold his interest in the North Side Greenhouses at Shelbyville, will remain in St. Louis and is thinking some of going into business.

Dick Frow, out on the Natural Bridge road, reports that he is well again, but had a narrow escape. Dick says: "Renew my subscription for the Review; it is the best."

At the opera at Music Hall the past week quite a lot of flowers made up in all shapes were used, some being very large and well made. Mrs. Ayers, on Grand avenue, had a large bouquet at each performance. Each day different flowers were used with good taste.

The bowling club rolled four games. Five members were at the alleys and made some fair scores. Next Monday night every member is expected to be present. As something must be done to have a better attendance, perhaps a few prizes hung up to be rolled for will bring them out. The scores of last Monday night were as follows:

	1	2	3	4	To.	Av.
C. A. Kuehn	197	163	124	148	632	158
J. W. Kunz	127	155	146	160	588	147

BOSTON.

The situation here and in Natal is much the same. Last week was one of general inactivity, with a "reconnaissance in force" now and then one side or the other to gain an advantage in new positions. Saturday the salesmen charged fearlessly upon the enemy and carried the first line of "kopjes," which they held until this morning, hoping for another advance. They were, however, just able to hold this position against a rather feeble attack today. No large artillery coming into action on either side; goods decreasing in quality and not many large bills offered for breakage.

Superior grades of roses of all kinds are selling at from 3 to 8 cents, and better ones up to perhaps 25 cents for a very few, with best lines of Beauties bringing $6 or $7 per dozen. Carnations are ranging from $1.50 to $2.50 per 100 for good ones and up to $5 for a few fancies.

Bulb goods have acted peculiarly this winter. Roman hyacinths, valley and paper white have been very plentiful indeed; double jonquils very scarce and tulips just waking up. Customers seem to be more scarce than anything else and the predicted great wave of prosperity has not yet begun to ruffle.

Weather still favors the coal bin. Only one little cool wave yet, and not a heavy one at that. Simply balmy today, with official forecast for warmer in immediate future.

B. T.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Since the holidays business has been dull, as might be expected, with a downward tendency in values all along the line. A few of our florists are kept busy with decorations and funeral orders, which helps to keep life in the trade in some parts of the city. The rains have let up for the present and the days are bright and warm, bringing forth green fields and native flowers that put us in mind of the fast approach of spring in California. The mean temperature so far this winter has been 45 to 50 degrees, which is not so mean after all, when compared with that of our eastern cities.

All kinds of cut flowers are still improving right along in quality. A few daffodils are to be seen in market this week, and sell very well. Also sprays of Acacia mollissima, which sells very readily at this time of the year. Violets are coming in thick and fast, double violets being somewhat scarce.

Wholesale prices are as follows: American Beauties, $2.50 to $3.00 for best grade; Brides, $1.00; Bridesmaids, 50c, $1.00, $1.50; Perles, 50c to $1.00; Meteors, 25c to $1.50; Cecil Brunners, 12 1-2c per dozen; violets, Princess of Wales, 50c and 75c; California, 50c; double violets, 75c to $1.00; outside chrysanthemums, whites, 50c to $1.00; yellows, $1.00; lily of the valley, 40c to 75c per dozen; freesias, $1.00 per 100; paper whites, 50c to 75c per hundred. Carnations are plentiful; Ethel Crocker, 50c; Hobarts, $1.00; Bradts, 35c; Gold Nugget, 35c; Flora Hill, 25c to 35c; Portia, 15c to 25c; Scotts, 15c to 20c.

Charles Stappenbeck reports his holiday business 60 per cent better than last year. Charley's store is most attractive at all times, he always having on hand the best stock to be had in market. He is really the "old reliable."

Mr. William J. Dingee's fine mansion at Fernwood, lately destroyed by fire, will be rebuilt at once. The greenhouses, although near the burning building, escaped damage, and just now are aglow with a fine display of orchids in variety, and well worth a visit. Head Gardener Robert Armstrong reports Mr. Dingee's intention of building a handsome residence in Sonoma county, Cal., on land containing 3,000 acres. The land is nicely situated and has a natural waterfall of great beauty, which will be a great help to Mr. Armstrong in his endeavor to improve the beauties of the landscape on the place. Mr. Armstrong will find plenty to do in superintending both places, so more strength to your arm, Bob.

Peter Nicholson, at San Lorenza, intends to erect two more greenhouses soon, in size 25x125, and will be planted with American Beauties.

Stevenson, on Powell street, is having his store remodeled, and when completed it will look 100 per cent better than before. Mr. Stevenson has added another new branch to his florist's business, in the way of breeding and raising Japanese pug dogs. He received from Japan last week two dogs costing $500, both being very fine specimens of the breed and direct from the palace. These little dogs are greatly admired and petted by Mr. Stevenson's lady customers, but one of the little pugs, Coco by name, rebels against the attention of the ladies and will not allow himself to be handled. I wish I were Coco.

Madame Prentice, Washington St., Oakland, did the decoration at the dinner given by Mrs. W. E. Sharon, in honor of Madame Emma Nevada. The color in flowers used was yellow and white, and it was very pretty and tastefully got up by Madame Prentice, whose ability as a decorator is well known.

The nurserymen are kept right busy at present filling out orders in trees, shrubs, roses, etc., the weather just now being right for that kind of planting.

The first Lillium Harrisli have made their appearance in the market and wholesale at $4.00 per dozen.

Lacazette & Peterson will open a new store at 416 14th street, Oakland, this week, and will try their luck. Mr. Lacazette is one of our growers and Mr. Peterson has been leading man for Pouyal, Polk street, S. F. Hope they will make a success of it.

F. W. Nunnemacher has purchased the nurseries owned by C. Wiedersehm, at Piedmont. Some improvements will be made soon, such as one carnation house, 25x135. Mr. N. is forging ahead rapidly and it is to be hoped he will keep it up.

Mr. E. Gill has built himself a handsome residence at his nurseries, West Berkeley. The house contains 14 rooms and cost $6,000. J. N.

WHITE SPOTS ON CARNATION, LEAVES.

What causes white spots to appear on carnation foliage? They grow and look healthy, but in some places on the benches they become spotted.

S. T. S.

If some of the affected leaves or branches had been sent for examination, one could form an opinion; but as it is, one can only guess.

It may be a fungus; it may be only a simple drying up of the leaves in spots, caused by injudicious, irregular treatment. I am inclined to believe it is the latter. The plants may probably be grown too soft. A sudden burst of sunshine after cloudy weather will cause them to wilt, and dry spots may be left in the leaves, and, besides, some places on the bench may be dryer than the rest, and this will certainly help to aggravate the injurious effects.

Again, if it is of no parasitical nature, as caused by fungus or bacteria, it is, as I would call it in field culture, caused by climatic extremes, but under glass it is simple mistreatment.

"The Crawford," in color variegated red and white, a sport from McGowan, has been growing four years and keeps getting better every year; a fine, clean grower, blooming all the season through.

"The Copley," a rich cerise and a sport from the Crawford; grown two years and has proven a splendid grower, being more robust than the Crawford.

Butted Glass.

This is no longer an experiment, it has come to stay. There are various ways of making Butted Roofs, but the best way is with the Clipper Bar.

With this bar you can make a roof that is absolutely free from drip, and glass cannot be torn out by the wind. Butted glass makes a tight roof, a warm house and saves fuel. It lasts longer, looks better and costs less than the old-fashioned roof. But do not think that this is the only bar we sell, for it is not; we furnish what people want and there is nothing in greenhouse material that you cannot get from us, and all of open-air-dried Cypress clear of bright sap, stained sap, knots and all other defects.

TORONTO JUNCTION, ONT.

The Toronto Junction Horticultural Society has been organized, with officers as follows:

Honorary president, Mr. A. Gilchrist; president, Mr. F. C. Colbeck, B.A.; first vice-president, Mayor Laughton; second vice-president, Mrs. Gilchrist; secretary, Mr. W. H. Post; treasurer, Mr. R. C. Jennings. Directors, Dr. Clendenan, Mrs. Howell, Mr. M. A. Chrysler, B.A., Mr. W. L. Joy, Mr. R. C. Jennings, Mr. E. R. Rogers, Mrs. R. L. McCormack, Mrs. A. H. Perfect, and Miss Post. Auditors, Mr. W. J. Conron and Mr. W. W. Howell.

Mr. Gilchrist, after expressing his thanks for the society's mark of appreciation in electing him honorary president, referred to the very useful work the society could do in a young town like the Junction. He had thought of taking steps towards organizing it several years ago, but had been deterred by the then shiftless character of the population. Now that there was a more permanent population, he thought a great work could be done by such an organization, and he mentioned some of the ways in which it could make its usefulness felt, such as protesting against the destruction of beautiful trees or the burning of underbrush. The good roads movement was something that should have the co-operation of the society. An effort should be made to interest the children in the beauties of nature and he advocated giving prizes to encourage them in horticultural pursuits.

A resolution was adopted in favor of affiliating with the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association.

Regular meetings of the society will be held on the fourth Tuesday of each month and if the consent of the council be obtained the meetings will be held in the council chamber.

NEW ORLEANS.

We are having great weather in the Crescent City. At the time of writing, January 10, a tropical storm has paid us a visit; tomorrow Jack Frost may swoop down, so uncertain is the weather.

The severe frost of February last did not hurt the camellias so badly as was thought. Though the plants were cut back to some extent, they are laden with buds, and will shortly present a beautiful sight. Many of the large palms were completely killed, smaller ones not so bad. A large number were imported from California to fill the gaps, but many failed to accommodate themselves to their new home.

U. J. Virgin has grown a fine lot of Phoenix canariensis from seedlings, which will not fail to take hold. He has also made a hit in growing roses, cutting 8,000 Brides and Maids during the month of December. It is but a short time since a rose under glass was unknown in this city.

M. Cook plants out what L. Harrisil he has left over and by so doing obtains plants free from disease. They bloom in the beds of the house where planted. Carnations are doing very well and will doubtless do better when propagated from own stock.

The successor to Mr. Fonta as superintendent of Audubon park is Mr. Edward Baker, one of the earliest nurserymen of this city and who is quite at home here. Some changes and much improvement has been made both in the hall and park grounds. One of the most brilliant effects I have yet seen was a combination of Bougainvillea Sanderiana, Jasminum nudiflorum, Plumbago capensis, Poinsettia pulcherrima and Bignonia venusta, all in full bloom, surrounded by stately palms and bushy ferns.

George Thomas, gardener to Mrs. Whitney, has received from Mr. Fonta a new ever-bearing grape from France, from which a famed brand of wine is made.

M.

KEWANEE, ILL.—Claude M. Hamilton has purchased a third interest in the firm of Hamilton & Plummer. The firm name remains unchanged.

E. H. HUNT, Chicago, has just issued his new catalogue for 1900 and it is very attractively gotten up. A great variety of stock in the way of trade supplies is offered and it is very conveniently arranged for reference. The list of florists' seeds is especially full and complete. It will be sent to any one in the trade on request.

OCEANIC, N. J.

At the semi-monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, Prof. Byron D. Halsted delivered his lecture on "Parasitic Fungi Under Glass and Rusts." Although it was storming, ninety-four were in attendance. The professor stated that carnation rust was an old pest in Europe and doubtless came to us on imported stock about 1889, and within the last ten years had spread throughout the country. He showed by illustrations how rust can be quickly distinguished by the plump gray blisters produced upon the leaves and stems, and how it spreads after the epidermis is broken and the brown, rusty spores escape in great numbers; how the fungus sends its slender threads in all directions through the leaf or stem of the plant.

The fungous diseases of violets and their remedies were very well ventilated. Mildew on roses was discussed and shown by illustrations as a surface feeder that does not send its filaments deeply into and between the cells of the leaves. Rust on chrysanthemums was also shown by illustrations and I am sure that everyone present will know this pest hereafter as soon as he sees it.

A very lively discussion followed, which was taken part in by Dr. W. Whitmore, Rev. Dr. Kneip, Prof. Walling, Messrs. Frank McMahon, A. Stewart, Philadelphia, H. A. Kettel, N. Butterbach and others.

One new member was elected.

After the meeting refreshments were served, which was followed by wholesale smoking to destroy the germs of the diseases previously mentioned.

It was a meeting that will be remembered for a long time by everyone present.

N. BUTTERBACH,
Secretary.

PAEONIES AND VALLEY IN THE SOUTH.

On page 170 of your issue of January 11, I notice a request for information as to how far south paeonias and lily of the valley are successfully grown. Here in Anniston, 1,000 feet above the sea level, we have nice lily of the valley outside in the full sun in March.

As to paeonias, I imported years ago a fine collection of tree paeonias from France. They never bloomed. The herbaceous kinds do better. The common kinds do best.

J. C. Murray is preparing plans for two rose houses, each 20x100, to be erected the coming summer.

Cole Bros. are preparing to build a large asparagus house.

There has not been the usual number of parties this winter, but there has been considerable funeral work.

Roses are scarce just now and prices are up on all flowers. Violets are good and plentiful. Louis Miller supplies Cole Bros. with good stock. J. R.

NEW LIGHT PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Peerless in its class. The coming light pink. As a commercial variety it will score its greatest triumph. As an exhibition variety it will take care of itself. Its reputation is already made. We recommend it to you as being first-class in every way. It has won highest honors wherever exhibited. In a word it is the light pink par excellence. Better than Scott in its palmiest days. There will be no attempt to over-propagate it. First come, first served. Send for complete description.

A Grand New White Carnation Seedling.....

of Lizzie McGowan and
Mme. Diaz Albertini,
in its fifth year.....

The flowers are large, finely shaped and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong, after the style of Mme. Albertini, and none bursting; the stem strong, holding the flower erect.

The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00;

PITTSBURG.

Various Items.

Business has picked up some the past week. Flowers, of all kinds, are not coming in very plentifully and are cleaned out much better.

Roses seem to be off crop with the growers here and Harrisii are not plentiful. Several of the growers report lots of Harrisii plants as having gone to the rubbish heap lately.

The Florists' Club at its January meeting nominated the old officers.

John Edlefsen, an old resident of Millvale, died Jan. 16, in the 64th year of his age, at his residence, on Evergreen avenue. The deceased was born in Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, in 1837, and came to the United States in 1868, locating in Millvale, where he had lived ever since. He was a florist and was active in the duties of his business until a few years ago.

The late Mr. Edlefsen is survived by his widow and by two sons and two daughters. William Edlefsen, one of the sons, is engaged in the florist's business in Milwaukee.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society held its forty-first meeting in the old city hall, which had been prettily decorated by the members of the club. Randolph & McClements, John Bader and Blaha & Fort furnished the plants; Thomas M. Ulam, laurel wreathing, and the Pittsburg Cut Flower Company, southern smilax.

The exhibitors were: Randolph & McClements, table of stove plants; G. & J. W. Ludwig, a very nice table of cut flowers; L. I. Neff, cut flowers; E. Fisher, well grown freesia; Geo. H. Beckert and G. B. Robinson made a nice display of fruit and vegetables; Wm. Laine, a basket of flowers carved out of vegetables, which attracted a great deal of attention.

Prof. S. B. Heiges, of York, Pa., and Prof. John Hamilton, state secretary of agriculture, made very interesting speeches, advising farmers to turn their attention to fine fruits, as the competition in wheat growing was getting stronger each year. The preparation of the soil for transplanting; the care of the trees; the important item of grading the fruit for market; the study of insects and their extermination, to be taught in our schools, were some of the points touched upon.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Howard A. Chase, Philadelphia; vice presidents, Calvin Cooper, Bird-in-Hand; Daniel D. Herr, Lancaster; M. C. Dunlevy; recording secretary, E. B. Engle, Waynesboro; corresponding secretary, William P. Brinton, Christiania; treasurer, Samuel C. Moon, Morrisville.

The next meeting will be held at Harrisburg, January, 1901. BAER.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

Trade since my last report has been good, bad and indifferent.

Society is now on wing, or rather on foot, and provides an outlet for the florists' wares. The weather conditions have been almost perfect and a big cut has resulted therefrom. Funeral work has been in quite good demand and but few flowers have gone to waste.

At this writing there is nearly two inches of snow on the ground; a few of the nabobs are out in sleighs for the first time this season. If the present ideal weather continues fuel bills will be smaller than last year, even at advanced prices.

Violets continue off crop and scarce, even with an abundance of sunshine. Some of the largest growers are cutting but very few and there appears to be a general complaint regarding the shortage. By most this condition is attributed to the hot weather in October. Harrisii are very slow and backward, the first blooms being noted January 8. There is scarcely a trace of disease to be seen in any plants, which shows what good can be accomplished when growers and dealers act together. United action in other ways would prove of vast benefit to the trade in general.

Dr. R. Schiffman, our local orchidist, has gone to Jamaica on his annual southern tour.

L. G. Veuzke, formerly in business here, has accepted a position with E. F. Lemke.

Recent callers on the trade were C. P. Braslan, Alex. Rodgers and W. H. Small. X. Y. Z.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

John Pearson, one of the oldest florists in Memphis, died of pneumonia January 19. Mr. Pearson was an old school English gardener and was a specialist in azaleas and hard wooded plants. His cheerful disposition and cordial smile will be missed by all who knew him. He was universally liked by all the members of the trade and the general public, with whom he was deservedly popular. He leaves a widow, no children. His partner, Mr. W. McCarty, will continue the business.

Mr. G. W. Wheeler, of Chicago, was a recent caller; also Mr. W. Mott, of Philadelphia.

The extremely mild weather since Christmas has made flowers plentiful. Bulbous stuff is almost a glut. Violets are plenty. The cut flower trade has been satisfactory to the store men, but there has been a dearth of large decorations. People rent a dozen palms and arrange some cut flowers on mantels and in vases, smilax on chandeliers, a few flowers on tables, and it is "decorated." The local papers describe it as elegant and chaste and "bowers of Beauty," and the ordinary layman would think from the description that $100 to $200 had been expended for floral decorations. Possibly $15 to $25 would cover the entire floral bill.

BUGS.

The grower is always talking about "bugs," and I want to tell you an old-time chestnut, which if you have never heard before may amuse you.

"Once upon a time," as the old stories begin, there was a man who had more money than brains and after taking care of the poor he devoted the balance of his time to collecting bugs. He traveled all over the world and collected cases upon cases of bugs, fixed them up, and when he thought he had the collection complete he called in his fellow bug collectors and with a great deal of pride showed them what he had done.

After all these "buggy" men had examined all the cases very carefully, one of them said there was to be a special medal given for the best collection of bugs, and the owner of the collection mentioned was very much delighted, for he was sure there was not another collection like his in the world, and he wanted to wager that he would win the medal. After some more looking over another of the party offered to accept the wager. This surprised the owner, who knew there must be something short, and he begged to know what it was. It turned out that it was a common, every-day louse that was short.

This rather set back the owner, for he admitted the shortage, but he did not know where or how to obtain a specimen. After a little discussion it was suggested that he start down Chatham street, New York, or Clark street, Chicago, which the owner did. After walking up and down he saw the three balls before a dirty looking store and bracing himself, started in. After getting inside he started off something like this: "I give money to the poor and I do a great many things, but I am now on an errand that I do not know how to go about." After a little talk of this sort the proprietor of the store said: "Don't be afraid, I won't eat you; ask me anything you wish and I will answer to the best of my knowledge." "Well," says the owner of bugs, "I want to get a common louse." Thereupon the man behind the case answered by putting his hand to his hair and inquiring: "Which will it be—a gray, a black or a moss back?" and he quickly had some on the glass of his case. Covering them with his hand, he said: "You can have your choice for $4.00 or the three for $10.00."

But though he now had a chance to obtain what he wanted, the owner of bugs thought the price too high and started to argue about it, whereupon the owner of the little store gathered the three together, passed his hand over his head and remarked: "Very well, all I have to do is to put them back into stock."

The cut flower commission man is in an equally independent position today. The dealers, stand keepers and fakirs kick about the price, but the time has come when the commission man is fixed to hold stock, and his answer is like that of the man under the three balls: "Put them back into stock."

COMMISSION BUG.

A CENSUS OF FLORICULTURE.

Washington, D. C.—Owing to the unusual intelligence of florists as a class, and the fact that the statistics of their business which the Census Office requires relate almost entirely to the year 1899, a plan has been formed for taking an early census of floriculture by mail, on special schedules, and to tabulate and publish the returns thereof early, while other branches of the great work of enumeration are in progress.

There are approximately 10,500 florists in the United States. The names and addresses of a majority of them have been secured and classified by the Division of Agriculture in the Census Office, and each known proprietor will soon receive a copy of the special schedule devoted to this interest. It will be accompanied by a list (so far as ascertained) of all the florists in his section, to be by him corrected, added to and returned to the department for use in making the record complete and reliable.

This special schedule is not elaborate or complicated. It may be filled out easily and quickly by any florist who keeps a reasonably accurate run of his business. It asks for the (1899) acreage devoted to floriculture and of each crop or variety of plants and flowers; the total area in square feet under glass and the area of each crop or variety of flower or plant raised thereunder; the number of persons employed and the total wages paid to them; the amount expended for catalogues, postage, and fertilizers respectively, and the gross receipts from the sales in each subdivision of the business.

No private individuals will be permitted to have access to the schedules after they have been filled out and returned, nor will the names of persons or firms giving information be published in the census report. Figures only will be used and published, and the entire process and record of gathering information will be confidential.

As the law requires the regular enumerators to obtain certain information as to tenure, value, etc., during their visits in June, the next census of floriculture, if the florists themselves shall be prompt and conscientious in filling out and returning the special schedules soon to be sent to them, will be the most perfect in history.

They will be put to no expense, as the necessary stationery, with envelopes properly franked, will be provided for their use.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

From all reports Christmas trade was about 35 per cent. better than last year. Newell, the popular Twelfth street florist, reports the best trade he ever had. In fact all the florists are well satisfied with last year's business.

Stock is still scarce, owing to roses and carnations being off crop. Violets have been very scarce and affected with spot, but are now coming in better. Harrisii lilies are beginning to appear.

H. J. Millat, who has been manager of Geo. M. Kellogg's store, has resigned his position. The last seen of him by your correspondent he had on his war paint and was headed for South Africa.

UNION.

BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1900.

This popular catalogue is more attractive than ever, in a particularly dainty cover for 1900. Nasturtiums, new sweet peas and the famous "Rocky Ford," or Burpee's Netted Gem Melons are shown in colors, painted from nature, while the book is full of illustrations from photographs. Of particular interest is the new feature for 1900 of giving "plain talks" as to the relative value for different purposes of all varieties of vegetables. Another interesting feature is the remarkable record of prizes won by the products of Burpee's seeds at leading state fairs in 1899. "New Creations" of intrinsic merit are offered in both vegetables and flowers. Altogether the catalogue shows most painstaking care in the effort to "tell the plain truth about seeds" as proved at Fordhook Farms,—the largest trial grounds in America. It will be mailed free to any of our readers who mention this paper, when writing to the publishers, W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

NEW YELLOW CARNATION.

A committee of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society has made the following report on carnation seedling No. 11, grown by N. Butterbach, gardener to Hon. C. N. Bliss, Oceanic, N. J.:

Color, a beautiful deep yellow, slightly blotched and pencilled with a red orange shading to white. The flowers are full and double, measuring from 2½ to 3 inches, with large broad petals, the upper part twisted, which gives the flower a very heavy appearance. The plants are vigorous and bloom continuously, much the habit of Maceo, with good, strong stems measuring from 16 to 20 inches, and a good calyx. This we consider to be the grandest of all yellow carnations for winter blooming and a valuable addition, as we have long felt the want of a good yellow carnation.

(Signed:)

Committee.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The building occupied by Taylor & Angel, who handle seeds largely, was destroyed by fire the night of January 11. Loss estimated at $8,000, with insurance of $5,000. The adjoining building was used as a storeroom by John Hubbard, the seedsman, who had a large amount of grass seed there. His loss was about $1,500, fully covered by insurance.

EMPLOYEES.

"Encourage your employees to study and thoroughly master the details of their work. It will make them more valuable employees as well as better men." This has been the advice of all thinking employers.

Now is a good time to act upon this advice. Present your employee with a copy of the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is not only a handsome volume that makes an attractive gift, but it contains the sort of matter that will make your employees better workmen. You will benefit yourself as well as showing your employee that you regard him as something more than a mere machine.

Pot Grown LILACS for FORCING

WE can still supply a fine lot of pot grown Lilacs, bushy, well budded dwarf plants. This is always good stock for the retailer to handle, either as cut blooms or to sell as pot plants. A night temperature of 60 to 70 degrees will develop their flowers in three weeks' time and a continual supply of fine flowers can be had from now until Easter at but small expense and labor.

The varieties we offer are:

CHARLES X. Red. $6.00 per dozen; $45.00 per 100.

MARIE LEGRAYE. White. $6.00 per dozen; $45.00 per 100.

Mme. LEMOINE. Double White. $6.00 per dozen; $45.00 per 100.

AZALEA MOLLIS.

This hardy Azalea is used extensively in all European cities for early forcing; they are great favorites on account of their varied and brilliant coloring.

We offer a fine lot of bushy plants, 12 to 15 inches high, well covered with buds, at $6.00 per dozen.

ACACIA ARMATA.

A pretty Spring flowering variety which produces its flowers in globular heads from the axils of the foliage in such a manner as to completely envelope the plant in a pleasing light yellow; an excellent plant for Easter forcing, succeeding under the same culture as the Azalea. A nice lot of bushy plants; 12 to 15 inches high; 5-inch pots, 50 cents each; $5.00 per dozen.

The Lilacs and Azalea Mollis can be shipped by freight without injury in any kind of weather.

Funeral Flowers.

The use of colored flowers at funerals is much more general now than in the past, but that fact does not make them any more appropriate. The rules of art may be hampered by poverty, but they also stand firm through the fads of fashion. In the earliest ages sprigs of green, then palm leaves, and afterwards flowers were used to decorate the casket or tomb of the dead. Most of the races seem to have adopted distinct customs of their own, yet as the world grew older and humanity spread, even to the remotest parts, and in savage forms, Mother Nature inspired human nature to express its sublimest thoughts by the use of flowers. It is only the cynic of the nineteenth century (the most acutely affected of the tribe) who will attempt to deny that sentiment, in one form or another, influences the lives of all and guides the destiny of nations.

Flowers have always been considered the very ablest exponents of that language of the soul, so we find that in the numerous growths in the advancement of civilization there also sprang up a language of flowers. In Japan today it is customary to express most wishes by the use of flower and shrub. In all the nations of Europe at one time or another, the same custom prevailed, and if you will take the trouble to investigate, the history of savage races will tell you many curious things relating to the influence and uses of flowers. The present age is not entitled to the credit of originating many things which are beautiful, it has only intensified beauty by a higher intelligence. When we speak for the great American republic, can we not claim to be conversant with the growth of refinement? The florists' business furnishes one of the best demonstrations of how far ahead we are.

We have a language of flowers here, but it is an unwritten one, to be sure. Violets in America convey the same message as violets in France, and a red rose typifies love all the world over. In the countries where flowers are scarce the language and laws of art are subservient to material. In this country we have gradually molded the various tastes into more refined models, and a wealth of supplies enables us to carry out our wishes, but we are continually struggling against the craze for novelty when that craze ignores all refinement. It is no wonder we see so many "Please omit flowers" at the end of death notices, for the galaxy of colors often seen in funeral floral designs would remind one more of some festive occasion.

Bright colors have always and will continue to represent the lighter and cheerful moods, and they are not appropriate for funerals. A great many florists will use up any kind of flowers they may happen to have in stock, but the things they thus manufacture do not stand for what is right and proper, it is merely an instance of mercenary motives. We can never agree with the idea that Bridesmaid roses, or deep pink carnations, or red chrysanthemums, or any flowers of similar colors are suitable for funerals. Crimson roses may be excepted because they have a meaning no other flowers have. The death chamber is no place for a riot of colors, the desire to send something different to anybody else should not offer an excuse to outrage good taste. When we see bunches of American Beauty roses tied with purple, pink or green ribbon, and sent as a token of respect to the dead, we look upon it as an insult to art, and those responsible ignorant. White has always been, and despite the low fads, will remain the most expressive color to use in funeral flowers. Lavender, violet and delicate shades of pink are permissible; for instance, for aged people, violets; young girls, very light pink, such as Carnot or Golden Gate roses; men, crimson roses; ivy or palm leaves are proper for the aged, so are purple pansies; then there are the various clusters of colors to emphasize the meaning of special designs, but as we have stated before the mad desire to be distinct is responsible for many crimes.

If there is any form of decoration that calls for more quietness and refinement of treatment than another, it is that of the funeral. Deep pink, orange, scarlet, carmine and glaring colors are out of place, and the florist should be the last to propose their use. To wear any kind of flowers at a funeral is the very worst taste, just a sprig of boxwood, cypress or bay is all that should ever be carried, and that in the right hand.

Seasonable Flowers—Their Uses.

White lilac has been on the New York market some weeks now and much of it is very good; it retails at from $1.50 to $2.50 per bunch; it is being used for bridal bouquets, table decorations and in boxes of the very choicest cut flowers. When used for table, etc., it is best to have a few red or pink roses in a cluster at one side; the long sprays are very pretty with Beauty or any large rose. Wreath of white lilac and cluster of cattleyas makes one of the finest designs.

Some freesias are coming in extra fine just now; they have long stems and the foliage is good; it is a popular flower for many forms of decoration this season; a bunch of it should go in every large box of cut flowers. Freesia Leichtlinii major, the yellow variety, is very pretty with jonquils as a table decoration; the white comes in very acceptably for finger-bowl sprays; don't bunch them—two or three sprays and a leaf on the off side of the bowl is the proper thing.

Tulips, of course, are in and are being used for cheap spring flower table work. These flowers are specially suitable for breakfasts or luncheons. Flat baskets or very low dishes are the only things in which you can properly arrange them; keep your colors separate. At tulip dinners ice cream is usually served in one of the flowers. The lamp shades are tulip shape; they form the finger-bowls, and if fairy electric lights are used they can be stuck inside the flowers; in fact, everything is in a tulip, even the guest card in one alongside the plate; this flower tied with a three-looped bow of baby ribbon can also be worn.

Almost all the florists' store windows have displays of azaleas, and in addition to these being poor in quality, the vast majority of them are badly arranged; they are placed with the nicety of a crazy patch quilt; a grouping of colors would show better results.

Quite a few varieties of yellow narcissus can be had and most of them are beautiful; they are especially suitable for luncheons and teas; use a green Japanese or Venetian vase; their own foliage will supply the best green; these flowers must be arranged loosely and at irregular heights to appear at their prettiest.

Begonia Glory of Lorraine, if in good condition, makes up grandly for table decoration; the color is very beautiful under artificial light; need not take it out of the pots; use a saucer-like dish and tilt the plants; nothing should be seen but its own foliage and flower.

Last week New Haven was violet mad. The students at Yale had their annual festivities, and the violet being the nearest approach to the college color, they were the most popular flower; we hear that some of the students tried to corner the market and that the local florists in that town had to combine to defeat the scheme, which they appear to have done successfully.

Robert Crawford, of Philadelphia, is the first to adopt the automobile for delivery of flowers. These vehicles are admirably suited for florists' work, because they don't shake the flowers so much, but we were just thinking what would some of our florists be without their retinue of colored folks, even if slavery be a thing of the past (which we are inclined to doubt). It looks influential to have lots of negroes on top of your wagon.

IVERA.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

There is always a noticeable shortening of work during the month of February in establishments where there is a general collection grown. January has cleaned up what shifting can be done in midwinter, and the moving and preparation of our prospective Easter crops is largely the work. In some seasons of the year, notably spring, a walk through the houses brings to view fifty jobs that are imperative. "By golly, we must get at that." "But look here, boss; this stuff wants it worse." "Yes, I know, but did you do so-and-so yesterday? No? Oh, Lord! you will have to get at that."

A man that does not fret and stew a little and can look complacently on and see a batch of stuff spoiling, with the excuse that "we really had not time," is to be envied for his physical and mental comfort; but such a disposition is apt to be sluggish and sleepy, and under the sway of such a mind too many things are neglected. The other extreme, and the writer inclines to the latter, is the man who sees the ten imperative jobs at once, and in his mind is doing them all at once. That state of mind will soon bring on paresis, or worse. Do the most necessary first and, when completed, it will be one off the programme, and don't, if possible, fret and stew about any job till you can get at it. All of which is easier to preach than to practice, and just now you will have the time to attend to things that don't cry aloud for help, but that are necessary all the same.

Palms.

It is a good time to go over all your palms and thoroughly clean them. Mealy bug, brown and white scale will appear. A sponge and the kerosene emulsion, or, if you don't want to bother with the emulsion, warm water. A good addition of soft soap and some Nikoteen; the latter, not more than one part to 200 parts of water, will take off every pest if faithfully sponged. This takes time, but if you will look at it in the business way it is but a trifle of expense on each plant—so trifling that you have added to the health and appearance of the plant four times the cost of the labor.

Young palms can be shifted now, when they actually need it. Most palms thrive in comparatively small pots, but fast growing young stock will require a shift, which never should be a large one. A good loam with a fourth of well-rotted animal manure and some bone meal (a pound to a bushel of soil will do well) is a good mixture. Pot firmly and be careful not to put the base of the stem below the surface of the soil. I have seen grievous mistakes made by putting the stems of young palms down in the soil an inch or so; this is particularly true of the most valuable of all palms, the Kentias.

Palms that you are using for decorations, either large or medium, can be cleaned and sponged, but don't disturb their roots; after winter festivities are over will do for them.

Orchids.

If you grow any of the commercial orchids, now is a good time to give them a good overhauling. If carefully done, cleaning and surfacing can be done at any time, as you do not rob them of any roots, but merely supply fresher and cleaner material as a medium for their roots to rest on or among. The ideal time to resurface an orchid would be during its resting time just before it starts to grow; hence Cattleya labiata would now be in just that condition; but C. Trianae or any of this tribe can also now be done. C. Mossiae would be better attended to in the early fall. Laelia anceps should also be now cleaned and surfaced.

Good fibrous peat and fresh live sphagnum are the materials. It is a pretty good rule that when the sphagnum is seen to be fresh and green on the surface of our orchid pots that the roots also will be thriving. When handling the cattleyas for resurfacing look out for the small white scale that is so troublesome on the base of the bulbs. The white filmy covering at bottom of bulb is a favorite place for the scale to make a settlement; remove it and thoroughly clean off all scales. Some growers use a solution of fir tree oil and some good growers use simply warm water. The scales stick tightly, but must be removed or the ravages of the scale will destroy the bulb, it first turning yellow and then black.

When resting, those orchids that have thick bulbs should be kept on the dry side, but by no means shriveled up; and when they start to grow increase the moisture. Above all, cleanliness has much to do with the successful cultivation of these magnificent plants. No decayed growths or rotten or decayed moss should ever be allowed on them. A good, pure atmosphere is a great essential, but ventilation in our northern greenhouses is almost out of the question, perhaps for weeks at a time; and light is also a great factor. Orchids, except perhaps the odontoglossums, do not want a dark north side house. The cattleyas and laelias would thrive almost under the glare of our July suns if the glass were of the quality that would not burn.

That pretty low-growing orchid, the coelogyne, is now coming into flower. They are very durable and if removed to a cool house and the bulbs lightly sprayed occasionally, the flower will last five or six weeks. After they are done flowering is the best time to shift or divide the masses of bulbs. They soon get very crowded. Be careful of drip or spraying of water on the flowers or it will spot them.

That florist's orchid, subdued and modest as are the colors, Cypripedium insigne, will soon be growing. See that they have good, clean, live sphagnum on the surface, a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, and at present the fullest light.

We are in too small a way with these fantastic but gorgeous flowers to say much about the profitability of them, but can say that with a few dozen spikes a week our supply has been much behind the demand. When once a person gets into the way of buying orchids, he sticks to it and constantly asks for them. In a local pictorial paper a fine picture of Joe Chamberlain shows him with eyeglass (he is shortsighted in the right eye), and in his coat the habitual orchid, which looks like Odontoglossum crispum. His friend, Oom Paul, don't patronize orchids; he wears a spray of Erica Cavendishii Spionkopli.

pride of the Crescent City. They are all seedlings of his own raising. The last blooms were cut at New Year's, and, as evidence of their quality, an average price of $3 per dozen was obtained.

In the picture the successful proprietor is seen on the left, and his able assistant standing among the plants, with looks of mutual admiration upon their faces. One of the varieties is a lovely white seedling with a local name of the "Crescent." M.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Committee Meeting.

The Executive Committee at its recent session in New York City approved the selection of the Grand Central Palace as headquarters for the convention and exhibition of 1900 and endorsed the selection of J. P. Cleary as manager of the trade exhibition. On being notified by the New York Florists' Club that it was their intention to present a grand horticultural exhibition at the time of the convention, under the immediate supervision of the private gardeners, it was voted that twelve silver and twelve bronze medals of the S. A. F. be specially appropriated for the use of the N. Y. Florists' Club in this enterprise. A subcommittee was also appointed to arrange for the award of special S. A. F. medals at the exhibition of certain affiliated national organizations and leading horticultural societies.

It was decided that Prof. L. C. Elson, of Boston, and Dr. N. L. Britton, of New York, be invited to deliver lectures before the society at the coming convention. Other features of the convention program, as arranged, are a president's reception, a paper on greenhouse construction from the open land to the finished structure, an illustrated talk on floral decorations, a discussion on the S. A. F. and its future welfare, and special talks on rose and carnation subjects to be selected and presented under the auspices of the Rose and Carnation Societies, respectively. It is expected that the afternoon and evening of the third day will be devoted to an excursion, on invitation of the New York Florists' Club, and that the fourth day will be assigned exclusively for sporting and entertainment features, with the possibility that some of the sporting features may be incorporated with the excursion of the third day.

Much of the committee's time was taken up with a very thorough discussion of the important matter referred to it by the last convention, viz., the establishment of a co-operative purchase corporation. President Wood, who has given much thought to this matter, presented a complete scheme for incorporation on the lines advocated by him at the Detroit meeting, but finally, owing to the somewhat indefinite character of the society's vote, under which the committee were unwilling to assume a larger responsibility, it was decided to continue for the present the old plan of a purchasing committee, who shall purchase for cash for any member of the society, lumber, coal, glass, iron pipe, hose, oil and leads as may be required, but charging hereafter a small percentage on each transaction toward defraying the expenses of the necessary clerical assistance, the lack of which has greatly hampered the work of this department in the past.

The treasurer's report, as presented, showed that the life membership fund now amounts to over $600, and that the general fund in treasury made a net increase of about $450 for the past year. It was voted that hereafter the treasurer present a supplementary report, for information of the society, at each convention, covering the period between January 1st and the time of the convention. It was decided to discontinue the nomenclature committee and to assign the duties of that committee to the registration department of the secretary's office and a botanist, Dr. N. L. Britton was then appointed as botanist to the society, and Prof. L. O. Howard was reappointed as entomologist.

The fertilizer committee was reorganized by the addition of W. N. Rudd to its membership and the appointment of C. W. Ward as chairman, and the necessary appropriations were made for the needs of this committee and the legislative committee.

A special subcommittee was appointed to report at the convention on the advisability of the incorporation of the society under the laws of some state; also a special subcommittee to consider the recommendation of President Wood relative to the securing of a permanent home for the society.

President P. O'Mara, of the New York Florists' Club, and Messrs. W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, and Geo. A. Rackham, of Detroit, were present at most of the sessions and rendered valuable assistance to the committee.

The report of the committee on final resolutions extended grateful recognition of the hospitality of the New York Florists' Club and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ward, and thanked the press for courtesies extended.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

THE AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Executive Committee was held in New York on Saturday, the 27th of January, when the arrangements for the approaching show on March 27, 28 and 29 were nearly completed. It has been decided, in order to make the work of the society more substantial, that a bulletin shall be issued containing notes of the society's doings and of progress with roses. This will be sent free to every member of the society, but will not otherwise be available.

The number of premiums for the March show continues to grow in a most satisfactory manner and there is every encouragement offered to growers in all parts to compete. The gold and silver medals given by the New York Florists' Club are offered for the best 100 roses in four varieties from growers residing outside a radius of 150 miles from New York City as measured by the distances shown on the railroad time tables. This should insure a representative competition from growers distant from New York, and will place their competition on an even basis.

LEONARD BARRON, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

Trade Conditions.

This is supposed to be the busiest time of the year. Certain it is there are innumerable balls, dinners, etc., and though there appear many newspaper decorations still we hear of very few being overruled with business. Cold weather has shortened some crops and good prices are obtainable for high grade stock. Nothing specially new is seen on the market or in the stores with the exception of some artificial roses in a Broadway florist's window. The Bowery may have a poor reputation, but it was never guilty of a thing like that, and yet some fellows out in Kankakee think there's no place like Broadway.

Death of J. M. Hodgson.

John M. Hodgson, one of the oldest florists in this city, died Wednesday night, January 24th, from a stroke of apoplexy, at his home, 30 West Fifty-ninth street.

Mr. Hodgson was born in Durham, England, 73 years ago. In 1862 he went to the front as a member of the Ninth New Jersey and was a corporal in that regiment when honorably discharged at the close of the war.

Like many more of our best florists he started lowly and rose to the top. It was over in Englewood, N. J., that we first find him making rustic wood garden embellishments. In 1868 he hired the rear of John Henderson's store, between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets on Broadway, and there sold his hanging baskets and rustic vases. About 1870 he moved to the old mansion then standing on the block at Thirty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, built a small and wonderful greenhouse there and spread his woodwork on the lawn in front. From there he moved into what was then a very large store at Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, remaining there for over twenty years. The large new store he recently opened at Fifty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, and which was illustrated a few weeks ago in the Review, is undoubtedly one of the finest florist's stores to be seen anywhere. Many years ago he opened an extensive place at Newport, R. I.

His trade was among the old wealthy families of New York. His wife died in 1895; three daughters and a son remain. His sons-in-law, R. Merritt and A. Spalding, have for many years managed his extensive business, and it is thought will continue to do so under the old firm name. Many old time florists attended the services on Saturday morning. The interment took place at Newport, R. I., on Sunday.

Committee Meetings.

The committee having charge of the horticultural exhibit in connection with the S. A. F. convention met at the Grand Central Palace, January 29. A. Herrington was elected permanent chairman of the committee, Mr. Butterbach declining to serve, as he expects to visit the Paris exhibition in early summer. The preliminary list of classes was arranged, this will be submitted to the club at the next meeting, and it is expected the list will be sent out the first week in March. In addition to money prizes and S. A. F. gold medals, the Florists' Clubs will offer 50 silver and 50 bronze medals to be competed for in this section of the show.

The committee of the American Rose Society will meet at 119 West Twenty-third street, 2 p. m., February 3rd, to complete arrangements for the rose show at the Eden Musee in March.

Bowling.

A tournament has been arranged between the New York, Flatbush and Hoboken florists' bowling clubs and the first match games will be rolled at Heflich's assembly rooms, Paterson and Summit avenues, Hoboken, N. J., on Wednesday evening, February 7th. Several old scores are to be wiped out on this occasion, and altogether a warm time is looked for. It is unfortunate for many that the Poughkeepsie dinner also occurs on the same date. Following scores were made on the New York alleys, January 29th:

AMONG MADISON GROWERS.

One day recently the representative of The Florists' Review roamed among the rose growers of Madison, N. J. This is a delightful section of the country, a scattering town of 5,000 inhabitants (two wretched so-called restaurants), distance 25 miles from New York. The place is famous for its rose culture, there being over a million square feet of glass devoted to that branch of floriculture. There are over fifty separate rose growing establishments, which are dotted over an area of three or four square miles, and would require several days to visit and study. On this occasion we had but half the day and could but see the few.

Henry Heintz, Jr., has one of the finest sets of rose houses we have seen. Everything is as compact, warm, and clean as a ball room, and the stock grown here is among the very finest sent to the New York market. A model potting shed 350 feet long runs the entire length of the range and underneath are the boiler and storage rooms. There are nine houses and 34,000 square feet of glass; seven houses are planted with Beauties in the center benches, Maids and Brides on the sides, and two houses with Bridesmaids. They are a picture, and if you are interested in rose culture, are well worth seeing.

Jas. E. Milton, the modest but thoroughly efficient manager, deserves great credit for what he has done and the condition of his place. Mr. Milton managed to have a crop of fine Beauties in for Christmas, and altogether it has been a very successful season. In speaking of two-year-old Bridesmaids, his experience was that young stock gave them finer blooms and there was very little difference in ultimate results.

Elwood Brant has leased James Slaughter's old place, which consists of 44,000 square feet of glass. Beauties, Maids, and Brides are grown here, and Mr. Brant has been very successful, especially with Beauties.

At Marmaduke Tilden's, genial M. McNulty has everything in fine condition. This place has about 20,000 feet of glass. Here also there was an immense crop of Beauties in for Christmas, and everything shows great promise.

There is but a 25-foot road dividing the places of L. A. and L. M. Noe. The former has 45,000 square feet of glass, and a new house is being built by Lord & Burnham. Jos. Ruzicka is foreman here and deserves credit for the condition and results of his Beauties; 400 extra grade blooms had been cut that day ready for shipment. He will soon have a good crop of Meteors. The Brides and Maids have been badly attacked with eel-worm.

L. M. Noe's place consists of some 50,000 feet of glass. Here also a new house has just been finished by Lord & Burnham. Ed Laesser is in charge here, and Meteors have been very fine with him this season.

There is a good deal of the same thing to be seen in every place in Madison. Crops promise to be good from now on till after Easter. American Beauties at $1.50 each is the Madison rose grower's ideal.

We notice that a few of the places employ cheap Italian labor, and their stock shows it. One cannot expect blood from a stone, and the attempt to disregard intelligence usually ends disastrously. Good rose soil is becoming scarcer every year in this section; many of the smaller growers even now have to purchase their turf dearly. It is possible that carnations and violets will take the place now occupied by roses in many a house in this section. D. Shannon reports fair success with his house of violets this season.

We hope to be able to visit others out there before long.

NEPHROLEPIS WITTBOLDII.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of this splendid new fern that originated with the Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago. After having watched this new fern for a year or more, we are convinced that it will take a high position among commercial ferns. It possesses all the desirable characteristics of the Boston fern and is decidedly more ornamental. As will be noted by a glance at the second picture, in which a frond of the Boston fern and N. Wittboldii are photographed side by side, the new fern has a frond much broader than the other and the undulation of the margins of the pinnae add very much to its beauty.

The past year's experience has proven that it is as tough as the Boston fern, grows as rapidly, and can be as quickly increased, a point of very great importance in a commercial fern. It was found among some small plants of the Boston fern, but seems to be an entirely distinct species.

BUFFALO.

Business has been only fairly good, and spotty, not continuous all along the line. Carnations are now plentiful and so are violets. Very fine roses are coming from George Fancourt and other quarters.

It is just worth mentioning that the agreement into which we all entered in December and which was given good and conspicuous notice in the daily papers, had precisely the desired effect and met with the admiration of other lines of business. Not a beggar have we had since, and although the volume of business done is not so much, there is just as much change in the till.

Next to being at the wonderful New York banquet was the pleasure of interviewing Messrs. Rudd, Cowell and Palmer on their return. It must have been a dandy. Our Buffalo man, Cowell, absented himself, we are told, and the reason was he had left his full dress suit at home. What a pity. He really looks better in a good business suit. Claw hammer coats look best accompanied by an extremely bald head. Mr. Rudd's subtle and impressionable intellectuality seemed indented with that southern story of darky hospitality and grateful reciprocity which we further retailed at a business men's smoker on the following day, and its recitation was appreciated by the rector of our parish. Thank you, Mr. Carmody.

In company with Mr. Henry Wise, of East Aurora; W. J. Kasting and W. J. Palmer, Jr., we visited last week the houses of Palmer & Son, at Lancaster. Their dozen houses of carnations are in splendid form, stems and flowers of the finest quality. White Cloud, Flora Hill, Daybreak, Bradt, Joost, Jubilee, are the leading varieties grown, but besides these there are two varieties that the firm hold in the highest estimation; these are two sports of Daybreak, one a grand white and the other a pink, not so dark as Victor. Mr. Palmer grows his carnations in a heavy clay loam, and this seems the stuff to produce a great stem and substance in the flower. The roses are looking well, but the Beauties are rather shy of bloom. Princess of Wales violet is here largely grown and the firm says they sell well. In a long violet house the plants in a solid bed are fairly good, while those grown in the Balsley bottomless violet pot are no good; this is strange, as we hear very different results from some sources.

The club held a good meeting last week and the president appointed three committees, composed of the most active members: On arrangements, J. F. Cowell, chairman; on entertainments, W. F. Kasting, chairman; and on reception, W. Scott, chairman. The hall selected for the exhibition is very near, in fact next door, to the Genesee hotel, which will be naturally headquarters, and the Colonial parlors is a fine place for Mr. Will Craig to say: "Gentlemen, please come to order." Anyone wishing to secure rooms at the Genesee might as well do it in advance and can either write to the hotel or send their order to W. F. Kasting or William Scott.

Mr. Michael Bloy, who began his gardening career with W. S. many years ago, is leaving Buffalo to fill the position of foreman at the park greenhouses, Denver, Col. "Mike" has the respect and best wishes of all who ever came in contact with him, for his conduct demands it; his field of action being always circumscribed, he has never had a full field for his energies, but being a natural born gardener we shall be surprised if he doesn't now make his mark.

Very blustery, wintry weather has come and the drummers have begun. Mr. Joe Rolker was first and then in came the veteran J. Barclay, of Chicago, whose description of Inverness, Gaelic sermons, bare legs and porridge is very entertaining as well as instructive. W. S.

BOSTON.

Transvaal conditions still ensue here. The salesmen were not only obliged to retreat, but in many cases to surrender unconditionally. And the veldt is strewn with debris of battle, being mostly good roses and second-class carnations. The greatest rout took place at the end of last week, when pink growers asked for mercy and took what they could get gratefully. This (Monday) morning there is a tendency to scarcity in everything, especially on good customers. But there is a couple more Tugelas for the buyers to cross in order to gain the winter's campaign. We are going to call out all the reserves for Easter and Memorial day.

Our W. H. Elliott expects an onslaught in coming campaigns, evidently, and contemplates heavy additions to the glass fortifications on the slope of his kopje out at Brighton. Most of the addition will be concealed by the peculiar vine under which Mr. Elliott so likes to recline while indulging in reveries for the future and recriminations of the past.

Presumably the charges made by Chief Gunner Hutson will offset any advances made by the enemy.

W. S. Wilson, at Burnside Conservatories, Wellesley, is to add two 150-foot houses to his plant next summer. This winter's output goes to show that good use will be made of it.

The Carnation Society meets February 15. Those planning to sing "Put Me Off at Buffalo" on that day can have it done at less expense by communicating with Wm. Nicholson, of South Framingham, who has promised of low rates to that place for the occasion. B. T.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There has been a big demand for roses and carnations during the past week. Receipts continue light and the retailers are hustling around to secure enough stock to fill orders. All growers report a light crop and have hopes that the bright weather which we are now having will produce a better cut for the coming week.

Good roses are selling well and the demand for all kinds of flowers bids fair to continue brisk until Lent.

The condition of the rose market is due, undoubtedly, more to the smallness of the crop generally than to any special increase in the consumption.

Brides, Meteors and Maids of the first grade sell as high as $8 per 100; Perles and Woottons from $4 to $5. Ammann's Perles and Meteors are in great demand. Carnations are not overplentiful and the demand is great. Scotts and Daybreaks are at their best and bring $2 and $2.50. All white, which sells well for funeral work, has been plentiful the past week. Scarlets have a good call, but choice stock is scarce. The Kirkwood florists are sending in fine blooms, which sell well. This place is also a great center for California violets. The Ude family send in about the best. Quite a lot of them were sold the past week for 40 cents per 100. Later in the week they went up to 50 and 60 cents. Small singles sold at 20 cents per 100. Bulbous stock seems quite scarce and Romans and paper whites went up $3 for the best; seconds, $2. Good valley brings $4 and is very fine. Callas bring $10 and good Harrisii $12.50; a few short stemmed tulips were seen, but too short to bring much; smilax still plentiful but in little demand.

Shipping trade at the wholesale houses is good and quite a lot of shipments were made during the past week.

Notes.

The meeting of the Florists' Club will be held on the afternoon of Feb. 8, at 3 p. m. A lot of very important business is to be transacted at this meeting that will require a full attendance. The final report of the exhibition committee will be read; the euchre committee will have the tickets at the meeting for those who have none, and the question of "Shall we hold a show this year?" will be discussed. President Ammann says that he would like to see a large attendance, especially some of the old timers that have not been at a meeting for a long time.

The euchre, which takes place Feb. 23, is progressing nicely and some of the florists report that they have sold already quite a lot of tickets and have made a call for more, so the indications are that the euchre will be a great success.

R. F. Tesson reports that they, Ellison & Tesson, have been very busy the past week with lunches and decorations, and Mrs. Ayers reports plenty of funeral work.

Jos. F. Dickman, the seedsman, reports that the seed business is beginning to look bright, with plenty of orders for seeds and bulbs to fill when the season opens, which is not far off.

Ostertag Bros. report that their business in prepared palms has increased greatly. Cut flower trade with them has also been good.

Fred Ammann's prize Perle plants are selling fast, and they should, as they are the best I have seen for some time.

Kuehn and Berning both report that they never saw the market so scarce as the past week. They sell out early in the morning and after the orders are filled nothing is left but a little rubbish.

Bowling.

The cold weather on Monday night kept many away from the alleys and only five regulars braved the cold and rolled five games. A few good scores were made. This ends the January series of fifteen games. Charlie Kuehn is high man with an average of 156 per game. Mr. Kuehn also made the highest single score during the month. Kunz came in second and Beneke third. The scores and averages are as follows:

BALTIMORE.

Last week things in the trade here brightened up very perceptibly. Flowers went off much better and, thanks to the bright sunshine and clear, fresh atmosphere, they were far better in color and form than during the muggy, warm and cloudy weather of the preceding fortnight. One class of vendors we have, like the poor, always with us—the street fakirs. Recently there has been noticed on our streets an innovation for this latitude—a portable glass box, from which the flowers are sold, and lately an addition has been made to this vociferous, not to say industrious colony which justifies anyone saying, with John Randolph of Roanoke, "The Greeks are at your doors!"

What is described as one of the most effective, as well as elaborate, room decorations seen in this city for several years was that at the Perin ball, at Lehmann's Hall, the author and finisher of which was Mr. William J. Halliday. It is needless to say that, as with all of that blood, the taste for floral adornment is congenial with him, and that the materials in his hands assumed almost of themselves graceful forms and pictures of beauty. Smilax was used in such profusion that the effect was as though a tent of verdure canopied the dancing throng, whilst around the walls were stately palms, bay trees and blooming acacias. American Beauties, Bridesmaids, orchids and asparagus were used in profusion to bank the mantels and surround the mirrors, and the effect of the whole is said to have been charming and graceful.

Mr. Harry A. Parr, a gentleman identified with large business enterprises in this city, owning a handsome estate a few miles out in its suburbs, where he has already a large range of glass houses, has determined to go into the production of cut flowers commercially, and is making preparations to build three houses, each 250 feet long, to grow American Beauty and other roses and carnations. His gardener, Mr. William Paul Binder, is well known as a successful producer of seedling chrysanthemums, and locally recognized as the most successful and extensive grower of mushrooms in this vicinity, his large house built especially for their growth being a sight to behold when the crop is in its best state.

The Golden Gate rose is growing into popular favor here, and on our fashionable promenades is now seen frequently worn by the fair Baltimoreans. Its delicious perfume, delicate coloring and long, stiff stems deserve this recognition, but until very lately it has not been a variety much known here, though in Washington it is one of the favorites of fashion.

It was found under our city's new charter that the plants for use in our public square would have to be bought, after advertising for proposals, so that now Mr. Charles L. Seybold, the new landscape gardener of the park board, invites bids for supplying 190,000. Growers will have to furnish bonds to perform faithfully any contracts awarded them, and each bidder is required to deposit a certified check for 5 per cent of the amount of his bid.

It is ever found that on busy men new burdens are always laid. We notice by the daily prints that Mr. Edward A. Seidewitz, whom one might suppose would be kept busy with the care of his Lexington street store, his extensive nurseries at Annapolis, and the discharge of his public duties as mayor of that "ancient city," has now had put under his care the domestic animals of our state capital, and has been elected president of its Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals! A few nights ago the Masonic lodge to which he belongs presented him with a costly past-master's jewel. He seems to be as popular as he is busy.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business has improved considerably the past week, especially the cut flower end of it; however, it is not up to the standard, or at least not what it should be at this time of year. Balls and parties have been quite numerous and there have been several large weddings the past week. Hugh Graham reports an exceptionally busy week, having had several large balls and two very large weddings.

Prices.

Beauties, $1 to $7.20 per doz.; Brides and Maids, $3 to $8, fancy $10 to $12; Kaiserin, Meteor and Golden Gate, $3 to $8; Gontiers, $3 to $4; Perles, $3 to $8; cattleyas, $40 to $80; cypripediums, $15; dendrobiums, $25; carnations, ordinary $1, fancy $1.50 to $2, novelties $3 to $4 per 100; hyacinths, $2 to $4; valley, $3 to $4; narcissus, $3 to $4; tulips, $4; violets, single 25 to 40 cents, double 50 cents to $1; mignonette, $2 to $4; adiantum, $1; asparagus, 50 cents; smilax, $15; freesias, $1 to $4.

Notes.

W. H. Patton, formerly with J. J. Habermehl's Sons, has branched out for himself and opened a retail store at 1627 No. Twentieth street. The ladies' night on Wednesday evening was a decided success. The ladies were out in full force. The event opened at 8 p. m. with a concert, then came refreshments, and the balance of the evening was devoted to playing various games. All present report a pleasant evening.

The meeting of the Penna. Hort. Society on Tuesday last was well attended and there were quite a number of good exhibits.

C. W. Cox exhibited a new form of cyclamen. The plant is of a very compact habit, well flowered, and many of the blooms being feathered.

BALTIMORE.

Last week things in the trade here brightened up very perceptibly. Flowers went off much better and, thanks to the bright sunshine and clear, fresh atmosphere, they were far better in color and form than during the muggy, warm and cloudy weather of the preceding fortnight. One class of vendors we have, like the poor, always with us—the street fakirs. Recently there has been noticed on our streets an innovation for this latitude—a portable glass box, from which the flowers are sold, and lately an addition has been made to this vociferous, not to say industrious colony which justifies anyone saying, with John Randolph of Roanoke, "The Greeks are at your doors!"

Silver Cup Awarded by the Chrysanthemum Society of America to Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., for their seedling Goldmine, which scored the highest average for 1899.

What is described as one of the most effective, as well as elaborate, room decorations seen in this city for several years was that at the Perin ball, at Lehmann's Hall, the author and finisher of which was Mr. William J. Halliday. It is needless to say that, as with all of that blood, the taste for floral adornment is congenial with him, and that the materials in his hands assumed almost of themselves graceful forms and pictures of beauty. Smilax was used in such profusion that the effect was as though a tent of verdure canopied the dancing throng, whilst around the walls were stately palms, bay trees and blooming acacias. American Beauties, Bridesmaids, orchids and asparagus were used in profusion to bank the mantels and surround the mirrors, and the effect of the whole is said to have been charming and graceful.

Mr. Harry A. Parr, a gentleman identified with large business enterprises in this city, owning a handsome estate a few miles out in its suburbs, where he has already a large range of glass houses, has determined to go into the production of cut flowers commercially, and is making preparations to build three houses, each 250 feet long, to grow American Beauty and other roses and carnations. His gardener, Mr. William Paul Binder, is well known as a successful producer of seedling chrysanthemums, and locally recognized as the most successful and extensive grower of mushrooms in this vicinity, his large house built especially for their growth being a sight to behold when the crop is in its best state.

The Golden Gate rose is growing into popular favor here, and on our fashionable promenades is now seen frequently worn by the fair Baltimoreans. Its delicious perfume, delicate coloring and long, stiff stems deserve this recognition, but until very lately it has not been a variety much known here, though in Washington it is one of the favorites of fashion.

It was found under our city's new charter that the plants for use in our public square would have to be bought, after advertising for proposals, so that now Mr. Charles L. Seybold, the new landscape gardener of the park board, invites bids for supplying 190,000. Growers will have to furnish bonds to perform faithfully any contracts awarded them, and each bidder is required to deposit a certified check for 5 per cent of the amount of his bid.

It is ever found that on busy men new burdens are always laid. We notice by the daily prints that Mr. Edward A. Seidewitz, whom one might suppose would be kept busy with the care of his Lexington street store, his extensive nurseries at Annapolis, and the discharge of his public duties as mayor of that "ancient city," has now had put under his care the domestic animals of our state capital, and has been elected president of its Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals! A few nights ago the Masonic lodge to which he belongs presented him with a costly past-master's jewel. He seems to be as popular as he is busy.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business has improved considerably the past week, especially the cut flower end of it; however, it is not up to the standard, or at least not what it should be at this time of year. Balls and parties have been quite numerous and there have been several large weddings the past week. Hugh Graham reports an exceptionally busy week, having had several large balls and two very large weddings.

Prices.

Beauties, $1 to $7.20 per doz.; Brides and Maids, $3 to $8, fancy $10 to $12; Kaiserin, Meteor and Golden Gate, $3 to $8; Gontiers, $3 to $4; Perles, $3 to $8; cattleyas, $40 to $80; cypripediums, $15; dendrobiums, $25; carnations, ordinary $1, fancy $1.50 to $2, novelties $3 to $4 per 100; hyacinths, $2 to $4; valley, $3 to $4; narcissus, $3 to $4; tulips, $4; violets, single 25 to 40 cents, double 50 cents to $1; mignonette, $2 to $4; adiantum, $1; asparagus, 50 cents; smilax, $15; freesias, $1 to $1.

Notes.

W. H. Patton, formerly with J. J. Habermehl's Sons, has branched out for himself and opened a retail store at 1627 No. Twentieth street. The ladies' night on Wednesday evening was a decided success. The ladies were out in full force. The event opened at 8 p. m. with a concert, then came refreshments, and the balance of the evening was devoted to playing various games. All present report a pleasant evening.

The meeting of the Penna. Hort. Society on Tuesday last was well attended and there were quite a number of good exhibits.

C. W. Cox exhibited a new form of cyclamen. The plant is of a very compact habit, well flowered, and many of the blooms being feathered.

Adolphus Bingham, Camden, N. J., delivered an interesting address on how to produce a crop of lettuce in December and January.

John Kuber was awarded a certificate of merit for his new carnation, Mrs. Bertram Lippincott, a perfect flower of the Daybreak type.

Francis Canning exhibited a fine specimen of Begonia incarnata.

Jos. Beavis, of Sixteenth and Cayuga streets, is sending in some fine Brides and Bridesmaids, also some fine carnations. Mr. B. has been building on the plot of ground he purchased at Lime Hill pike and Haines street, and this coming spring he will move all his Sixteenth street houses to the new place.

January Balls.

The January balls in Philadelphia are almost entirely useless from a florist's standpoint. That this fact is not generally known is proved from the frequency with which these balls are mentioned when the season's prospects for cut flowers are under discussion. A New York grower wrote me last season that he saw we had everything our own way in Philadelphia and that "Graham was evidently coining money." That was during one of the duller weeks of the season, and while Mr. Graham, who had one or two big balls each week, may have been coining money, the rest of us were not.

The explanation is very simple: The fashion of carrying bouquets of flowers or wearing a few choice blooms at a ball has departed and, barring a few dinners before the ball, cut flowers are rarely wanted, excepting at the assemblies. Mr. Graham is not only a florist, but a decorator. He can put in temporary ceilings and drape dear old Horticultural Hall so you wouldn't know it. Its size is changed, balconies come and go, and little rooms appear and disappear in a surprising way. Much bunting and cheesecloth are used, but not so many plants or flowers beyond what Mr. Graham himself can produce. Of course, there are exceptions—every now and then vast quantities of something are needed; but this causes only a ripple on the quiet surface of the cut flower and plant markets.

Perhaps when this condition of affairs is better known our growers will be less disappointed with their mid-winter returns when there is so apt to be a lull in business.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Roses are scarcer than ever, and it might almost be called a rose famine. We hear of sales of fancy tea roses at $12 and $15 a hundred, though many go for $10.

There is an abundance of carnations and violets, though, and prices on them are somewhat easier, especially on the rather large proportion unsuitable for shipping that appears in some lots. Of violets there has been at times quite an oversupply, and there has also been a surplus of valley.

A few pots of the Novelty tulip at Kennicott Bros. Co. is the advance guard of the annual supply from Klehm's.

There is much less miscellaneous stock, such as marguerites, alyssum, etc., than usual, and dealers say they find a good demand for this stock if good.

The funeral of P. D. Armour, Jr., this week called for a lot of stock, but it was mainly for the higher grades and didn't help the market as much as it would had there been a lot of old style design work. Orchids were largely used in addition to other fine flowers, and C. A. Samuelson made a casket cover of violets, which used up 5,000 extra violets from one of McKellar & Winterson's consignors.

McKellar & Winterson, by the way, say that lilac is no novelty in the market, as they have been receiving it for several months past. They are at work on their new supply catalogue, which will be ready very shortly.

E. C. Amling is putting the finishing touches on his new place, and by the addition of hanging baskets of Boston ferns, etc., has given it a summer garden effect. The orchestra will probably come later.

Various Items.

The Florists' Club holds a regular meeting tomorrow (Friday evening) at Handel Hall.

There has been a slight lull in the bowling series and no more reports are due yet.

The weather is of the kind that makes heavy drafts on the coal pile, the outside temperature being below zero most of the time.

HEATING.

Kindly tell me the number of lines of pipe and size of boiler required for heating the following:

Rose house, wooden wall 4 feet high, glass side 2 feet, rafter 12 feet, house 100 feet long and gable; 2,900 feet exposed glass surface and about 350 feet wooden wall surface.

Bedding plant house, 24 feet (both rafters), 100 feet (one end only), one gable about 50 feet; 2,450 feet of glass (no walls).

Palm house, 350 feet glass surface (no walls, they being against potting shed and carnation and rose houses).

Violet house, 1,200 feet glass all told.

Carnation house, 90x24, rafters 12 feet each, one gable about 50 feet; 2,210 feet glass surface and about 325 feet wall surface exposed.

Rose house No. 2, same as carnation house; 2,210 feet glass and 325 feet wall.

This makes a total of 11,320 feet glass and 975 feet wall. W. E. P.

As your correspondent does not say if he desires to use steam or hot water, and if the latter, what sized pipes, I will state the quantities necessary for each system:

If 4-inch castiron pipes with hot water: In rose house No. 1, 9 lines; bedding stock house, 7 lines; palm house, 150 lineal feet; violet house, 3 lines; carnation house, 8 lines; rose house No. 2, 8 lines.

If 2-inch pipes with hot water: Rose house No. 1, 14 lines; bedding stock house, 11 lines; palm house, 240 lineal feet; violet house, 5 lines; carnation house, 12 lines; rose house No. 2, 13 lines.

If one hot water boiler be used, of any standard greenhouse make, it should have about 13 square feet of grate surface, or if two, each should have about 7 feet.

If steam heat is desired, use 1-inch pipes. In rose house No. 1, 1,500 lineal feet; bedding stock house, 1,000 lineal feet; palm house, 300 lineal feet; violet house, 500 lineal feet; carnation house, 1,080 lineal feet; rose house No. 2, 1,170 lineal feet.

The above to be heated by a 25 or 30 horse-power boiler.

The above distribution of heating surfaces are arranged to maintain easily an approximate temperature, in coldest nights, of 60 to 65 degrees in rose houses, 45 degrees in bedding stock house, 65 to 70 degrees in palm house, 38 to 40 degrees in violet house, and 55 to 60 in carnation house.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

New York.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting January 25th, and despite the very disagreeable weather there were about forty members present. The new officers were installed with the usual felicitations. The president, Wm. Turner (gardener to Wm. Rockefeller), in taking the chair to preside, assured the society that he not only intended to do his best but that he expected every member to exert himself to make the society an ideal one. Treasurer E. W. Neubrand reported that there were 67 members and a balance of $219 in bank. Six new names were proposed for membership, and altogether the newest society around these parts is already one of the strongest. The executive committee were directed to revise the by-laws (which were those of the New York Gardeners' Society) and make such recommendations at the next meeting as they consider necessary for the workings of the society.

It was decided to hold a flower show in Tarrytown next fall, and F. R. Pierson Co. offered a prize of $25 for a vase of their new chrysanthemum, Col. D. Appleton.

A discussion on carnations was opened by Wm. Scott, who gave his experience with all the modern varieties; he recommended the following sorts as the best: White, White Cloud; Daybreak, the best of its color; Lawson, as one everybody should try; light pink, Mrs. Jas. Dean, which should be started early to give best results; cerise, there was little to choose between New York and Cerise Queen; Crane, the best scarlet; yellow, Eldorado, and striped, Mrs. Bradt.

Several members spoke on the subject. President Turner said that last season, owing to poor results, he decided to discard Mrs. Jas. Dean, but he has since had such splendid crops of fine flowers from that variety he considered it one of the best. His experience taught him that White Cloud and Pingree gave better results if planted inside; they were the only two kinds that did not agree with outdoor culture. J. I. Donlan was called upon to give his views, which he did from a retailer's standpoint.

Cooke & McCord exhibited a vase of carnation John Young, which was awarded a certificate, as was also a bunch of Albertini from John Egan & Sons. Wm. Turner showed a collection of leading varieties of carnations which was awarded a certificate of merit.

A series of interesting lectures and discussions have been arranged for each meeting. Mr. L. A. Martin will read a paper on "The Vegetable Garden" at the meeting February 22nd. An invitation for two representatives to attend the annual dinner of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society at Poughkeepsie, February 7th, was of course accepted, because that promises to be a great event. D.

WASHINGTON.

The cut flower business has been good the past week, with stock scarce, the following retail prices prevailing: Beauties, $4 to $12 per doz.; roses, $1 to $2; good stock, $2 to $3. Carnations, 35 to 50 cents; selects, 75 cents to $1 per doz.; freesia, 75 cents; Romans and paper whites, 50 and 75 cents; tulip, 50 and 75 cents per doz.

The various stores report quite a few orders booked for dinners and wedding decorations in the near future. Gude reports a rush on funeral work. He has a nice display of cyps. in his window this week.

Violets have been plentiful the past week. One dealer cut them to $1 per 100 retail and azaleas at $1 each. The rest of the boys are retailing them at $1.50 and $2 per 100. Mr. Z. D. Blackstone had some very fine Luxonne singles in his window.

J. D. Davidson, formerly with J. L. Loose, and J. Shine, formerly with Mr. Gordon, have moved to their new stand in the center market, doing business as Shine & Davidson.

The florists had a meeting January 24 and organized a club and elected O. A. C. Oehmler president, and J. Shine, secretary. The other officers will be elected at their next meeting, which will be at the call of the secretary, with whom all applications for membership should be left.

The blizzard has struck us and we are promised some zero weather for to-night.

Chas. Wolfe, formerly with Patterson of Pittsburg, and now with A. Gude & Bro., was married last week. O. A. C. O.

SAN FRANCISCO.

With a few business is reported as quite brisk; with others the dullness continues and is very likely to remain so for some time. The weather is fine and springlike, bringing forth our spring flowers in variety, such as primroses, daffodils, snowdrops and pansies. Outside roses are now in full bloom, some very fine buds being cut. Acacia mollissima is in fine bloom; some nice sprays are to be seen at some of our stores.

American Beauties are very scarce, and I might say have been a failure this year so far, stems being weak and flowers small. One of our growers thought he had them good, bringing in to market some with stems nine feet long and flowers as large as Cecil Brunners. He went home with a light pocket and a heavy heart. Prices:

Beauties, $3.50; Bridesmaids, 25 cents to $1; Brides, 25 cents to $1.50; Meteors, 75 cents to $1.50; Perles, 40 cents to $1; Siebrechts, 50 cents per doz.; Cecil Brunners, two dozen for 25 cents. Carnations, Hobarts, $1.25; Crockers, 75 cents; Schwerins, 50 cents; Bradts, 35 cents; Gold Nugget, 35 cents; Flora Hill, 35 to 50 cents; Portia, 25 cents; Scotts, 25 cents; fancy mixed, 50 to 75 cents per dozen. Chrysanthemums, 6 dozen for $1; lily of the valley, 35 to 50 cents per doz.; Romans, scarce, 25 cents per doz.; freesias, 6 dozen for $1; daffodils, $1.75 per 100; paper whites, 40 cents per 100; Harrisli, $2.50 per doz.; smilax, $1 per doz.; violet, Princess of Wales, 30 cents to $1 per dozen bunches; California, 30 to 50 cents per dozen. IMPORT DUTIES.

Decision on Rosa Rugosa.

The merchandise in question was returned by the appraiser as "rose plants," and duty was assessed thereon at 2½ cents per plant under the provision of paragraph 252 of the act of July 24, 1897. It is claimed to be dutiable at 25 per cent ad valorem under said paragraph as "brier rose."

The pertinent part of paragraph 252 is as follows:

Rose plants, budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots, two and one-half cents each; stocks, cuttings and seedlings of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen, shrubs and vines, manetti, multiflora, and brier rose, and all trees, shrubs, plants and vines, commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock, not specially provided for in this Act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

The testimony of a number of witnesses was taken before the board and from that testimony we find:

(1) That the term "rose" as used in trade and commerce signifies a rose plant, and does not mean the cut flowers or blossoms known by that name.

(2) That rose plants are of two classes, namely:

(a) Such as are budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots; that is to say, roses grown exclusively for the bloom, and propagated either by budding or grafting them on to the stock of some wild rose grown from seed, or by cutting a slip from the parent plant and planting it to form an independent plant. Such roses can not be grown from seed, as they are not species and would not come true from seed. They are known as named roses, from the fact that, being produced by artificial means, each new variety, as it is produced, is given some name by its producer, such, for instance, as the General Jacqueminot (commonly called Jack) rose.

(b) Brier roses, which are true species propagated from seed, and always coming true from seed. These are grown mainly for the purpose of serving as the stock on which the named roses are grafted, and are less expensive than the artificially produced roses.

(3) That "grown on their own roots," as applied to rose plants at the time of the passage of the tariff act of July 24, 1897, and prior thereto, means roses grown from slips or cuttings, and not budded, grafted, or grown from seed.

(4) That the merchandise in question is a brier rose plant of the species known as Rosa rugosa; that it has been grown from seed, and is not budded, grafted, or grown on its roots, and that it is commonly known as nursery stock.

We hold that the article before us is dutiable as a brier rose at 25 per cent ad valorem, and accordingly sustain the protest in each case.—Treasury Decisions.

THE annual general catalogue of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, for 1900 has reached us. It is as usual an encyclopedia of gardening to date and is an exceedingly useful book of reference. Some very interesting novelties in flower seeds are offered as well as in vegetable seeds and plants. It is one of those catalogues that everyone in the trade should not fail to have at hand. It covers practically everything in the horticultural line.

We beg to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a copy of the American Florist Company's directory for 1900. The list of those in the trade has been brought up to date and new features are a list of private gardeners and a list of landscape gardeners.

The Right Cypress for Greenhouse Material.

Have you heard of Cypress Greenhouse Material that has not been satisfactory? If you have it does not follow that Cypress is not the best lumber to use. There is White Cypress, Yellow Cypress and Red Cypress; there is Cypress that grows on the high lands and Cypress that grows in the swamps.

All of these different kinds are not suitable for greenhouse purposes. Do you know which kind is best and do you know that kind when you see it? If not you would better buy from those that do know and will deliver exactly what they sell. We introduced Cypress for greenhouse construction and pushed it to the front. We know all about it. For fifteen years we have made a specialty of furnishing it; and during this time we have built up a reputation that we can not afford to jeopardize. We send out the best only.

BASSETT & WASHBURN, 76-78 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.

Messrs. Greene & Underhill are unquestionably the Begonia Rex specialists, than whom there is perhaps none superior in the country. With a stock running into the thousands and consisting of thirty-four distinct varieties, they seem to be splendidly equipped this season to take care of their wholesale trade, which has increased to an extent surpassing their most sanguine expectations. Although no longer enjoying the popularity as of yore, there is nevertheless still a brisk demand for Begonia Rex, some florists finding them just the thing for ferneries, the bright-leaved varieties especially showing up to good effect. Next to begonias, geraniums of all kinds, colors and shapes constitute another of their leading specialties, while their vincas, by the hundreds and thousands, find a ready sale and are being shipped to all sections of the country. What impressed me most during a recent visit to this establishment was their system of specializing things (if I may thus put it). The man having in his care geraniums gives his time and undivided attention to the geranium houses; the genius presiding over the begonias has begonias to care for, think and dream of, while the men in charge of the carnation and rose houses must see to it that the Scott, Albertini, Daybreak and the rest of them "stand up and deliver," and that the Brides and Maids are not slow in coming.

The result is an all around success. I saw Albertini here, not in a vase but on the benches in the process of growing, that could not possibly be surpassed by any seedling of either last or this year's introduction. As to Flora Hill, the solid bed seems to suit it admirably and, barring its stem, which is rather weak, there is not a white carnation today that can equal it.

With twenty-four houses, comprising about 50,000 feet of glass, Messrs. Greene & Underhill's facilities to handle their wholesale trade have never been better. It is quite likely that another house or two will be added during the coming spring.

Mr. A. Stoeckle's new range of houses on Holcum street, three in number, have been completed and are in fine working order. Mr. Stoeckle's violets are as fine as any grown in or about famous Poughkeepsie.

Mr. Skeels has built a new carnation house, 100x25, which is in charge of his son, Mr. Skeels himself taking charge of his downtown place.

Messrs. Clark & Son have added a house to their range on State street.

Business has never been better, while the prospects are decidedly encouraging. S.

KINGSTON, ONT.—Joseph Nicoll, the florist, died Jan. 16 after a year's illness, aged 63 years. He was a native of Montrose, Scotland, and had been a resident of Canada for fifty years.

Sweet Peas for Florists' Planting

Cupids and Burpee's Bush.

These most distinct types have greatly increased and widened the area of successful Sweet Pea culture, as the low compact growth and wonderful root-system of the plants enable them to resist heat and drouth to a much greater extent than the tall-growing sorts, which, under similar unfavorable conditions, are apt to suffer from the red spider and other troubles, the vines drying up after only a brief period of bloom. These new types are not so well adapted for growing in cool, moist locations; the dense, compact growth of foliage being quite apt to "damp off" under such conditions, so that the two distinct types of tall or running growth and the low bush-like and spreading growth should be used to complement each other.

The flowers of the Cupid type are borne on stiff stems, too short for bunching effectively, but quite desirable for boutonnières and design work, strikingly resembling rosebuds when freshly opened. It is as a border or bedding plant that they develop the greatest beauty; the rich, dark-green carpet of foliage being literally hidden by the clusters of lovely flowers. The new Bush Sweet Pea has flowers of large size and fine form, borne on long stems, equally as well suited for bunching as those of the tall-growing varieties, and from present indications we shall soon be able to offer quite a complete assortment of shades and colorings, so that florists having light soils or very dry locations will be able to grow a supply of Sweet Peas for summer cut-flowers quite as readily as those situated in cool, moist locations.

The Best for Forcing is Burpee's "Earliest of All."

For planting under glass we recommend only the tall or running varieties, which can be trained to strings or other supports, although some growers have succeeded splendidly with the Cupids as pot-plants under glass. Our new variety, Burpee's "Earliest of All," is distinctly the finest and most profitable Sweet Pea for forcing, by reason of its extremely early flowering and beautiful coloring. From seed planted in raised beds the last week in August the vines began blooming the last of October, and continued to flower until cut off by the heat of the late spring months. The seed is sown thinly in drills twelve inches apart running across the beds, and the vines supported with light wire stakes. The vines branch freely and furnish a profusion of fine large flowers on long stems, usually three in a spray. The standards are a rich, bright rose, well expanded, and the wings of a creamy white, frequently tinged or spotted with rose, identical in all respects with the popular Blanche Ferry. In the open ground the growth is quite dwarf, only eighteen inches to two feet in height, and the plants are in full flower from a week to ten days in advance of even the Extra Early Blanche Ferry or Emily Henderson, while under glass no other variety at all approaches it in earliness, the ordinary varieties seldom flowering before February, even from seed planted early in the fall.

Popular "Pink and White."

As stated before, the combination of Pink and White, as in the Blanche Ferry, is the most popular coloring in the Sweet Pea. For outdoor planting we recommend that Burpee's "Earliest of All," Extra Early Blanche Ferry, and the regular strain of Blanche Ferry should all be planted, as they will flower in succession in the order named, giving the longest period of bloom.

The Best Two Scarlets.

In scarlet, Salopian is the most glowing in shade. Burpee's Brilliant and the improved "Sunproof" Salopian will best resist the strong sunshine, being free from the blackening of the standard so troublesome with the other scarlet varieties.

All the above are self-colored flowers of the largest size and finest form in their respective colorings, these self-colored flowers being the most popular for bunching. Florists should include also the following fancy or variegated sorts to complete the finest assortment: Gray Friar, violet-purple, watered veining, and shading on a silvery-white ground; Pink Friar, the same markings, but of a soft cerise-pink; Aurora, a grand, large, silvery-white flower, delicately striped and flaked with salmon-pink; Wawona, white, striped with a beautiful heliotrope shade; Lottie Hutchins, daintily flaked with pink on a creamy-white ground; Lottie Eckford and Maid of Honor of the dainty "blue and white" blendings.

The above selections cover an extensive range of shades and colors, but our list of varieties offers many others of distinct shades, suitable for cut-flowers, from which florists can select those most desirable for their needs.

Burpee's Blue List for 1900.

A complete catalogue giving lowest prices possible for Florists and Market Gardeners mailed free upon application. It is a book of 144 pages, giving much useful information and offering all the "Best Seeds that Grow."

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA.

The Best Pure Whites.

Pure white is also a most useful color for florists. The Emily Henderson is the earliest flowering, but rather delicate in texture and with distinct notch at the top of the standard. Blanche Burpee blossoms later, is of very strong growth, and continues longer in flower; the flowers are of very large size, grand form, and good substance, lasting a long time when cut. "Sadie Burpee" is considered by Mr. Eckford his finest variety, "absolutely the grandest white." The vines are of very strong growth, the flowers of extra large size and beautiful shell-like form on long stem. One type of "Sadie Burpee" is distinct in having black seed, so that it can be planted earlier in the spring. Under exceptionally favorable conditions the standards of the longest flowers are "notched" near the base as in Butterfly.

Burpee's Modesty is a creamy white with only the faintest tint of delicate pink, black-seeded and hardy, and would answer well as a white sort.

Pinks of Several Shades.

In pink we recommend Lovely, a soft shell-pink with creamy border; Prima Donna, beautiful light-blush pink; Prince of Wales (an improved Her Majesty), very large, finely hooded flowers of a rich, glowing rose-pink; Hon. F. Bouverie, soft flesh-pink tinted with buff, a most distinct shading; Royal Rose (an improved Apple Blossom), a bright flesh-pink, grandiflora size, and beautiful form.

Clear Light Lavenders.

In lavender we recommend Burpee's New Countess, Lady Nina Balfour, and Lady Grisell Hamilton, all of the most soft and pleasing shades, differing slightly in tint.

Creamy Yellow or Primrose Tints.

In creamy yellow or primrose tints Mrs. Eckford is the deepest in shade, while Queen Victoria is the largest in flower and of finest form. Stella Morse is of a rich apricot tint bordering on buff.

Two Bright Blues.

The rich Burpee's "Navy Blue," introduced last year, is most distinct and one of the finest for cut flowers; vines of strong growth, wonderfully free and continuous bloomer with three and four large flowers on a long stem. The flowers are of a very large size, fine, open form, and a rich violet-blue or purple. Extremely rich, it should be planted by every florist, as it will be, without doubt, the most popular dark-colored variety.

Eckford's Countess Cadogan, also introduced last year, is a most charmingly bright blue of a lighter shade. It is vastly superior to Captain of the Blues, and is sure to become very popular for cut flowers.

The Most "Gorgeous" of All.

For a rich, glowing orange we recommend Burpee's Gorgeous and Lady Mary Currie, which are quite similar in shade, but distinct in form, the latter having a tall, pointed standard. Both are of a rich orange-salmon tint, with darker and richer veinings. A most distinct and striking shade.

The Best Orange-Pink.

Lady Penzance has been for years a great favorite, but is now surpassed by Burpee's Oriental. This is the largest and finest in coloring of this type (unless we place Lady Mary Currie in the same class), and it does not fade under the hottest sun.

The Best Very Dark Varieties.

For the darkest and richest colors aside from Navy Blue we would plant Othello, a beautiful dark brown with satiny finish; and Duke of Westminster, a deep maroon, both of the largest size.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Your correspondent called on Brown & Son a few days ago and found them busy as usual. They have an old, established trade, and are the oldest florists in town.

The Humfeld Floral Co. seem to be doing their share of the business.

Sam Murray has the store at the Coats House Conservatory. Sam is one of the men in our business who knows what is good, and, if it is to be had, he will have it.

Miss Dally uses the cut of one of the large establishments near the city and still needs more flowers. Miss J. E. Murry, at the Midland hotel, still has a good business, but complains of the scarcity of stock of good quality.

A call at Newell's found him busy as ever. Mr. Editor, if you ever come to Kansas City, just you intimate to Mr. Newell that you would like to see the city, and he will order his horse at once and I think he can show you more improvements in our thrifty city in a two hours' drive than you would see in a week looking around alone. Newell has a No. 1 horse, there is no mistake about it.

We found Mr. Wm. Rock's place undergoing repairs and decorations and himself and whole force as busy as they could be fixing for a small wedding, and we just had time to say, "We are glad to see you so busy." He is certainly laying a foundation for a successful business. His motto is "Good stock and good prices."

We note the Kellogg Flower Store is under a new management. Two of his daughters, Mrs. Lamb and Miss E. Kellogg are looking after their father's interest and they seem to be succeeding.

We will take a stroll soon to see what preparations are being made for Easter. UNION.

IF IN CHICAGO, take a look at how we handle stock. We need say no more, that in itself will tell you where to buy stock if a buyer; it will also tell where to ship if a grower.

MONTREAL.

The annual meeting of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held in the Cathcart hall, on Monday evening, January 22nd, at 8 o'clock. The attendance of members was excellent. The treasurer's and secretary's reports were hardly as favorable as in previous years, but the depression is temporary only. The failure to hold a show no doubt accounting for several subscriptions being unpaid.

The officers elected were: President, Mr. George A. Robinson; first vice-president, Mr. A. Pinateau; second vice president, Walter Whiting; treasurer, Walter Wilshire; secretary, William Horobin, 130 Tupper street, Montreal; assistant secretary, Fred Bennett. Executive Committee: John Walsh, James McKenna, William Wilshire, John Eddy, C. A. Smith, W. Hall, who, with the retiring president, Mr. Alfred C. Wilshire, constitute the board of management.

The banquet will be held at McHugh's hotel, Lachine, on the 29th.

FRED BENNETT,
Retiring Secretary.

UTICA, N. Y.

The evening of Saturday, Jan. 20, a party of florists from Syracuse visited this city and was entertained by Utica florists. An elaborate collation was served, and toasts were responded to by many of those present. Later in the evening the florists from Syracuse and their local brethren engaged in a bowling contest at the Maennerchor bowling alleys. After a close and exciting game the Uticans won by a small margin.

Those present from Syracuse were: R. H. C. Bard, David Campbell, George Ham, Richard Davis, Charles A. Fox, W. B. Dow, Joseph Huller, Henry Burt and Charles Smiley. The Syracusans left on the 12:30 train for their homes. The Utica florists will visit Syracuse in the near future.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Geo. S. Osborn has a bench of Bradt that does one's eyes good to look at. Scott, White Cloud and Triumph are fine and bring on an average 75 cents per dozen, a proof of the quality, as 35 cents is the usual figure in this state for a decent carnation.

Many of the new kinds will be tried and the drummer who knows all about the good qualities of the debutantes and none of their failings is the successful genius who will book the orders.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather is of that kind that darkens the houses, freezes the glass, covers all nature with drifting flurries of snow; flowers refuse to bloom under such conditions, and are consequently scarce, while shipping orders are more numerous than any time since the holidays.

Roses are still off crop; carnations, except red, about equal to demand, while violets are not blooming near as freely as last week.

American Beauties are selling from 25 to 75 cents each; other roses, $1.50 per doz.; Harrisii, $2; violets, 20 cents; Romans and valley, 75 cents per doz.

The repotting of geraniums and other bedding stock has begun and from now on until the robins sing it will be one continuous hustle to get every line of stock in proper condition for spring trade. GEO. F. CRABB.

WELLSVILLE, O.—W. A. Herbert reports that trade in cut flowers is very good, in fact better than ever before.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—E. J. Bush has added a rose house, 20x100, and a carnation house, 15x100. This is good evidence of increased business, and trade at the holidays was never better. The issuing of an annual general list to amateurs has been found to be a profitable plan.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants at 75c per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

NEW CARNATIONS...

FLOWERING FOURTH YEAR.

"Lady Minto."

Flower 2½ to 3 inches. Pure white ground and not too heavily penciled red. Fragrant. Free and continuous bloomer. Good calyx and long, stiff stem.

This handsome flower is a favorite, sells on sight and will be found in the front rank of the variegated sorts.

"Lady Van Horne."

Unquestionably of the purest shade of cerise pink, and magnificently brilliant when seen by artificial light.

A perfectly symmetrical flower, 2½ to 3 inches, on long, stiff, wiry stem, and no bursting of calyx. Early and continuous. An ideal flower in every respect.

ELM CITY A Grand New White....

Carnation

Seedling of Lizzie McGowan and Mme. Diaz Albertini, in its fifth year.

The flowers are large, finely shaped and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong, after the style of Mme. Albertini, and none bursting; the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted Cuttings ready February 1st, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, or $70 per 1000. Cash with order. We shall prepay the express where money accompanies the order. Orders filled in rotation.

THE NEW CENSUS.

We have received from Washington a copy of the blank schedule that is being mailed to florists for the purpose of securing full and complete data regarding commercial floriculture for the census now being taken.

The census of 1891 was the first one in which commercial floriculture was considered and the figures were naturally very incomplete. It is to be hoped that all in the trade will cooperate heartily with the census officials in their efforts to do the trade full justice in the present census.

If you have not received a copy of the schedule you may obtain one by addressing L. G. Powers, Chief Statistician in Charge of Agriculture, Census Office, Washington, D. C.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—John Karsten has erected a fine office and workroom in addition to two houses for palms and ferns. He is much encouraged by the steady increase in business and intends to further enlarge his place next summer. He noted an increased demand for pot plants during the holidays.

WARSAW, N. Y.—Business is good. Some of the florists report the best trade in years. To meet the demand of his rapidly growing trade H. S. Baker is preparing to build another house, 15x50. Owing to ill-health, D. W. McKinley has been compelled to give up his business and has disposed of his house and stock to Geo. Goodale, of Perry.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago.

JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

C. C. POLLWORTH Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

W. A. KENNEDY.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

Macomb, Ill.

F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.

L. H. BAILEY.

Ithaca, N. Y.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

OTT BROWN.

Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.

JAS. HARTSHORNE.

Joliet, Ill.

I am greatly pleased with the Manual.

C. J. REARDON.

Lake Geneva, Wis.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

The Window.

Frozen windows have always been cause for anxiety and serious consequences to many florists. Of course the up-to-date establishment has its coil of steam or hot water pipes along the bottom of the window, but the vast majority of stores have not, and depend on the efficacies of circumstances for all that is bright. If there be any time when flowers are more beautiful and cheerful than another, it is when the ground is covered with snow and most of the windows are covered with ice; it is then that the vase of brilliant colored flowers, artistically arranged in your window, is most admired and appeals not in vain to the lover of flowers.

To the florist's store and window which merely looks like the dying embers of life and ambition, these winter curtains of ice are a godsend, for they not only obliterate for a time the eyesores of bad taste and second-hand stock, but they are also a shield for economy. The wideawake florists dread a frozen window; they know that a traveler's eye in winter is quickly caught by anything bright, that a bunch of scarlet carnations or red roses in the center of your window is worth more than all the pale frivolities you can manufacture. To keep the window clean and bright in extreme cold weather is therefore a serious problem to many.

We know many fine stores where there are elaborate arrangements of steam pipes. This is, of course, the cleanest mode of heating, but very often the steam is a laggard or truant when most wanted. The hot water system is a favorite with some because it is easier managed and more to be trusted. Poorer florists have to take recourse to many cruder modes of fighting Jack Frost. We have found the Lehman wagon heater to be a very valuable thing, not only for the delivery of goods, but to prevent windows from freezing up, and no florist in extremely cold climate should be without one. Salt will melt the ice on the window and you can afterward syringe it with salty water; get your glass dry and shut off draughts.

Plants may not freeze if not touching the glass, but cold chills are as bad for them as they are for you. It is a mistake to water plants in your window wintry nights; do your watering in the daytime, and with tepid water. When the weather is very cold it is always best and safest to arrange your window plants a little back from the glass; have them form an emphasizing background to your cut flower display in front. You know a nicely arranged group of ferns or palms is a thing of enchanting beauty, especially in this season of the year, and if flowers are used with them as a window display, try to introduce as much color as possible; a superabundance of white is poor attraction.

If you have electric lights—always a pretty window—and are situated where traffic runs late, it will pay you to leave one or two lights lit all night, for memory clings to beauty, especially so in this case. Did you ever stand in the middle of a shop street and wonder how all the little and big places made a living, or even existed at all? Stand there as long as you may, and you seem to never see any customers go near them. We've often stood in deep contemplation over this as it applies to florists' stores; it's a mystery to know how many of them exist, not because there are too many florists' stores, for there is room for many more, but for the half-dead-and-alive and slovenly manner in which they keep their stores; 'tis quite true that everyone cannot put on the frills of a Broadway or Fifth avenue florist, but cleanliness is not only health, it is wealth, especially to the poor, and to a business.

This world judges by general appearance; it has neither time nor inclination to investigate those "appearances." If you die a millionaire and wear rags you are but a tramp; if penniless and in good clothes you are prosperous—in the eyes of the public. If you keep your store clean and bright, and show good taste in what you offer for sale, people imagine you have a good trade and will patronize you; no business ever yet prospered on sympathy alone, for that is a scarce and unreliable food.

Your window may be small, but you can make it beautiful if you will.

Away with all the rubbish and artificial stuff; the poorest citizen of the United States loves natural flowers and plants and admires them wherever they are shown. It is the florist who displays such goods and tries to push them on his customers who is far behind the times. It is wrong to imagine that even in the poorest sections it is necessary to plaster the walls with wire designs and things which will never be sold; a clean, shelfless wall with a nice plant against it is far more beautiful than dust laden boards piled with ancient mementos. It is quite true that most people when ordering want to see wire frames, and for this purpose one or two specially made frames should be kept conveniently out of sight; there is no sense, however, in any florist turning his place into an "Old Curiosity Shop." My friends, the present age is against such, and prosperity seldom, if ever, smiles upon those who ignore advancement. If your store happens to be in a squalid locality, don't be satisfied with the tone of your surroundings; rise above it and display your individuality and ideas; never fear they will be rewarded.

Someone has said the florist should not make up funeral designs in his store where people can see him, for the reason that such designs impart melancholy thoughts; well, perhaps it is more cheerful, if less profitable, to make up bridal bouquets in full view, but our opinion is that you should try hard never to be ashamed of your work, no matter what it is. If you are making up a fine funeral design, don't hide it; make it up where all can see it, and after it is finished put it either in your window or where the passerby can admire it. A floral design is by no means a reminder, like that of the coffin; a well made design is more apt to excite admiration and inspire grandest thoughts. Yes, 'tis true, "a thing of beauty is a joy forever," and flowers in any form are more likely to be a harbinger of joys than of sorrow.

We have known of many cases in New York where customers were afraid to leave large orders with their regular florist, because they thought he was too busy to pay special attention to their affairs; the florist may have lost the profit on an order, but his reputation became enriched and the customer was sure to return. People, as a rule, like to see you busy; it is one of the mysteries how we all like to deal where there is an overflow of life or business. No, no, it is not the magnetic influence of the "bar-gain counter"; it is more often quality and refinement.

Everything is in a name when relating to business, and the poorest and most ignorant, who are often the most pretentious, will go where they imagine they can get all they want, and whilst it is very desirous to always appear to have plenty of good stock on hand, still it is not absolutely necessary if you have the good luck to be near the wholesalers. The most important thing is quality, the next variety, and the third quantity. In these days of oversupply (so-called) and quick transportation, you can easily fill orders, but have your sample to sell from. Never under any circumstances permit a good customer—or, for that matter, any buyer—to see stale and withering flowers in your store; they generally prove to be your worst enemies. An oversupply of any particular flower, whilst it may enable you to make a great display, only tends to cheapen it in the eyes of many.

Funeral Flowers.

What can be responsible for the cold and miserable request, "Please omit flowers"? Is it the awful designs and colors we see sent (for which the poor florist is very often unjustly blamed), the attributes of economy, or the throbs of a calloused heart? Whatever it be, 'tis an unpleasant thing to investigate, but we notice that though the "requests" are becoming more frequent, they are in most cases being ignored; this is particularly the case among the wealthier classes. We know it is not uncommon for clergymen to advise poor people not to spend their money for floral tokens for their beloved dead, but the same men do not hesitate in asking these poor people to buy flowers for the churches. Oh, consistency, what a jewel thou art!

A wealthy invalid lady died in New York last week, and despite the "omit flowers" some of the finest floral work seen here for some time was sent to the funeral; she was buried at Newport, R. I., and J. H. Small & Sons had charge of the flowers; one of the designs made by this firm was a heart containing two thousand lily of the valley and a cluster of Testouts in the center; no green was visible; it was very pretty. Another was an eight-foot cross of Lillium Harrisii. There were several fine designs in violets, orchids, and valley. Arthur Merritt, who had charge of the flowers at Newport, says that the weather was intensely cold there, and that the lilies when frozen were stiff and even more beautiful than when not; violets turned a bluish black, but most of the other flowers looked grand with their crystallization of frost. This, of course, would not be the case were the flowers taken to a house or church instead of direct to the cemetery, so don't bother protecting your flowers in such a case; rather sprinkle them and let them freeze.

IVERA.

THE SILVER LEAF.

We have received from Mr. E. Rudowsky, Dresden, Germany, samples of the "Silver Leaves" prepared by him, and he asks if we think they would be apt to meet with favor in America. The leaves are 4 to 5 inches long, 1 to 1½ inches broad at the widest part, and covered with fine white hair that gives them a remarkable silvery effect. It is a natural leaf, but is prepared for use by some process after being taken from the tree. He gives the name of the tree as Leucodendron argenteum.

He states that these leaves are extensively used in decorative work in Germany, in wreaths, bouquets, etc., and for Christmas, New Year and birthday cards.

We sent the specimens to "Ivera" for his opinion, and he replies as follows:

"The samples of silver leaves sent by Mr. Rudowsky are very fine. Although very little is known of this material in connection with American floral art, many of the oldest artists are cognizant of its existence. It was first introduced in New York as decorative material a little over twelve years ago. Very little of it has been used, for since then we have only very rarely seen it arranged in wreaths as a show-piece for the florist's window. All these years we have known of but one sale as an exclusive design. They have been used scantily in dried work, but the days of that class of work in this country have passed away, never to return.

"The smaller sized leaf is purchasable in New York at present at 75 cents per 100 up. They make a beautiful wreath and can be bent to any curve, but they are only adaptable here for silver weddings, for which they are specially suitable. We have such an abundance of fine natural flowers and greens always on our market that anything prepared or artificial (except in the cheaper grades of trade) is unpopular. Still, these silver leaves are so pretty that a more extensive use of them might be encouraged, not only in the obscure uses they are put to here, but as an important item in the finest of decorative work."

THE AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Next week, February 15th and 16th, will be held in Buffalo, N. Y., the meeting and exhibition of this society, and the promise is that it will be the banner meeting of the society.

No matter what the promise is, we want everyone interested in carnations to try and attend this meeting. If we can get the attendance as near the two hundred mark as we usually have it to the hundred mark, we can by another season easily procure from the railroads the rate and one-third usually enjoyed by societies of this kind, and after the attendance from outside points is once brought up to the two hundred mark, the attraction of the meetings and exhibitions will easily keep it up to that mark. All that is necessary to get a regular attendant to these meetings is to get him there once, and there will have to be something very serious interfere if he is not back the next year.

With carnations such a prominent feature with so many growers all over the country, there is no reason why the membership of this society should not be five times its present enrollment, and all that is needed to get it up to this point is the proper presentation of facts by the members in their various localities and the bringing along to the meeting of a few of the stragglers.

Retail men and commission men are quite as much interested in the welfare of the carnation as the growers, and should be well represented at these meetings to see that their end of the business receives proper attention. The silver cup offered by the society to the store men should bring out an exhibit worthy of the prize and Buffalo will no doubt be the beginning of a new era on these lines.

It is too late now to get a premium list sent you for the meeting, but any grower who has an exhibit need not be deterred from bringing or sending it along and being assured that it will receive proper attention. Exhibits must be prepaid and addressed to Chas. H. Keitsch, 481 Washington St., Buffalo, N. Y.

The meetings will be held in the Genesee Hotel, and the exhibition in the hall next door.

Registration.

Mr. J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., registers: Queen-Louise—A strong grower, no grass, every shoot producing a flower; very strong stem; an early and continuous bloomer; pure, white, fragrant, does not burst, and as large as Bradt.

Mr. A. R. Walker, Flint, Mich., registers: "Michigan"—Color dark red; a seedling from McGowan; freer in bloom than Scott, and blooms the whole season through from time of planting in until thrown out. Stem wiry and from 15 to 24 inches long. Foliage dark green and healthy; the cuttings easy to root and the plants easy to lift in the fall.

ALBERT M. HERR, Secy.

Lancaster, Pa.

The ninth annual convention of the American Carnation Society will be held in Buffalo, N. Y., next Thursday and Friday, Feb. 15 and 16. Headquarters will be at the Genesee Hotel.

With so many promising new carnations in the field, the exhibition promises to exceed all previous ones in interest, and the attractiveness and practical value will be intensified by the competitions in the classes provided for specimen blooms of standard varieties. It is always good to see the best that can be done with existing sorts by other growers, and such an exhibition is apt to upset previously conceived ideas as to the limit of perfection to which certain varieties can be brought.

The essays and discussions at these meetings are always interesting and instructive. There seems more to discuss, more doubtful points to determine, and a livelier interest than at the meetings of any other trade organization. But far above all this is the practical demonstration of the progress in carnation culture seen in the exhibition hall.

The Carnation Society has proved an exceedingly valuable organization, and it is steadily improving the abundant opportunities presented it.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

It is to be presumed that most of the readers of The Florists' Review know that last March an attempt was made to organize the American Rose Society. Thirty or forty interested men met and went through the form of electing officers, adopting by-laws and a constitution, and further decided that two shows should be given in 1900, one in March, the other in June.

These men so started this society feeling that there is a necessity for a rose society devoted exclusively to the welfare of that flower. They therefore felt that they deserve the support, not nominal and subjective, but active and encouraging, of all who not only love the rose for the rose's sake, but especially of those who owe to that flower the foundation of whatever success they may have had in the florists' business.

Are they warranted in going on with this enterprise? This is a question addressed directly to you as one for whom the rose has a special interest and claim. You are one who makes his living by either growing and wholesaling, or buying and retailing roses. It is no good to say that the rose is only a part of your stock. It always has been and always will be your one great standby. You have it, like the poor, always with you. No other flower is like it.

The chrysanthemum is the flower of a day; it is showy, but its perfume is not attractive; it has only color, form, and size. The carnation is sweet, has color and form, but not size. Each has its own society, its own followers, its own advocates.

The rose has color, form, size, and fragrance. Has been with us for years; the dear people buy it, want it, call for it, will have it, and it has heretofore had no adherents willing to devote time, money, energy, and attention to urging its claims to improvement and advancement (I am speaking only for America).

Are you willing this state of affairs should continue? Do you want to desert this old, tried, and true friend? Are you going to sit calmly down and permit the buyers to be refused roses, and be compelled to take some other flower instead, because you are too lazy, inert, or careless of your own best interests to move at a critical time, to turn in and make a success of this society? I do not believe you are or can be so blind to your own advantage.

It is not the paltry sum for dues that will make a success of this society, but it is the encouragement of your names and your presence at the meetings and at the shows. If you want anyone else to take an interest in your undertakings you must show your own interest for it, and this is what I want to impress upon you. You are in the florists' business for success, and not for amusement. You need to widen your scope of the business and do everything within your power to keep its lines from being contracted or limited. Has it ever struck you what an advantage it would be if you could double your sales of any one flower or plant? Then what greater good can you do your business than to make the rose so popular that two blooms may be sold, two plants put out, where now one is?

This can only be accomplished by your individual aid, uniting all efforts of all at interest. Get at the public by bringing to their notice that you are working, and this you can best do through the channel of the American Rose Society. I beg of you to consider your own interests.

This year the society will meet in New York. It will depend upon you where it meets if ever again. Will you let it die, or will you give it your support by your presence and by your exhibits? With you it rests, and with you alone. Respectfully yours,

BENJAMIN DORRANCE,
Pres. Am. Rose Society.

GAS IN FLORAL STORES.

I would like to inquire in your paper if burning gas in a florist's store is injurious to plants? Our new store is fitted with gas, and plants do not keep as well as in the other store, where we used electric light. N.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

About now your geraniums that were shifted from 2 to 3-inch pots after New Year's will be grown sufficiently for you to take a cutting off the top and leave them just as good a plant. A good, experienced hand should handle the little plants and do the cutting, as all plants do not afford a cutting, and where stock is not very scarce we "stop" them all, but study the plant first and the cutting next. It is no use cutting the plants so low that you leave no stem to break, so we cut the plant off, leaving it the right length, with two or three eyes to break and make a bushy plant, and this with the great majority will give you a cutting that will make a good plant by end of May.

There is no need of putting these cuttings in the sand; they are better potted in 2-inch pots at once with good ordinary sifted loam. Be sure to get the soil well firmed around the base of the cutting. Give one good watering and then keep them on the dry side till they make roots. On a light bench in a night temperature of 50 degrees you will not lose 2 per cent, and these make better plants than those propagated in the sand.

The cutting bed should not be idle just now, as it is an excellent time to propagate any of our soft wooded plants that are wanted for summer use.

Vase Plants.

There are two plants that we use largely for boxes and vases and propagate them in September, viz., the variegated and green striped vinca, and the Abutilon vexillarium. The vinca is one of our great essentials for this use. We have kept them in 2-inch pots up to now and as soon as possible after this we shift them into 3 and 3½-inch pots. They make a great growth towards spring, and as it is entirely the foliage that you grow them for, the soil should be rich.

We always find room for these plants along the edge of a carnation or rose bench. There would be properly strong objection to doing this in fall and mid-winter, but with the strength of the plants in the bench at this time and the little harm that a slight oversupply of warm water would do, there is no harm done. This is not the ideal way to treat roses and carnations, but I am sure that the profit on the plants that you can stand on the edges of growing crops will compensate ten-fold for the little harm that is done.

Hanging Baskets.

We believe that hanging baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri, where baskets are at all desirable, will be more sought after than any other kind. The "vine" or drooping part of the growth is about all there is to a basket; flowering plants soon perish, and what is there equal to this hardy, vigorous plant? I prefer the wire basket lined with green wood moss to any other, and far better for the welfare of the plants than either the wood or earthenware baskets. There is yet time to plant three or four good plants of Sprengeri in a 10, 11 or 12-inch basket and make good plants by end of May. The soil should be a strong loam, at least a third of manure with a good liberal addition of bone dust. The asparagus is the rankest of feeders and there can be no addition to the soil when once in the basket.

Bulbs.

Tulips and daffodils brought in now make the finest of flowers. They yet want a little skill in handling, but no such hot box as was needed a month ago; a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees, with a slight shade, brings them on in the best condition. A few Dutch hyacinths in pots should be brought in every week.

You might start some bulbs of tuberous rooted begonias if you wish to have some fine plants for growing in pots, but for the bedding plant crop we prefer to wait till the middle of March and then start them in flats of sand, and by the time they need putting in 3 or 4-inch pots the hotbeds are ready. There is no place like the hotbed for these handsome begonias, because they not only grow freer, but you can harden them off by removing the sash for the last two weeks. We noticed in our beautiful Forest Lawn Cemetery that the neatest and prettiest vase there last summer (and the entire season) was a 20-inch vase of these begonias; of course nothing else with it. It need not and should not have anything mixed with it. This vase was shaded by trees from 9 a. m. till 4 p. m. In a vase without shade they are not a success, but in the broad sun, planted out in the flower garden, they are magnificent and a change from so much geranium.

Dahlias.

If you trade calls for dahlias, it is a good time now to prepare for propagation. Place the clump of roots on the bench on an inch of soil or sand and scatter a little earth or leaf mould among the tubers. Very soon a number of growths will start, and when three or four inches long and cut at a joint, they root readily. I prefer to put each cutting in a 2-inch pot of sandy soil and plunge the pot in bottom heat, and then the roots are not disturbed; but you can root them in the ordinary propagating bench just as well. Cutting at a joint, however unimportant with many plants, is of the greatest importance with the dahlia.

WM. SCOTT.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Traffic for the first five days of last week was slow and growers were in despair about the promised season of activity. But on Saturday a much better demand gave them a hope they may be happy yet.

Not only are trade waves moving in small ripples, but collections are getting harder and harder as the season advances. Retailers in many cases pay slowly, passing the blame along to their customers, claiming non-payment of Christmas bills. There are also a few within easy telephone call of whom fears are felt of ever being able to cash up. Things are surely wrong.

Goods have not been plentiful and a decent sort of a demand would have easily drained all the wholesale establishments at any moment during the week, and as it was there was no great drug of anything but Scott carnations. The Scott has been a statesman in past years and an authority on financial matters, but it looks as if the conjure were gone from the name. Buyers do not want it if they can get "Joost." Still, many good Scotts are coming in, and it does not seem just to turn down so stalwart a warrior. But many of our best carnation growers have a "dark horse" seedling or two which they are feeding and currying up for the race, in hopes it may be worthy the name of some banker's wife.

Roses have actually been scarce all the week, especially cheaper ones for funeral work, consequently one or two grades at the foot of the class have disappeared for the time, having been absorbed by grades worth a little more money.

News Notes.

Not much in the line of news. A new store on Portland street, and a tip from morning papers that John Husband, of Cambridgeport, cannot make his books balance for lack of assets or four figures, sums it about all up. One little matter that should have been spoken of last week may be of interest. One of the Jew street men in making gesticulations while arguing for lower prices at the co-operative market, hit the opposing salesman three or four times in the eye, seriously injuring it either to look at or with. To offset the playfulness the judge prescribed $15 and costs. This probably cures his case and may have an effect on two or three more incipient cases.

But we have now had three or four specimen days of something like wintry weather, which are probably accountable for shortage in flower output. Thermometers have been registering from four to eight degrees above zero. Sky June-like and not a breath of Boston's famed east wind for many moons.

GREENHOUSES OF MR. GEO. M. KELLOGG.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the greenhouses of Mr. George M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo., one of the largest plants west of the Mississippi. The greenhouses cover four and a half acres of at the conventions of the S. A. F. and has for several years served on its executive committee. He is quiet and unostentatious, but that he possesses push and business judgment is evidenced by the success he has attained in his profession.

BUFFALO.

Our very severe cold spell has passed away and the sun, which had been in hiding for two weeks, seems the better for the rest, for he is much stronger than he was. Business all around seems a little better and flowers are in abundance to meet it.

The wholesale mart of W. F. Kastling is the best place to feel the pulse of the day's trade. As he sits in Russia leather arm chair in his model office, with his clerks and stenographers to the right and left, he has a good view of the florists or their men passing to the rear for their supplies, and should now be turned energetically into account. That little gem of a Christmas greeting designed by Mr. Long and bought by W. J. Palmer & Son, and possibly by a few other florists throughout the country, has hardly ever been equaled. It was a poinsettia, perfect in form and color of leaf and bract, a colored photograph, and makes gaudy lithographs look like common rhymesters by the side of the warm and glowing fancies of W. K. Harris.

The Carnation Convention.

There is no lack of interest in the coming convention. A sub-committee, consisting of W. Scott, C. Keitsch and W. A. Adams, has the arrangements of the exhibition hall, and I can promise there will be plenty of room and light and attention. Mr. C. Keitsch is superintendent of the hall, and exhibitors will please apply to him for location of ground and contain 140,000 square feet of glass. The place is devoted entirely to the production of cut flowers, which are disposed of at his wholesale store in Kansas City, and the business has grown by leaps and bounds since it was established in a small way in 1885. In 1899 the sales amounted to over $27,000, having more than doubled in four years.

Mr. Kellogg's plant is still expanding and he is planning to erect five more houses, each 30x250, the coming summer. He has 100 acres of land and a beautiful home, handsomely furnished.

That Mr. Kellogg is public spirited as well as a successful business man is shown by the fact that he is building a handsome structure in Pleasant Hill, to be known as the Kellogg Opera House, Library and Gymnasium, the auditorium of which will be devoted only to really educational and elevating entertainments that will benefit the community. The building is 50x88 feet and the auditorium will have a seating capacity of 650, though 1,000 persons may be seated by using extra chairs.

Mr. Kellogg is a regular attendant

Billy can tell by the red tickets that are rapidly being placed on the spindle whether it is a good day with the stores or otherwise.

Speaking of florists' supplies, comparatively few of the local trade penetrate to the sanctuary (its correct descriptive name would be art studio) of Daniel B. Long, in the Howard block, on Washington street. Mr. Long and his art photographs are widely known, but not as generally as they deserve to be. An hour spent among his thousands of art studies is most interesting, but will only show you a fraction of them. We do not see any such groupings of flowers elsewhere; they may exist, but we don't believe in any form where at a moderate price you can obtain a truly natural and artistic study in some familiar flower. There are designs to suit every conceivable taste and purpose, from the backs of playing cards to the covering of the family Bible.

While many of Mr. Long's creations are used entirely outside the horticultural press, it seems to me that he is too much absorbed in the artistic part of his business, and the long, tedious hours and great outlay of money their exhibit. The Genesee hotel, either American or European plan, is next door and will be headquarters. An excellent $2.00 a day American house, "The New Gruener," is within half a block and the well known Tift house is removed but one block. The Genesee and Tift are both from $2.50 to $4.00, American plan.

There is not likely to be a great deal from local growers, but we do look for a very large exhibit and we hope attendance. The local club can take care of any flowers arriving on the 14th, as we have secured the hall for three days. As before stated, the local men are becoming enthusiastic and for those who have never seen the society's annual exhibition, I can assure them it will be a revelation.

Mr. Dennis O'Connell tells me he will take as active a part in the proceedings as time will allow, but he is at present preparing a paper to be read before the Hibernian Society, entitled, "The psychological phenomena ensuing from the vibrations of the tympanum on the convolutions of the left brain hemisphere in case of a Boer defeat."

A Business Change.

It was given out in a contemporary that W. Scott was giving up his down town store in March next. I was not aware that this little item would crop out, but now it has, will say as the one chiefly concerned that I look forward to the consummation of the evacuation of 546 Main street with much pleasure next month. As the patriarch of the business in this city, W. J. Palmer, remarked in his homely good sense: "W. S. is coming to his senses at last." Yes, at last, unfortunately after thousands of dollars have been poured into a rat hole; but there are no regrets, the sun is rising higher every day, and when you have a nice store in the residence part of the city, with a lot of greenhouses at your back and it's your own property and you can fill your orders better in every way with a fourth of the expense, what do you want with an expensive store down town?

I had occasion to remark that I thought the stores in Baltimore were too much huddled together in the very heart of the city. It was presumption on my part to criticise another city, but now I am going to do just what I preached.

W. S.

NEW YORK.

Business in general is very good. Most of the florists have been and are very busy. We hear very few complaints; all seem to agree that, as compared with last year, there is little to growl about. New York is a place where anything good seldom goes begging, whether it be plants or cut flowers. The quality of both flowering and decorative plants seen in the stores at present is scarcely good enough for this great city, and it is safe to say if better stock were obtainable more business could be done.

Good large palms are scarce and high in price, too much so, and ferns seem to be merely grown in benches, shoved into pots and put into dwelling houses, only to cause dissatisfaction. As to cut flowers, many growers depend on Roman hyacinths, paper whites and such stock, and wonder why they can't get rich. We suppose it's because folks are very unobliging in not dying quick enough.

Anton Schultheis has been appointed a member of the school board for the Borough of Queens, New York City. We'd like to see him ruler of that laager.

Just at the last moment we hear a rumor that Jimmie Neal committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid in Central park February 5. Neal was well known in the flower business here. In 1884 he had a very prosperous business in the Bowery, which was then a fine location in trade. It may be said that he was the originator of the "crape pulling" method of getting orders. We know many remember him with regret, both here and in Chicago, where he once ran a store, but 'tis good to be charitable, and death should be a shield to the unfortunate, so wipe out the scores.

Bowling at the alleys tonight took the form of practice for the match in Hoboken Wednesday night. Following are the scores:

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business of late has been fairly good. The demand has been even and steady, no great rush at any particular time. Still, flowers are not overplentiful, and first class stock has been scarce. Commission men report good shipping orders, but can't fill them all, as home trade is using nearly all that comes in.

The two groundhogs at Forest Park came out on Friday last and saw their shadows, so the growers are looking for six more weeks of bad weather, and the chances are that stock will remain scarce and the prices up.

Prices.

Prices are still up, but not so high as last week, and stock is coming in better. Good first class Beauties are out of the question, and the few that come in are of second class quality and sell from $10 to $20 per 100. The best stock in Meteors, Brides, and Maids sells from $8 to $12; seconds, $5 and $6. Perles and Wootons, $4 and $5; seconds, $2 and $3. Carnations are about the same as last week. Not any too many in, but enough to go around, and they sell from $2 to $4 per 100 for the best; some poorer ones go at $1.50. All colors seem to have a good demand and nearly all the stock that comes in is first class. Mr. J. W. Dunford, of Central, Mo., is sending in a fine lot; so is Henry Aue. Frank Fillmore's Flora Hills are very fine. Romans and paper whites not so plentiful as they were, and bring $3 for the best; valley very fine at $4; callas, $10 and $12; Harriell, $12.50; freesia, $1.50 to $3. Violets seem plentiful and are extra fine in quality; Californias are 40 cents, double, the same; small singles, 25 cents; smilax is selling better at $15.

Notes.

The euchre tickets are selling rapidly, and from the looks of things it will be a fine affair, as the best class of people are calling for tickets. One hundred prizes donated by the florists will be offered. The club expects to make handsomely, as the expenses will be small. This money will be used to pay the indebtedness incurred at our late show.

John M. Jordan, the well known florist, died Monday morning, Feb. 5, at 12:05 o'clock, after a lingering illness of nearly two years. Mr. Jordan, who was in his seventy-first year, was widely known by nearly every florist in the land, being at one time president of the Society of American Florists. The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 7, at 2 p. m. The local florist club, of which Mr. Jordan was a life member, will attend in a body.

John Young, the head of the firm of C. Young & Sons Co., who has been sick the past week, is out again and looking as well as ever. This accounts for John not bowling last Monday night.

Otto Koenig is a happy father. It's a girl, so Uncle Julius reports. Congratulations are in order.

George M. Kellogg, president of the Maplewood Cut Flower and Plant Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo., is building an opera house, library, and gymnasium, to cost $15,000. The building, which will be opened to the public on Easter Day, will be known as the Kellogg.

Miss Alice Cuming, daughter of Mr. Cuming, one of the superintendents of Tower Grove park, had a narrow escape from drowning while skating last Friday at Clayton.

Frank Fillmore reports that he has not resigned from the Bowling Club, having missed only two Monday nights. "Only a little rheumatics. Why, I am as young as any of you, and you may look for me to break the record during the February series."

A big fire swept four blocks in the business section on Sunday morning. Among the firms burned out were the well known seed firms of Schisler-Cornell Seed Co. and the Plant Seed Co. Schisler-Cornell Seed Co.'s loss will reach $25,000 and the Plant Seed Co. about $20,000.

Bowling.

At the bowling club's alleys last Monday night six members rolled five games. The rolling was only fair, although some good games were rolled. The scores were as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	tot.	av.
C. A. Kuehn..	154	148	155	125	184	766	153
C. C. Sanders..	146	170	137	134	176	763	152

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Roses are a shade more plentiful and therefore a shade easier in price, though quotations are practically unchanged. The carnation situation is about the same as last week—an abundant supply with many lots containing a considerable proportion unfit for shipping. On Monday the violet demand was brisk and the supply was well taken care of, but on Tuesday demand fell off and the stock moved slowly. The outlook for violets is good, though, and St. Valentine's day is near at hand. The demand for violets on Valentine's day increases every year.

White flowers are at present in best demand and few good whites fail to find a buyer. The Armour funeral last week used up large quantities of fine stock, but only extra grades were used.

Lily of the valley had been moving slowly, but last Saturday and Monday the accumulated stock was well cleaned up, though at low prices, some going at as low as $1.50 to $2.00 a hundred. None of this was in shipping order and first class valley now brings $4.00.

Klehm's Novelty tulips are now appearing in quantity at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s and they will have a large and continuous supply for some time.

Bassett & Washburn, McKellar & Winterson, E. C. Amling, Peter Reinberg and other dealers all report shipping trade as brisk.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club seven new members were elected, as follows: Thos. G. Williams (Mr. Rudd's new foreman), W. Schmitz, J. A. Sikuta, E. Rosen, O. Bach, J. Algots and Jos. Zwick.

The members congratulated each other on the success of the recent carnation meeting and the committee's report was accepted.

A communication was received from the Horticultural Society expressing its satisfaction with the action taken by the club to insure good competition at the next annual show.

Several proposed changes in the by-laws were read and these will come up for action at the next meeting. And at the next meeting a special order will be a discussion as to the advisability of inviting the S. A. F. to hold its convention in Chicago in 1901.

A committee was appointed to arrange for a bowling contest to which the members' ladies are to be invited.

Mr. Rudd told of the hospitality of the New York club to the executive committee of the S. A. F. and of the valuable information he had acquired while on Manhattan Island. He also mentioned the "height of hospitality" shown by the Philadelphians in placing a figure 1 in front of the scores

Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material.

This with us means the best growth of Cypress Lumber and the best grade of that growth; and from this grade all the sap—bright sap, which only experts can detect—as well as stained sap, knots and other defects cut out. Others do not equal our quality if they do beat our prices. It is not hard to see the reason: You can not buy gold dollars at fifty cents each. Experienced growers know that the best is not too good and cheapest in the long run.

....Flower Seeds for Florists....

We are the Largest Growers of Flower Seeds of any American seedsmen, both at FORDHOOK FARMS, where large areas of flowers are planted in the open ground and where greenhouses and protected frames are devoted to the finest Florists' flowers, and by our contract growers in the most favorable locations of California and other States. Not only are all these grown under our personal inspection, but frequent visits to the leading growers of Europe, combined with the most complete trials at FORDHOOK FARMS, where all our strains are tested each season in comparison with strains from other sources, enable us to know that our stocks of choice Florists' flowers are unsurpassed. They are equaled only in a few instances by specialists growing single varieties.

Both in Europe and America there are noted specialists growing a single variety of flower under the most favorable conditions and our extended trials enable us to select the finest of these special products for our customers.

In the descriptive headings of the different flowers will be found suggestions as to the best varieties to plant for cut-flowers and to grow for flowering and ornamental potted plants for retail sales. We are glad to assist our customers at any time in the selection of the most suitable varieties for the above purposes, and shall cheerfully answer any inquiries in this line, from the experience gained in our extensive trials and familiarity with the cut-flower markets of Philadelphia and New York.
We would request, however, that such inquiries be written separately from the order to secure prompt attention, as under our system the orders are filled at once on receipt and the answers to questions are somewhat delayed when written in the order.

It is hardly necessary for us to refer to the complete assortments of SWEET PEAS, PANSIES and NASTURTIUMS offered by us, having so long held the leading position in these specialties. We can equally recommend our grand strains of ASTERS, BALSAMS, BEGONIAS, CINERARIAS, COLEUS, CYCLAMEN, DIANTHUS, GLOXINIA, HE-LIOTROPE, HOLLYHOCK, MIGNONETTE, PETUNIA, PHLOX, POPPIES, CHINESE PRIM-ROSES, STOCKS, SALVIA and VERBENAS, all of which are of the finest types and richest colorings, and especially desirable for Florists' planting.

All Flower Seeds are tested thoroughly both for vitality and trueness to type—just as thoroughly as are our Vegetable Seeds. There are so many "cheaply grown" California and European Flower Seeds upon the market that some of our prices may seem high—when for the quality they are really moderate. Florists will find it more profitable to pay cash for BURPEE'S SEEDS, rather than to buy upon long credit, even at lower prices.

PHILADELPHIA.

The florists of this city report a perceptible change for the better in business the past week and a busy February is predicted. The majority feel they are in a position to appreciate an improvement as business has been exceptionally dull since the holidays.

Entertainments and balls have been quite numerous the past week, using up considerable material in the way of cut flowers and decorative stuff, and most of the florists have had no reason to complain.

Prices range about as follows: Beauties, $1 to $6 per dozen; Brides and Maids, $4 to $12 per 100; Kaiserins, Meteors and Golden Gates, $4 to $10; Perles, $3 to $6; Gontiers, $3 to $5; Morgans, $3 to $8. Carnations, ordinaries, $1 to $1.50; fancies, $2 to $3; hyacinths, valley and narcissus, $3 to $4; cattleyas, $50; cypripediums, $15; tulips, $3 to $4; violets, single 25 to 50 cents, double 50 cents to $1; mignonette, $3 to $4; callas, $8 to $12; asparagus, $50; adiantum, $1; smilax, $15.

The horses of Chas. Fox, Jr., and Julius Wolf, Sr., ran away last week, smashing the wagons and injuring Mr. Wolf's horse so badly that it had to be killed.

The so-called cut flower hustlers gave a "smoker" the past week that was quite an event. All present report a jolly time.

We regret to have to report the death of Thomas James, an employe of Pennock Bros., of pulmonary trouble. He entered the employ of the firm when a mere boy in 1876 and had been with them steadily until his death. He was a faithful employe and was much respected by all who knew him. R.

OAKDALE, N. Y.—Seymour Burr, whose greenhouse was recently destroyed by fire, estimates his loss at $1,000, with no insurance. He contemplates rebuilding.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.—A joint meeting of the horticultural societies of Springfield, Holyoke, and Northampton was held here Jan. 23, with 100 people in attendance. Addresses were made by E. P. Copeland, Prof. Ganong, W. T. Hutchins, G. H. Sinclair, and A. Mieliez.

THE Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., are sending out some fine blooms and rooted cuttings of carnations. This firm is probably the only one in the country growing carnations exclusively, the entire place being devoted to the Divine flower. Their new trade list has just been issued.

A DOUBLE CATTLEYA.

We have received from Mr. A. Mc-Adams, Chicago, a bloom of Cattleya Trianae having five sepals and four petals. There are two columns, one inside and the other outside the throat and it is evidently two flowers grown together, though all the parts are not duplicated. The lip is richly colored and the general effect is very pleasing, there being little suggestion of a monstrosity. It is certainly very interesting.

PITTSBURG.

Cut flower trade is about the same as last reported—spotty, with occasional large funeral orders, creating more demand for white flowers. Roses are still scarce; carnations more plentiful, but a large percentage of them are of the lower grades.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. are handling a large lot of carnations, especially Saturdays, which is main market day in both cities.

Wm. F. Lauch, of Carrick, is sending in some good Red Jackets, a variety not much grown hereabouts.

The growers all complain of the Harbison; more disease than last year. Several of the growers have discarded them entirely, as the loss amounts to 40 or 50 per cent, besides the labor of caring for them four or five months.

There will be about five or six go from here to the Buffalo meeting. Probably they will have some carnation blooms to exhibit.

We are getting very few sunny days this winter, which probably accounts for the scarcity of roses.

Several of us have received Scott's Manual and are well pleased with it.
BAER.

OCEANIC, N. J.

At the regular meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society one proposal for membership was received.

It was decided to hold the third annual ball February 22. A committee of five was appointed to take the matter in hand.
B.

CORRECTION.

In the advertisement of Peter Reinberg in our last issue the prices of rotted cuttings of carnations Frances Joost, Evanston, and Jubilee should have been $2.50 per 100 and $20.00 per 1,000, instead of $2.00 per 100 and $15.00 per 1,000. The prices are correctly given in the adv. in this issue.

M'KINNEY, TEX.—Geo. W. Taylor has completed another 24-foot house and will be a wholesale and retail dealer in roses, small shrubs, and tropical plants.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75.

HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants at 75c per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

NEW CARNATIONS...

FLOWERING FOURTH YEAR.

"Lady Minto."

Flower 2½ to 3 inches. Pure white ground and not too heavily penciled red. Fragrant. Free and continuous bloomer. Good calyx and long, stiff stem.

This handsome flower is a favorite, sells on sight and will be found in the front rank of the variegated sorts.

"Lady Van Horne."

Unquestionably of the purest shade of cerise pink, and magnificently brilliant when seen by artificial light.

A perfectly symmetrical flower, 2½ to 3 inches, on long, stiff, wiry stem, and no bursting of calyx. Early and continuous. An ideal flower in every respect.

Carnation

Seedling of Lizzie McGowan and Mme. Diaz Albertini,
in its fifth year.

The flowers are large, finely shaped and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong, after the style of Mme. Albertini, and none bursting; the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted cuttings ready February 1st, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, or $70 per 1000. Cash with order. We shall prepay the express where money accompanies the order. Orders filled in rotation.

NEW LIGHT PINK CARNATION Genevieve Lord

Peerless in its class. The coming light pink. As a commercial variety it will score its greatest triumph. As an exhibition variety it will take care of itself. Its reputation is already made. We recommend it to you as being first-class in every way. It has won highest honors wherever exhibited. In a word it is the light pink par excellence. Better than Scott in its palmiest days. There will be no attempt to over-propagate it. First come, first served. Send for complete description.

JACKSON, O.—Trade has this season been better than usual in this locality.

CALVERT, TEX.—Fire did some little damage to the seed warehouse of Gibson Bros. Jan. 4. Loss covered by insurance.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—The wife of H. Dale, the well known rose grower, died Jan. 3. Mr. Dale has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the trade.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The florists who have been carrying on a "violet war" have got together, buried the hatchet, and put the price of violets back to the normal level. And a petition has been prepared asking all florists to close at 7 p. m., except on Monday and Saturday evenings.

SEED STORES BURNED.

In the great fire at St. Louis last week several of the leading seed firms were burned out with very heavy losses. Details will be found in our St. Louis notes in this issue.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

For several weeks the supply was very short and prices were up almost to holiday figures. The market has now eased a trifle, though roses still remain scarce, especially Beauties, which are practically not obtainable. Carnations are in fair supply and violets are plentiful, as are Romans, daffodils and freesias. Adiantum is scarce and smilax plentiful.

Notes.

W. A. Kennedy is cutting some fine carnations in the newer varieties and also some fancy Golden Gate roses.

Nic. Zweifel also has a fine crop of carnations coming in and his violets average with the best in the market.

C. C. Pollworth Co. have a fine lot of azaleas coming in for Easter.

Charles Zipnick is cutting some fine mignonette and also has a bench of pansies, which bring good returns.

John Dunlop and Archie Middlemass were on the sick list for some time, but are now both around again.

On invitation of O. Sylvester the florist bowlers visited Oconomowoc, where Mr. Sylvester arranged to pit the florists against a local team. The visiting florists were met at the depot, where a tally-ho awaited them, and were driven to the grounds of P. D. Armour, where Otto Speidel, the gardener in charge, showed the visitors about the place. Mr. Speidel has a 65-foot house of Lady Campbell violets which are one mass of flowers. His cut out of this house last season was 136,000. Although Mr. Speidel was busy looking after the icemen, he said that would cut no ice, and that he would be on deck to bowl with the florists.

From Armour's the party drove to Aug. Schueneman's, whose range of houses, mostly in carnations and violets, were found in excellent shape.

Mr. Sylvester then directed the footman to inform the driver to proceed to his place, where, under his guidance, the party was shown through his houses. Mr. Sylvester grows a fine lot of carnations, violets and a large variety of bedding stock. Violets were discussed here, as Mr. Sylvester was a recognized king for several seasons with this flower.

The party was then conducted to his residence, where Mrs. Sylvester had prepared a sumptuous dinner, and the crowd was hungry enough to eat almost anything. One of Mr. Sylvester's largest turkeys disappeared like a bunch of American Beauties at Xmas.

After dinner the party proceeded to the bowling alleys, where, after a little preliminary practice, the game began. Mr. Sylvester was elected captain and Mr. Speidel pinch, and the regulars were made up as follows: C. C. Pollworth, Wm. Edlefsen, Nic Zweifel, W. A. Kennedy, A. Klokner. The florists lost the first game, but this was laid to the big dinner. The next we won, but lost the third by 7 pins. Mr. Speidel's attempt to win out this game was about as successful as the British in holding Spion Kop. Sylvester, Pollworth and Edlefsen rolled 198, 185, 166, respectively, but the other fellows went us a few better. Mr. Sylvester now thinks the town has grown smaller and that the whole population are bowlers. A return game will be given in the near future.

Bowling.

There is a movement on foot to resurrect the Florists' Club. At a recent session the following scores were made:

	1	2	3	4	5	av.
C. C. Pollworth	166	174	214	169	187	182
H. Hunkel	142	168	196	189	166	172
F. Holton	187	163	158	181	148	168
W. Edlefsen	163	145	139	157	171	155
N. Zweifel	140	141	138	155	160	147
A. Klokner	147	140	133	129	138	135
W. A. Kennedy	131	123	152	121	148	135

On Thursday, February 1, the boys tried it again, with results as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5
Pollworth	142	148	154	177	181
Holton	129	117	162	124	172
Zweifel	149	168	149	123	133
Kennedy	133	116	108	128	137
Hunkel	181	145	171	150	172
Edlefsen	100	143	152	123	129

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business much the same as last week, with the exception of a few who report themselves as fairly busy. All kinds of stock is plentiful, except American Beauties and Maidenhair fern. Outside chrysanthemums are becoming poorer in quality each day and a week or so more will see the last of them. Harrisii is coming in more plentiful and of better grade. The first double daffodils have made their appearance this week, but don't sell as well as the single varieties.

Prices.

American Beauties, $3.50 to $4; Bridesmaids, Brides and Meteors, 50 cents to $1; Perles, 35 to 50 cents; Cecil Brunners, 12½ cents per doz. Carnations: Ethel Crocker, 75 cents; Schwerin, Flora Hill and mixed fancy, 50 cents; Bradts and Gold Nugget, 35 to 50 cents; Portia and Scott, 25 cents per doz. Chrysanthemums, 3 dozen for $1; Harrisii, $3 to $3.50; lily of the valley, 35 to 50 cents per doz.; single and double daffodils, $1.50 per 100; freesias, $1 per 100; paper whites, 50 cents per 100; violets, Princess of Wales $1, California 50 cents, double 75 cents per doz.

Various Notes.

Shannahan, on Powell street, is at the head of a movement to drive the fakirs from the streets, and a petition is being signed by the storekeepers to have the licenses increased from $10 per quarter to $10 per month, and if passed may have the desired effect of clearing the street corners of most of the dagos. It is also a fact and much regretted that a few of our Greek and Italian storekeepers keep a small army of men and boys continually on the streets, and these may be classed as the worst of the lot. Give us any kind of opposition in the world but the dago storekeeper; he is hard to compete with and a detriment to the business.

E. W. McLellen met with an accident a few days ago, being kicked by a horse, and was confined to his bed for two days.

Mme. Prentice did the table decoration at the Hotel Metropole on New Year's day for the Tucker-Macdonald wedding. The ground floor was beautifully decorated with smilax, asparagus, palms, ferns, etc. The bride's table was large and round and was more conspicuous from the fact that the other tables were the small tete-a-tete kinds. At the head of the larger table, where the bride sat, two hearts linked together were made of Duchess roses and finished off with a true lovers' knot of broad pink satin ribbon. At the other end of the table an open wreath was made of Bridesmaid roses. The effect was very pretty, as the roses were cut with plenty of foliage and arranged without any stiff effect. Cut glass bowls of different sizes were set here and there around the table and filled with Bridesmaid roses and Sprengerl sprays. Five cut glass candelabras were used, three clusters and two singles, and were topped off with the daintiest and most original shades made of pink French paper (the work of the decorator), and in trimming up the candelabras roses were arranged with careless effect. Pink tulle was tied around the base of the largest bowl and around in and out three-quarters around the table, finishing at one of the candelabras with a soft bow. One of the chief points of merit in the decoration was that there was nothing directly in the center of the table, every guest being visible from any point. A large square of real lace was laid over the cloth in the center. On one corner was placed a bowl of roses with the graceful sprays of Sprengerl trailing over, and nothing else to detract from the beauty of the lace but scattered rose petals which seemed to have fallen from a large bunch arranged in the chandelier above, some of the roses having been pulled off to give that effect. The bride's cake was laid in a bed of roses. A few choice roses scattered here and there and tucked in among the tulle put the finishing touches on, and the "tout ensemble" was something not easily forgotten. J. N.

HEATING.

Will the following amounts of 4-inch cast iron pipe heat a greenhouse with 800 square feet of glass, with wooden sides, to the degrees of heat indicated when the outside temperature is 20 degrees below zero?

Forty degrees, 211 ft.; 45 degrees, 236 ft.; 50 degrees, 263 ft.; 55 degrees, 291 ft.; 60 degrees, 322 ft.; 65 degrees, 354 ft.; 70 degrees, 389 ft.; 75 degrees, 428 ft.; 80 degrees, 470 ft.; or with 2-inch or 1½-inch pipe to equal the 4-inch pipe. J. J. L.

In answer to J. J. L.'s inquiry, relative to proportions of heating surface necessary to maintain given temperatures in greenhouse, I would say, assuming that the proportion of exposed wooden walls to the glass surface is as usually existing on ordinary greenhouses, the amount of pipe he suggests is liberal, and should maintain the desired temperatures very easily. If he decides to use 2-inch pipes, he will need one and six-tenths times as many lineal feet as of the 4-inch, and if 1½-inch pipes, about twice as many lineal feet as of the 4-inch. For ordinary greenhouse circulations, I would suggest 2-inch pipe in preference to 1½-inch. HENRY GIBBONS.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

The Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Florists' Publishing Co., Chicago. A reference book for commercial florists.

The author's first aim in preparing this work was to fill a long felt want among florists—a book describing the best plants commercially, with cultural advice founded on experience. Viewed in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details. But it need not be confined to circulation among florists and others commercially connected, although gardeners and amateurs need not expect in it a work exactly fitting their requirements. Rather judge it through the author's own words, i. e.: "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * they will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "from selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small index confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light, it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a condensation which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and thoroughly illustrating the subjects treated. Critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not made very obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Meehan's Monthly.

The American Carnation Society

THE BUFFALO CONVENTION.

The ladies parlor of the Genesee hotel was well filled when the first session of the annual convention was called to order. There were seventy-five or eighty from outside points and a host of Buffalo florists were present.

Mayor Diehl was on hand to welcome the visitors and said he wished to speak to them in the way he felt toward the flower in whose interests they had gathered together. He felt that the society was doing a grand work in creating a love for the beautiful and thereby making humanity better. He heartily welcomed all to the city of Buffalo, which he said was the sixth largest commercial city in the world. He urged all to come again next year and enjoy the beauties of the Pan-American Exposition.

Mr. J. N. May responded on behalf of the society. He spoke of the wonderful progress made by the city since the time the S. A. F. convention was held here, and to illustrate what the carnation had been doing in the meantime, he held up four carnations ranging from about an inch in diameter up to three and a half inches, the latter representing the standard of today. He was sorry he did not have the eloquence of Buffalo's "Great Scott," that he might fittingly respond to the welcome.

Mr. William Scott spoke a few words of welcome on behalf of the local club and intimated that the keys to the inner gates of the city had been placed in the hands of a committee who had been given large discretionary powers.

Secretary A. M. Herr read his report, as follows:

Lancaster, Pa., Feb. 15th, 1900.

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the American Carnation Society:

Your secretary begs leave to report, having issued the proceeding of the meeting held in Philadelphia, Pa., in due time and having mailed the same to all members not in arrears in dues.

The resolution of thanks to Prof. Arthur was printed and forwarded to every Experiment Station in the U. S. and a separate copy to a number of officials, state and otherwise.

Membership in the Society has remained about stationary, the few dropping out having been replaced by about an equal number of new members.

Registration has been pretty generally followed up by members and non-members, wherever a variety has been named with the view to introducing it to the trade, and thus quite a few cases of the duplication of names avoided. Respectfully submitted,

ALBERT M. HERR.

President W. P. Craig read his address, in which he extended the right hand of fellowship to the American Rose Society. He suggested a change in the scale providing a liberal number of points for the keeping qualities of the flowers. This latter brought out some little discussion, several speakers holding that it would be impossible to fairly score a flower on this point, even on the last day of the show, as some flowers would have traveled further than others. None doubted that keeping qualities were important and all felt that it would be well if it could be considered. The judges for the exhibition were elected by a general ballot, which resulted in the selection of Wm. Scott, W. N. Rudd and A. Graham as judges of seedlings, and J. M. Gasser, F. Burki and W. J. Palmer as judges in the general classes.

Among those present at the convention from outside points were the following: A. Herrington, E. Dailedouze, J. N. May, F. R. Pierson, C. B. Weathered, Alex. Wallace, New York; Robt. Craig, J. D. Elsiele, W. P. Craig, Walter Mott, Jno. A. Shellem, Jno. Kuhn, Robt. Kift, S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; Peter Fisher, Wm. Nicholson, W. J. Stewart, Boston; A. Graham, J. M. Gasser, H. A. Hart, A. Schmitt, Caspar Aul, F. W. Ziechmann, S. N. Pentecost, Guy Bate, Cleveland, O.; Geo. A. Rackham, R. Flowerday, F. Holznagle, J. F. Sullivan, F. H. Beard, Gus. Taepke, Jas. Taylor, John Carey, W. Breitmeyer, T. S. Brown, Detroit, Mich.; R. Witterstaetter, Wm. Sunderbruch, Mm. Murphy, Cincinnati; Henry Smith, Geo. F. Crabb, Wm. Hannah, Grand Rapids, Mich.; S. A. Baur, Erie, Pa.; E. G. Hill, J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; Geo. Bayer, Toledo, O.; T. C. Joy, Nashville, Tenn.; F. Dorner, Jr., Lafayette, Ind.; Robt. George, Painesville, O.; H. Weber, Wm. Weber, Oakland, Md.; Wm. Swayne, Kennett Square, Pa.; Albert M. Herr and wife, Lancaster, Pa.; L.

E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y.; W. T. Bell, John Bell, Franklin, Pa.; W. C. Rockwell, Bradford, Pa.; C. Hagenburger, C. Merkel, Mentor, O.; J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa.; F. Burki, Pittsburg, Pa.; Geo. E. Fancourt, Wilkesbarre, Pa.; E. Hippard, Youngstown, O.; O. P. Bassett, W. N. Rudd, J. D. Thompson, J. V. Merion, James Hartshorne, George Garland, G. L. Grant, Peter Reinberg, Henry Wietor, J. C. Vaughan and wife, J. S. Wilson, of Chicago; J. C. Rennison, Sioux City, Ia.; William Clark, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Geo. H. Bancroft, Cedar Falls, Ia.; J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.; John H. Dunlop, J. F. Miller, Toronto; H. Dale, Wm. Fendley, Brampton, Ont.; Wm. Gammage, London, Ont.; J. H. Taylor, C. W. Ward, C. Besold, New York; John Murchie, Sharon, Pa.

The exhibition was undoubtedly the grandest display of carnations ever made, being superior in several points to any previous display by the society.

A most striking feature was a vase of the huge blooms of "666," displayed by Dailedouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y., and which won the Lawson gold medal. It was referred to by one visitor as the chrysanthemum-carnation and its size warranted the title. In color it is a white, suffused with pink.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson, the Marquis, Genevieve Lord, Enquirer, Estelle and a host of other stars of the first magnitude were represented by huge vases of bloom.

Three-year certificates of merit were awarded to the following: Gov. Roosevelt (Ward), crimson, 93 points; No. "666" (Dailedouze), white, suffused pink, 89 points; Elinora (Witterstaetter), white, 89 points; Enquirer (Witterstaetter), pink, 88 points; Estelle (Witterstaetter) scarlet, 86 points; Mrs. Bertram Lippincott (Kuhn), pink, 86 points. Others exhibited in this class scored as follows: No. 110 (Weber), white, 83 points; pink seedling (H. A. Molatsch), 83 points; No. 30 (Weber), pink, 82 points; Opal (Witterstaetter), light pink, 81 points; Irene (Crabb & Hunter), pink, 80 points; Syracuse (Marquisee), pink, 76 points.

Preliminary certificates were won by No. 550 (Witterstaetter), white, 90 points; the Maine (Fisher), white, 88 points; Delight (Dailedouze), pink, 88 points; No. 100 (Dailedouze), white, 87 points. No. 11, white, shown by C. F. Baker & Son, scored 80 points.

The Cottage Gardens' Silver Cup was won by Gov. Roosevelt (Ward). The Chicago Carnation Co.'s cup was won by No. 3 (Dailedouze), light pink. The silver medal went to R. Witterstaetter, for Adonis, scarlet. The sweepstakes prizes went as follows: First, to Dailedouze Bros., with Mrs. Bradt; second, to R. Witterstaetter, with Enquirer; third, to R. Witterstaetter, with Adonis.

In the class for arrangements of carnations with foliage no awards were made. There were two entries, but the judges considered that they fell short of the present high standard of floral art and withdrew the cup.

In the general class R. Craig & Son were first for fifty crimson with Gomez, and second with Maceo. H. Weber & Son took first for 50 yellow with Pingree. Chicago Carnation Co., first for 100 variegated with Mrs. Bradt; E. G. Hill & Co., first for 25 dark pink with Leslie Paul; L. E. Marquisee, first for 100 light pink with The Marquis; E. G. Hill & Co. second with Ethel Crocker; Chicago Carnation Co. first for 100 crimson with Maceo; J. L. Dillon first for 100 white with Louise; Chicago Carnation Co. second for 100 scarlet with Jubilee; E. G. Hill & Co. second for 100 white variegated with J. Whitcomb Riley.

Next week we shall print some notes on other flowers seen at the exhibition.

A Discussion.

The question of changing the scale so as to cover keeping quality of the flowers brought out a long and interesting discussion. It was made quite evident that the scale could not be made to cover everything and that no judges could determine from the flower anything as to keeping qualities or freedom of bloom, those two very important matters. The point was made that the keeping quality of any flower depended a great deal on how and when it was cut, and Mr. S. A. Baur stated that flowers cut with a sharp knife would keep twice as long as those that were picked by breaking the stem. The matter was finally referred to a committee with instructions to revise the scale, or else provide some other way of determining the keeping qualities of the flowers of new varieties.

The express companies received a little attention. Mr. Hill said Mr. May had written a large number of letters to high officials of the company, with the only result that Mr. May had considerably improved his handwriting.

Mr. Peter Fisher not having prepared any paper on hybridizing, a discussion of the subject was invited. The several speakers agreed that good seedlings were largely the result of chance and that about all the hybridizer could do was to select good parents, get a large number of seedlings, and hope to get a few good ones out of the batch. Mr. Witterstaetter said he had records of over 27,000 seedlings from crosses, but his record had been of little assistance so far. He thought though, that it was well to depend upon the seed parent for blooming qualities and constitution, and believed that color was most largely influenced by the pollen parent. He could devise no rule or system to bring forth desired results. This was indorsed by Mr. Dorner, who said that you might cross two crimsons and get a white.

Mr. A. Herrington suggested that it would possibly be best for both the carnation and rose societies to hold their meetings in the same city at the same time. The suggestion was favorably received, and a committee appointed to confer with the officers of the rose society. Should this arrangement be carried into effect the attendance from outside points would surely exceed a hundred and thus insure getting a reduced rate from the railroads.

A committee was appointed to prepare a premium list for the next exhibition, this work having in the past fallen largely on the shoulders of the secretary. A number of the essays promised did not materialize, but the discussions that took their place were certainly just as valuable. Mr. Hartshorne's paper was received with interest and given the attention the subject deserved.

And now they talk of a carnation having an "air spaced calyx."

Next Year.

The society was honored by invitations from four different cities for next year, these being Indianapolis, Baltimore, Detroit, and Cleveland. A good deal of oratory was expended in favor of the various cities and written ballots were finally resorted to. Baltimore was selected after a warm canvass, receiving 33 votes, Indianapolis 24, Detroit 2, and Cleveland 6.

Indoor Planting.

The discussion of Mr. Hartshorne's paper brought out the fact that many good growers thought it was carrying matters to excess to keep the plants always indoors. While all favored early planting, the majority thought the plants should surely have the benefit of at least a few months' outdoor growth in the spring.

An important point that developed during the discussion was that the Dailedouze Bros. no longer use the side ventilators in their houses, finding that they induce too rapid evaporation. Mr. Ward said the evaporation was needed to keep the houses cool, but Mr. Dailedouze said that the free use of water on the walls to offset the evaporation was apt to sour the soil by an excess of moisture and to make the growth soft.

A pleasant side entertainment at the convention was an elaborate dinner tendered to thirty of his friends in the trade at the Hotel Iroquois on Thursday evening by Mr. J. D. Thompson, manager of the Chicago Carnation Co.

The menu was exceptionally good, and as most of the bright lights of the society were present, the flow of soul was fully in keeping with the menu and flow of liquids. It was a most enjoyable event.

GROWING CARNATIONS UNDER GLASS ALL SUMMER.

By JAS. HARTSHORNE.

[Read before the American Carnation Society at the Buffalo Meeting.]

What first induced me to try this method was the reading of some carnation notes by Mr. Edwin Lonsdale of Philadelphia, some five or six years ago, telling of the success he was having with certain varieties, notably Buttercup and Helen Kellar. I first tried it in a small way, planting about 100 or so of each variety, and on the first experiment secured blooms far superior to any that I had ever been able to produce from fall lifted plants. I became so convinced that I was on the right track that each year following I increased the quantity of plants for trial, so that now, the fifth season of my experiment with this method, we grow practically all our carnations indoors. I feel that we have passed the experimental stage, and can conscientiously recommend this method to any one who wants high grade carnations from September to July.

My understanding of growing carnations inside all summer and that of others regarding the matter undoubtedly makes the title of the subject a trifle misleading, as I do not think it practicable or advisable to keep the plants indoors entirely. They should be planted outside as early in the spring as possible. Plant close together in the rows, say about six or eight inches apart, and allow just enough room between the rows to work a hand cultivator. By July 1st, if you have attended faithfully to the pinching process, you will have nice bushy little plants. At this date, or as soon after as you can prepare your houses to receive them, they should be housed.

Allow me here to lay stress on the fact that the greatest enemy to successful indoor culture is red spider, and that the grower should thoroughly cleanse his houses of this pest before planting young stock in them. I would also advise giving the plants a good syringing before lifting, as some of the varieties get badly infested with spider in the field, at least we find it so in our locality. The houses should be shaded during planting, unless you can get a few days of cloudy weather, which is seldom likely at this season.

Treatment after housing is much the same as that ordinarily practiced, except that the details of culture demand greater carefulness. The walks, walls and surfaces underneath the benches should be well syringed to keep down the spider. If this is given close attention, as it should be, it will not be necessary to syringe the plants more than once in two or three weeks. If done early in the morning, I find it very beneficial, as it washes the dust off the plants and keeps the pores of the foliage open for action. It is also well to get the hose outside occasionally to wash the dust off the glass, as the more light the plants receive after they are established, the healthier and tougher will be their growth.

The soil should not be too rich, or it will cause a too soft and spindling growth. If the soil is naturally good, rotted sod, etc., it is best not to add any manure whatever. Superfluous manure is one thing in particular which must be guarded against to insure success, as with such a high temperature and a regular supply of moisture at the roots, the plants will grow fast enough without it. It means more labor feeding later in the season, but at the same time it is my belief, very essential for the health of the plants.

One of the principal drawbacks to growing inside is the baking and cracking of the soil, conditions peculiar to our soil as soon as it becomes dry after watering. Where this happens it makes a great deal more work cultivating the soil by hand as against using a cultivator outside; but to do away with so much of this extra labor, when scratching up the soil between the plants, I find it a good plan to leave a ridge or elevation of the soil between the rows, thus affording for the rows of plants a sort of gutter, where all the water should be applied and not allowed to run over the surface of the entire bed. It is necessary not to use a too strong force of water or it will wash the loose earth in heaps. The ridges of soil between the rows are intended also to act as a mulch for the roots, which is better for the health of the plant than a mulch of manure, unless the latter be very fine and minus nutriment.

The ventilators should be left open night and day until the temperature gets down to 40 degrees at night. It is quite important to give them the benefit of this low temperature, if it can be done before the blooms appear, which for our market would be about September 15th or October 1st, as it seems to give the plants a more vigorous growth, the foliage a nice bluish color, and the stems additional stiffness. As soon as the blooms appear, one can readily note the superiority of the flowers of inside stock to those from plants lifted only two or three weeks before. The former are in good demand at sometimes double the price of the latter, which are often harder to dispose of at any price owing to the large quantity of such stock in the market at this period.

I do not believe that as good blooms can be produced by field grown plants until about February 1st. At this date the out-door stock begins to catch up; but there are already gone four of the best months for marketing the product, and right here is where the indoor grown stock gains the advantage over the outdoor, and the real reason why I advocate indoor culture in preference to fall lifted plants. I notice that the majority of the growers around Chicago are planting a week or two earlier each year, so that now some of the most prominent growers are planting in July, and they keep making a better reputation each year for carnations.

To be as brief as possible, I might sum it up in this way: It requires more labor to care for plants grown inside, consequently it brings a higher cost on the product; but the grower will not have such a grassy growth of plants, thus enabling him to plant closer and to cut as many or more blooms from a given space than from field plants, and as I claim one can get a higher price for the blooms during at least a considerable portion of the four months already indicated, the additional receipts from the indoor method will be so much more than the extra cost of production as to still leave a very considerable balance in their favor.

CARNATION GENEVIEVE LORD.

We present herewith illustrations of blooms of this new pink carnation, which has been received with much favor wherever shown. It originated with H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., who have favored us with the following regarding its parentage:

"Genevieve Lord. A seedling of 1896. Edna Craig x Scott. Some seed was raised during the winter of 1895-96 on a few exceptionally healthy, vigorous plants of Edna Craig, which had been propagated from one particular plant, which seemed to be entirely free from the bacterial troubles peculiar to that variety. These few plants gave extra fine flowers on stems $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 feet in length, strong and stiff. Among the crosses made on these were several by Wm. Scott. Genevieve Lord was the best of these seedlings. It has retained the good characteristics of both parents. The long stems, large flower, and beautiful color are taken from the seed parent, while the continuous and free-blooming habit is derived from Scott. In growth and habit it is midway between the two. It is an exceptionally healthy and vigorous grower, and with us the most profitable pink carnation we have ever grown."

MOLES IN ROSE BEDS.

What means other than traps can I employ to get rid of moles in my solid rose beds? I do not seem to be able to catch the pests by means of a trap.

SUBSCRIBER.

In reply to Subscriber's inquiry will say that arsenic on a piece of meat inserted into the main runs may tempt them to nibble, and if they do it will surely kill them. In my own experience I have always used traps and have been able to keep the beds clear of them.

It is a great pity they do not confine their work to the space between the rows of plants, as they would then do small damage, but as it is they frequently lift many plants. The mole is a great insect destroyer and would be a benefit if it was not for the damage done in lifting plants.

In Holder's "Elements of Zoology" it is stated that a single mole is estimated to eat 20,000 insects in a year. One has been known to devour 432 maggots and 250 grubs in four days. Another 872 maggots and 540 grubs in twelve days. At another time two moles in nine days destroyed 341 grubs, 193 earth worms, 25 caterpillars and a mouse, its bones and skin. Subscriber might poison a mouse and put its remains in the mole run and thus get rid of two so-called enemies of the hard working florist.

BUILDING—VARIETIES TO GROW, ETC.

A polite inquiry comes from a rural district which reads something like this: "I got $200. How big a greenhouse can I have built for it? Has to run from south to north. And which is the best paying carnation for the New York market?"

I am not a pessimist—rather I like to look on the rosy side of all things—but to give any encouragement to this enterprise would be wicked. From the phraseology I judge that the correspondent means that he has $200—no more nor less. If he is wealthy and meant that he had that amount to squander on the greenhouse venture, then I would say that the sum named would almost dig and brick up a moderate sized stoke hole, which is a little more of a start than the man who proposed to make a large barrel, and all the capital or material he had to commence operations with was the bung hole.

If you have $200 and don't owe anything, you are a happy man; but don't go into horticulture just yet. If you have the ability to grow high-class flowers for the New York market, you should get a job (several people want you) and add some to your capital. Most of our successful men have begun in a small way, but not quite so small as that. The actual profits with those that have started on a large capital and small experience have been very little, if any, and there are any number of cases where the undertaking has been a complete financial failure. Yet if you have an uncle or mother-in-law who will loan you ten thousand dollars on "slow notes, payable at convenience," you might try. The distribution of wealth benefits the community at large.

Glass has dropped some, but iron and wood are still very high, and the most you could expect to build with $200 would be a house 10x20. It would be unwise to hazard giving any particular variety to grow for the New York market. Before the product of this establishment began to affect the market to any extent there will doubtless be newer and better varieties than we even have today. About aspect, a house of that size should be portable; then you could give it broadside to the east in the morning and move it every seven-teen minutes so that you got all the solar rays that were going that day.

W. S.

MUSCATINE, IA.—August Smith has purchased eight acres of land near North Mulberry street, upon which he intends to build greenhouses and establish a commercial business next summer.

SEDALIA, MO.—Gelven & Son, who have 5,000 feet of glass, built last fall, will add another house, 18x80 feet, in May. They report the business outlook as excellent.
